SUSPECT IS WELL-COVERED

Robbery suspect William Thomas Betzner, 22, on balcony, gives up to police after officers surrounded the area after the shooting of a woman in a food stand holdup in Los Angeles. No less than seven officers have their weapons trained on the suspect. Betzner was chased on foot in a running gun battle by an off-duty officer to the apartment house in his escape attempt.

Jet strikes power lines near OIA

ONTARIO — A Continental Airlines jet passenger plane struck some electrical lines near Etiwanda Avenue and the San Bernardino Freeway today while preparing to land at Ontario International Airport.

The airplane, a Boeing 707, was en route from Los Angeles International Airport to Ontario to pick up passengers for a scheduled flight to Chicago.

After the plane hit the electrical wires, it immediately returned to the Los Angeles airport, officials said. The three flight crew members and eight hostesses aboard weren't injured.

Officials said a wheel apparently struck the lines. The weather was reported to have been "real foggy" at the time of the incident. Damage to the plane was reported to be minor.

Passengers for Flight 88 were bused from Ontario to Los Angeles for another flight, officials said.

Members of the Federal Aviation Administration were at the scene this morning to make an investigation.

Southern California Edison Co. officials said the plane apparently struck a "skyline" on a high voltage tower and dropped it over 500,000-volt conductor lines. This static support line, which carries no power itself, is some 180 feet above the ground.

There were no interruptions in electrical service, officials said, but "dips"—brief flickers in lights—may have occurred as far away as Arizona and Northern California because of the high voltage involved.

Most victims trapped on 3rd floor

Rest home blaze kills 11

Fire Commissioner Joseph Rizzo said a faulty alarm system at the Washington Hill convalescent home brought firemen to the scene too late.

Rizzo said the home also had no overhead sprinkler system.

Firemen rescued about 30 other residents of the home, which had an alarm system connected directly to the fire department's central communications room.

"I feel the alarm did not work properly," Rizzo said.

"The fire could not have gotten a head start the way it did if the system had been working properly."

Fire officials said most of those killed were believed to be men who were trapped on the third floor of the brick structure, a converted Victorian mansion, when the roof collapsed. Officials said there were 39 female residents on the first two floors and 13 men on the top floor.

A Red Cross spokesman said 36 women and three men were taken to a shelter set up in the auditorium of the St. Ignatius Nursing Home.

The three-alarm fire broke out in a second-floor bathroom in a wing of the building shortly before 5 a.m. and quickly spread throughout the structure. It was brought under control within an hour by firemen, who found the building engulfed in flames when they arrived on the scene.

Nixon reported toying with tax hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is considering asking Congress for a temporary tax increase of up to 10 per cent —refundable later —as a tool to fight inflation, the White House said today.

Melvin R. Laird, Nixon's chief domestic adviser, said a tax boost was one of two proposals recommended to the President by Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, to deal with inflation. The other proposal concerns a variable tax credit of 4 to 15 per cent.

Burns told Congress Wednesday that he had discussed the tax matters with Nixon at a meeting Tuesday and that the President indicated "considerable sympathy."

Laird stressed that no decision had been reached but added, "These particular economic tools are important and they are being given consideration by the President."

Laird, speaking with reporters at the White House, said Nixon had ordered the Treasury Department, his budget analysts and the White House Domestic Council to make detailed studies and to report back to him at an unspecified date.

Congress might not be able to act on such legislation this year, he said, but "there is no reason the President of the United States should not be considering these new ideas and perhaps even be proposing them."

Rowland Dist. parents mull transfer of students to West Covina schools

By LANGE WINCKLER
P-B Staff Writer

ROWLAND HEIGHTS — Residents of the Woodside Village area, disturbed over transfers of their elementary school children to different schools over the past few years, are considering a switch from the Rowland Unified School District to West Covina schools.

Parents met Tuesday evening at a home in the community—located astraddle Walnut and West Covina—to consider their plans. The discussion followed a meeting last week with administrators from the two school districts, which, a community spokesman said, indicated the transfer would not change matters greatly.

However, the parents' session was inconclusive, with some strongly promoting the transfer, and others unsure, said Robert Stankiewicz, chairman of the group. He said another community-wide meeting has been set for later in the month. Then, parents are expected to reach some decision.

At the heart of the issue is Woodside Village's desire to have a neighborhood school—or, lacking that, at least have all the elementary school children in one place. As it stands now, children are divided by grade levels, breaking up families between schools, and they have been shuffled from one school to another every year for the past three years.

According to Dr. Don Wickert, assistant superintendent of administrative services, Woodside Village is caught in a dilemma. There are not enough elementary-level students in the area to justify building a new school there, although developers apparently told those buying homes that a school was planned in the vicinity. And, because growth has put the Rowland district in a pinch, students have been reassigned to schools to make the best use of space.

"What these people are looking for, understandably, is security in assignment," Wickert noted. In that search, parents approached the Rowland board at its last meeting to ask for study of the transfer of territory.

Wickert and Dr. George Dibs, assistant superintendent of education production in the Nogales area, conferred subsequently with community representatives, Dr. Cliff Thyberg, superintendent of the West Covina district, and other West Covina staff members.

No conclusions were reached in that meeting, said both Wickert and Dibs. Thyberg concurred, saying he felt that the Woodside Village area would not benefit from the change, since students would also be bused to West Covina schools, as space allowed, and that his district would not be able to build a school in the area in the foreseeable future.

Furthermore, the administrators all pointed out, West Covina recently lost a bond election for school construction. They said it is doubtful district voters would be any more willing to pass an election so a new facility could be built in Woodside Village.

"This is a many-faceted issue," explained Dibs. "The basic question is, 'How do we get good schools for these kids'?" Not only is de-annexation a problem, he said, or bonded indebtedness, but also transportation. West Covina would have to obtain more buses to handle the total population of 550

Condition of King Gustaf deteriorating

STOCKHOLM (UPI) —King Gustaf VI Adolf of Sweden, hospitalized a month ago, suffered a setback during the night when his lung functions worsened and the oxygen content in his blood diminished, a hospital bulletin said today.

Murder victim's heart transplanted into man

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — The heart of a crime victim whose bullet-punctured brain showed no signs of life was removed Wednesday, flown across San Francisso Bay and successfully transplanted into a 52-year-old man.

The heart had been kept beating for two days by a machine and "cerebral death" had been diagnosed before the victim's wife and mother consented to the removal by Dr. Norman Shumway.

Doctors said it was the first reported case of a murder victim's heart being removed for transplanting.

The murder victim, Samuel Moore, 29, had been found in a pool of blood Monday, a bullet in his brain, in the home of an acquaintance, who was arrested.

Alameda County authorities hesitated in their decision to allow the operation on grounds it could cause legal confusion in a future trial.

But early Wednesday a neurologist and a neurosurgeon made a final series tests on Moore's brain and diagnosed "cerebral death."

Deputy Coroner Roland Prahl said, "As long as Dr. Shumway has a patient ready to receive the heart of this man, we'll make an exception."

The recipient of the heart, a victim of heart disease, was reported in satisfactory condition after receiving Moore's heart.

Castro receives tumultuous welcome on Hanoi arrival

SAIGON (UPI) — Cuban Premier Fidel Castro received a tumultuous welcome from government leaders and thousands of civilians when he arrived in Hanoi Wednesday, Hanoi's Vietnam News Agency (VNA) reported today.

"As Premier Fidel Castro, dressed in his legendary olive uniform, emerged from the plane door, hurrahs and shouts of 'viva Fidel,' 'viva Cuba' swept Gia Lam airport," VNA said. The broadcast was monitored in Saigon.

Banners, with welcoming greetings in Spanish and Vietnamese, decorated both the airport and the streets leading to the official guest house where Castro is staying.

VNA said Castro was met at the airport by Le Duan, first secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee; Truong Chinh, member of the politburo; Pham Van Dong, politburo member and chief peace talks negotiator, and several other high ranking officials including Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap.

Fear of letter bombs drives him to suicide

LONDON (UPI) —A coroner's jury ruled today that a 54-year-old BBC messenger commited suicide because he was terrified of carrying a letter bomb from the Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Thomas Eddington was a messenger at the British Broadcasting Corp. whose job it was to sort incoming mail. Three weeks ago, when extremists who Scotland Yard said might be the IRA began mailing letter bombs to targets in London, Washington and Paris, Eddington was frightened to death.

"He watched the television news and kept calling me over and saying, 'There's another one'," Mrs. Eddington said.

Through a long holiday weekend, when police filled the air with warnings about suspicious packages, "all he kept talking about was the letter bombs," she said.

At the end of the weekend, Eddington's daughter testified, Eddington couldn't face it. He went into the bathroom and cut his throat. The daughter found him.

"As I went with him into the ambulance," she testified, "the last words he said were: 'Letter bombs. Letter bombs.'"

Welfare dispute down to wire

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Democrats today hoped political pressure by California's aged, blind and disabled would prod Senate Republicans into releasing their grip on a $100 million-plus welfare bill opposed By Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"It's really getting to these guys—voting against the old people," said Senate Democratic Leader George Moscone of San Francisco, co-sponsor of the bill.

The fight over monthly welfare payments for 500,000 aged, blind and disabled Californians was one of the angriest of this or any recent legislative session. Unusual personal attacks and name-calling were commonplace.

It was the legislature's last major unfinished business before scheduled adjournment of the 1973 session Friday night.

Welfare payments for the aged, blind and disabled now average $212. But unless the state acts, they will plummet to $130 when the federal government takes over administration of the program on Jan. 1.

The Democratic bill (AB18), by Assemblyman John L. Burton of San Francisco, would raise payments to $235 for the aged and disabled and $255 for the blind. It would cost anywhere from $107 million to $170 million annually, depending on whose figures are accurate.

Reagan wants to increase payments to $221 for 87 per cent of the recipients. The other 13 per cent now receive more than that, and their payments would not be changed. Future recipients, however would get just $221. The governor insisted he could do this without legislative authority, something Democrats questioned.

With only one day to spare, the Assembly Wednesday approved the Democratic bill after a bitter noon hour debate. The vote was 55-19, with seven Republicans siding with 48 Democrats.

The bill had been rejected Tuesday by the Senate on a 22-18 vote, five short of passage. But Moscone was granted permission to have the measure reconsidered. The senator planned to wait, he said, until enough favorable votes were assured.

The strategy of Moscone and Burton, two of the legislature's most outspoken liberals, was to drum up senior citizen political heat on Republican senators.

Moscone said he hoped Republicans would "abandon Reagan and his madness of gambling with the fate of our aged, blind and disabled. It's very clear that Reagan seeks to continue his callous disregard for people in pursuit of conservative Republican support for president."

Moscone, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, said Reagan was pushing California toward "the worst crisis this state has known" and the "blind, old people and severely crippled" faced being "thrown into the streets begging."

The senator also charged that Health and Welfare Secretary Earl Brian, who is trying to run for the U.S. Senate, had "blatantly lied" about the bill.

"The only real lie in this situation," Brian replied in a face-to-face television debate with Moscone, "is that 500,000 people will be thrown out on the streets." He called Moscone "very deceitful."

Moscone said welfare recipients now "eat catfood and dogfood."

During floor debate, Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, told Burton he had worked himself into such "a little emotional whirlwind" he was pushing legislation which didn't stand a chance of being signed by Reagan even if it did pass.

Freshman Assemblyman Lawrence Kapaloff, D-San Diego, told the veteran Bagley he was "selling his soul" to Reagan to win the governor's support in a race for comptroller.

New fighting breaks out in Chile; 1,000 are dead

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Heavy firing broke out in the vicinity of the Defense Ministry and the presidential palace today only half an hour before a 45-hour curfew was to be lifted by the military junta which overthrew the government of socialist President Salvador Allende.

The firing was launched from the Defense Ministry toward the north, in the direction of the partially destroyed presidential palace.

It was not immediately possible to determine the combatants, or the target of the machine gun and artillery fire.

The firing pinned this correspondent to the floor of the UPI bureau directly across the street from the Defense Ministry and only a few yards from the presidential palace.

(In Mexico City, the government announced that the family of Allende, who died in the military coup on Tuesday, had been granted asylum.)

Before the new firing flared in the middle of the capital, it appeared that the ruling military government was in full control of the country.

The junta took office Wednesday night after using warplanes, tanks and artillery to crush resistance by die-hard Allende followers.

Unofficial reports said "at least" 1,000 persons had met death in the revolt. Government sources declined to make even an estimate of the dead, including their casualties. Military sources said 3,000 persons had been detained in the big seaport of Valparaiso and were being kept on ships in the harbor pending investigation.

The junta announced Wednesday that Allende had committed suicide.

Gen. Augusto Pinochet Ugarte, the army chief, was sworn in Wednesday night as president of the four-man junta which led the armed revolt against Allende. Other junta members were heads of the navy, air force and national police. A new cabinet comprised of 13 military men and two civilians was also sworn into office.

He didn't want to leave

Man freed after 21 years in prison in double killing

BERLIN (UPI) —After 21 years behind bars for a double murder, Dietrich Derz was a free man today, but he said he'd rather be back in prison.

"I do not want mercy," he said. "I want justice. I wanted to be freed only on the condition that the authorities admitted they made a mistake and I did not kill my father and his fiancee."

Derz, 53, was convicted 21 years ago of murdering his 61-year-old father and his father's 39-year-old fiancee two days before they were to be married. He received a sentence of life imprisonment.

The sentence was commuted against his will and he agreed to leave West Berlin's Tegel prison only after he was told he would be evicted.

"I would rather be in prison than have people point their fingers at me as a double murderer," he said.

Authorities said Derz was a difficult prisoner with the reputation of a "jail house lawyer." He went on a series of hunger strikes, threatened suicide and sent countless petitions and letters and complaints to city officials.

In the end, he proved just as difficult.

He was let out of prison Wednesday afternoon to look for a place to live on the promise he would be back at 10 p.m., so he could be formally released today.

He did not return.

2 hostages wounded in capture

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (UPI) —A man who said he was fleeing arrest kidnaped three persons to aid in his escape but was captured Wednesday night when he was jumped by one of his wounded hostages, police said.

Witnesses said the man told his hostages, whom he stopped outside a home where they had been visiting, "I'm wanted by the police and one of you is going to have to drive me someplace and I don't want to have to use my gun."

He apparently first wanted to be driven to a nearby airport, but when police gave chase, he took refuge in an unoccupied house. An exchange of gunfire followed.

The 1½ hour incident ended about 7 p.m., when one of the hostages grabbed the man from behind as the alleged kidnaper held a gun to another hostage's head.

The suspect, identified as Victor Heidlage, 26, was booked at the Newport Beach Police Department on charges of kidnaping and assault with intent to commit murder. Authorities were checking to see if he was wanted elsewhere.

Marco DeSilva, 20, Newport Beach, who jumped Heidlage as police surrounded the house, was shot in the stomach and arm, police said. Denine Baeseman, 16, Pasadena, was wounded three times. A bullet punctured one of her lungs.

The third hostage, a woman, was not identified. A policeman was cut by flying glasss.

Authorities were examining all the guns used to determine the source of the bullets that wounded the hostages.

At one point, a photographer was summoned to act as a go-between when the kidnaper demanded to see a reporter. The gunman at first demanded a police helicopter with a full tank of gas and a female pilot, police said.

FUGITIVE CAPTURED

Progress in UAW, Chrysler talks

DETROIT (UPI) —United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock says he is "still hopeful there will be and can be a settlement" with Chrysler Corp. on a new contract before Friday night's strike deadline.

Emerging from an 11-hour session with top company officers Wednesday, Woodcock and Vice President Douglas A. Fraser said there was a feeling that "progress has been made" toward a new contract for 127,500 U.S. and Canadian auto workers.

Dibs has promised to work for a solution to the school space problem. He says in the short range, the district needs to keep the community happy with stability in the school assignments. Long-range needs, as he sees them, are improvements in the school programs to serve the public better.

Additionally, West Covina would have a problem with high-school age students, while Nogales High—which serves Woodside Village students—is leveling off in population. With the expected extension of Nogales Street to the development, access to the high school will be simplified.

"Rowland has been very cooperative," said Mrs. Robert Sankiewicz of the district's part in the conversations. "Dr. Dibs, expecially, has made a real effort."

She said discussion on the issue has been going on among parents for the past six or seven months. "The breaking point came last year when they (the district) moved our children again—that's when we started thinking about redistricting."

This year, students from Woodside Village are attending Hurley School in kindergarten through third grades, Villacorata School in fourth through sixth, Giano Intermediate School, and Nogales High School.

Dispite the size of the community—700 homes—Mrs. Stankiewicz says "it will be quite a long time" before there are 600 elementary aged students to populate a neighborhood school. Larwin Development Co. is now building 60 new homes in Woodside Village, and Umark Corp. has plans for apartments, condominiums, and single-family housing in the rest of the undeveloped areas of the vicinity.

All concerned are watching closely a bill sponsored by Assemblyman Joseph Montoya, D-50th Dist., revising transfer of territory procedures. Passed in the lower house last week, Assembly Bill 2613 was due for consideration Wednesday before the Senate Education Committee. A spokesman for Montoya said the bill may proceed through the Senate prior to Sept. 14 adjournment. However, the bill was returned to consultants for further review, which may kill early passage chances.

That measure proposes action on redistricting first by the losing school district's board of trustees, then by the board of the district receiving the new territory. Negative votes by either board kills the action. If 25 per cent of the registered voters in the affected area petition for an election, under the Montoya bill, voters in the receiving district may be asked to approve or disapprove the transfer.

"The door is still open," said Wickert. Neither Rowland or West Covina have acted on the issue, or formed final opinions.

Less for poorer districts

More aid for rich schools

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The nation's better-financed, big city and suburban school districts will get more federal aid this year to educate needy children, while poorer, rural school systems will get less than last year because of new census data, the U.S. Office of Education has disclosed.

Some rural school systems have had to make drastic reductions in their staffs for this fall. Many had made their plans last spring when the new census information was not widely available and the level of federal aid for this school year was undetermined.

Casey County, Kentucky, for example, had to dismiss physical education teachers, an art teacher, librarians and teacher aides because 1970 census data made available by the Office of Education in July reduced its federal aid for needy children by $122,000.

Allocations under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, the largest federal aid package for schools, previously had been made on the basis of 1960 census data. But Congress ordered a change to 1970 data when it became available, in order to reflect population shifts during the 1960s.

As a result, big shifts in aid levels are occurring within states, although states generally are receiving about what they received last year, a combined total of $1.4 billion compared with $1.3 billion.

In Georgia, with a statewide allocation of $39.9 million this year, down $626,000 from last year, Fulton County, including Atlanta schools, is up from $3,750862 to $6,140,037, while rural Stewart County is down from $214,727 to $95,354.

In Pennsylvania, with a slightly increased allocation of $67,113,702, Philadelphia County schools gained $7 million from $20.7 million last year, while rural Somerset County schools declined from $636,078 to $322,451.

Big city and suburban school systems like those in Baltimore, New Orleans and St. Louis generally gain money under the new formula, but there are exceptions, like San Francisco County which loses $400,000.

Basically, the formula reflects the flight of low-income families during the last decade from rural to metropolitan areas. But a rural area did not necessarily have to lose poor people to be hurt by the formula.

Some rural counties have as many poor people as they used to, but their percentage of the state's poor as compared to the cities has changed, and therefore so does their share of aid to the state.

18,844 enrolled in Pomona schools

POMONA — First-day attendance Wednesday in Pomona's public schools was down 689 at the elementary level and up 197 at the secondary level compared to last year.

Combined, the total first-day count fell 492 below last year. However, it was higher than had been projected by district administrators.

Educators reported 10,719 elementary pupils and 8,125 secondary pupils took their places in district classrooms Wednesday for a total attendance figure of 18,844.

This compares to 11,408 elementary and 7,928 secondary pupils — totaling 19,336 — who attended school the first day last year.

Loss of Mills wouldn't cripple committee--Pettis

By RICK GOTCHER
P-B Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Should the painful back ailment of Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., keep him from seeking another term in office, ending his reign as chairman of the powerful Ways and Means Committee, the committee will not collapse but will undergo an active transition, says a Republican committee member.

California Rep. Jerry Pettis, R-33rd Dist., says the prevailing belief that without Mills the Ways and Means Committee cannot function stems from the personal stature of the Arkansas congressman.

"The fact is, that when you have a strong oak tree like Wilbur Mills, people are less likely to look to the No. 1 or 3 man for leadership and counsel," Pettis said.

"Probably few people even know that Al Ullman (D-Ore.) is No. 2 on our committee," the Californian said. "I know there are congressmen here who can't name the second men on more than a couple of committees.

"Prophets who predict dire results for Ways and Means are bad students of history. It seems the office makes the man and Al Ullman is the kind who will make a good, strong chairman."

Pettis hastened to add he is not counting out Mills' recovery from the back problem that now has him bedfast in an Arkansas hospital. He also noted that Ullman will not attempt to usurp Mills' position while Mills is still in office, regardless of personal circumstances.

The congressman said a small vacuum has been created by Mills' absence from Ways and Means. But this is only because Mills' status is uncertain, he added.

Pettis said should Ullman succeed Mills he expects an "expert change in modus operandi" of the committee.

He said the one-man rule of Mills has sometimes caused committee activity to be wasted. Under Ullman, Pettis said he expects to see a "task force effect," enabling more members of the 25-man committee to "get a piece of the action."

Ways and Means is the only House committee that operates without subcommittees. And while Ullman's "task force" approach does not imply subcommittees, it still gives a specific chore to three or four well-versed members and leaves the rest of the committee free for other jobs, said Pettis.

Pettis also said that with the "broad spectrum of interest" overseen by Ways and Means in writing tax laws, it would be beneficial to take advantage of all expertise within the committee.

Some reports have cast doubt that without Mills Ways and Means can write effective tax legislation, which now seems necessary to put the brakes on an overheated economy.

Pettis thinks otherwise.

"We have set up the agenda for the rest of this session," Pettis said, "and we've done so knowing that Wilbur Mills might not be back.

"I cannot talk specifics about tax proposals, just yet. But I will say we have outlined a strict discipline for ourselves and taxes are on the agenda."

Pettis said if some tax is not levied this year, no tax increase will pass next year due to elections. He also said the following year could very well be too late to allay the recession that can follow the current boom.

Mother of slain baby pleads Fifth

ONTARIO — A Fontana woman, twice arrested and twice released, turned silent under the Fifth Amendment Wednesday after giving brief testimony during a hearing on a motion for new trial for the convicted murderer of her 10-month-old daughter.

In the second day of a West Valley Superior Court hearing requested by William Lattimer Wheeler, 27, of Fontana, convicted of murdering little Virginia Ann Dekker in an Ontario apartment March 9, Francine Edith Dekker, 19, of 7571 Juniper St., Fontana was called back to the stand. Mrs. Dekker last week under questioning by Deputy Dist. Atty. Bill Parker testified that a purported confession she wrote several days after Wheeler was convicted was only partially true.

Admits throwing baby

Mrs. Dekker's confession, addressed to Parker but never mailed, said that she felt Wheeler, her former boyfriend, could not have killed her daughter, and that she picked the baby up in a fit of anger and threw it to the floor. According to the San Bernardino County pathologist, Dr. Irving Root, the baby died of two massive head fractures, that could not have been suffered in a fall or similar accident.

Mrs. Dekker's confession note was found by Wheeler while out on bail awaiting sentencing on a second degree murder conviction in the baby's death. He forwarded it to his attorney and the deputy district atty's office.

Mrs. Dekker on March 9 was arrested along with Wheeler during the police investigation of the baby's death. She was later released and the murder charge dropped.

But several days after Wheeler was convicted of the crime, Mrs. Dekker was arrested again on a murder charge due to the information in the purported confession.

The purported confession spurred a motion for new trial by Wheeler's attorney John Whyte of Pasadena. The day of the hearing on the new trial motion, Mrs. Dekker was again released from custody and the murder charge dropped in West Valley Municipal Court.

Parker, calling Mrs. Dekker to the stand in the Wheeler new trial motion hearing last week, had her say that not all of the confession was true. Mrs. Dekker testified that she still loved Wheeler and wanted him to be free.

Events since release

Whyte, cross-examining Mrs. Dekker Wednesday, asked her what she had done betweeen the time she was released last Friday and Wednesday. She said she got out of jail and went to the Wheeler family home with her sister. She said she had no place to stay Saturday and Sunday night, so she stayed with the Wheelers.

Whyte asked if Mrs. Dekker she knew a woman by the name of Jann Clarke, to which she replied she did.

Whyte asked if Mrs. Deker had talked to Miss Clarke at the county jail after her second arrest on the murder charge. Mrs. Dekker said she had. Then Whyte asked her if she had told Miss Clarke that she intended to plead innocent by reason of temporary insanity to the charge lodged against her. Mrs Dekker instead of answering Whyte said, "I refuse to testify on the grounds that it may incriminate me." Her refusal was based upon the Fifth Amendment in the Constitution that allows individuals suspected of crimes not to testify to anything that might incriminate themselves.

Other questions

Mrs. Dekker took the Fifth Amendment on a number of other questions asked by Whyte including "Did you talk to the senior Mr. Wheeler about the case?" And "do you remember a lady named "Val" you had talked with in county jail and you telling her that 'Billy Wheeler did not kill your baby?'."

Mrs. Dekker was dismissed from the stand by Whyte who then called Miss Jean Clarke to the stand.

Miss Clarke testified that she had talked to Mrs. Dekker at the county jail, where she was a visitor, and that Mrs. Dekker had told her than she intended to plead innocent by reason of temporary insanity to the murder charge.

Judge James Cunningham, after hearing the testimony, told Whyte to submit his written arguments to the court in the next week and then told Parker he had until Oct. 26 to reply to the information submitted by the defense. The hearing was continued to Oct. 26, when the judge will determine if Wheeler will have an opportunity for a new trial

Walnut expands issue of lower speed limits

By LANGE WINCKLER
P-B Staff Writer

WALNUT — The City Council Wednesday took mostly delaying action for a later session. A routine vote setting speed limits on Lemon Avenue blossomed into a traffic study of lower speed limits on Grand Avenue, while final decisions on city procedures for making environmental impact reports and granting a rubbish hauling franchise were held up by a councilman's absence

Hottest action of the night was a mildly disputed transfer of a city lighting maintenance district to a countywide agency.

Speed on Grand

When the council dipped into language changing speed limit statutes for Lemon from 45 to 35 miles per hour, member Joe Dyer stepped in with a suggestion the whole issue be delayed for study of a lower speed limit on Grand. He was joined by Councilman Robert Lovemark, who noted, "It's supposed to be 45 now and they do 60 — maybe if we post it at 35, they'll do 50."

Amid comment on the success of new traffic control signs around Mt. San Antonio College, the council finally decided to send the question back to staff for study. As proposed the council wishes to drop the speed limit to 35 m.p.h. for all of Grand from Valley Boulevard to the northern city limits.

Possible revision of the way city environmental impact reports are prepared has been a topic of council conversation for some time. However, Councilman William Cotten, one of the principals in the talks, was not able to attend Wednesday's meeting, so action was held off.

Likewise, Cotten is a member of the council-staff committee that has been working on terms of a proposed contract and invitation to bid for an exclusive rubbish hauling franchise in Walnut. In his absence, the panel decided to wait for final action.

Lighting district change

What looked like a potential "hot potato" before the session turned out to be a change in names when the council backed transfer of the city lighting district to county status. It appeared earlier as though the transfer could open up Walnut residents to a tax raid by the county, and councilmen probed this before being satisfied that such will not be the case

But Lovemark, noting the transfer was sought to evade some of the restrictions of Senate Bill 90, which put a ceiling on charges levied by the district, was displeased. "We scream at the legislature to lower our taxes," he declared, "and here we find ways to get around that."

His was the only negative vote on the action.

School rental fees going up in Upland

UPLAND — The cost to outside groups for the use of Upland School District buildings will increase under a new policy being considered by the school board.

In general, the new policy, accepted on a first reading at this week's board meeting, sets forth a more extensive schedule of rental fees which will be charged all religious groups and all groups and organizations which charge admission or enrollment fees or solicit contributions that are not spent for the benefit of district pupils or charitable purposes.

According to Business Manager Glenn Hardy, the new policy is prompted by the increase in building operation costs and the increased use of district buildings for community college extension courses.

In the fee schedule, a minimum charge is set for the first two hours of use of any facility. A fee equal to half the minimum charge is set for each additional full or partial hour.

For example, the fee for all classrooms will be $8 for the first two hours and $4 for each additional hour. The fee is higher for the use of larger facilities such as multipurpose rooms, gymnasiums and shower and locker room facilities.

The fee for kitchen facilities will be $5 per hour The fee will be charged all groups, except district students or PTA groups, even when the free use of other facilities has been granted.

The fees will be paid at least seven days in advance to the district business office. Advance payments will be refunded in full if cancellation notice is received 24 hours in advance of the scheduled activity.

DIAMOND BAR Pending zone changes, to bring undeveloped land into line with the county's new general plan, will be discussed by representatives of the Diamond bar Development Corp. and directors of the Diamond Bar Homeowners Association when they meet tonight at 7:30 at the home of Charles Hall, 1656 Aspen Road.

Registration issue signed by governor

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill allowing California voters to register as "nonpartisan" was signed recently by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Under the bill (SB294) by Sen. Albert S. Rodda, D-Sacramento, the "nonpartisan" designation would be in addition to current alternatives of party affiliation or "decline to state."

Voters who choose the "nonpartisan" label, like those who opt for "decline to state," would not be allowed to vote in party primary elections.

Martha says Nixon linked to Mafia

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Martha Mitchell said today the Senate Watergate committee probably will not call her as a witness because the committee is trying to protect President Nixon.

"You know why they don't want me to testify?" she asked UPI reporter Helen Thomas in an early morning phone call. "They don't want to crucify President Nixon. Don't kid yourself—they're trying to go easy on him.'

She also said, "I think the Mafia was involved (in the President's re-election campaign) and I think Nixon was involved with the Mafia." She did not elaborate.

In a previous conversation, she said she had seen a campaign strategy book allegedly approved by Nixon and his former chief aide, H.R. Haldeman, which she said contained blueprints for Watergate-style operations.

She also said today she was "very upset" that the perjury and obstruction of justice trial of her husband, former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans, was postponed Tuesday to give their lawyers more time to prepare a defense

"I want him tried immediately," she said. "I can face the outcome better and he can, too, if it is not prolonged."

Mitchell and Stans are accused of attempting to obstruct a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco in return for a $200,000 cash donation to the reelection campaign.

She said she is anxious "to get rid of" the trial because "I've been through this for a year and a half—for so long."

Mrs. Mitchell disputed the lawyers' arguments that they needed more time. "That is not true," she said. "John has been sitting here day after day getting ready."

She said the delay was sought because if all the Watergate bit comes out there could be no trial."

Mitchell and Stans had claimed they could not get a fair trial because of prejudicial publicity about the Watergate case.

Chino B of A to unveil new look

CHINO — The Bank of America here will unveil its streamlined new look to customers and guests at a public open house all day Friday, announced James Fero, vice president and manager.

The event marks the completion of a $320,000 expansion and modernization project in which both the exterior and interior of the office have been remodeled.

Key element in the renovation was the construction of a 2,700-square-foot addition to the rear of the building permitting the expansion of the lobby, officers' section and teller line and the installation of two new walk-up and two drive-up teller units.

The exterior face of the office has been modernized in a contemporary Spanish design featuring ceramic tile walls and mission tile roof sections.

Inside the bank has been expanded and redesigned according to the bank's open area concept. The railings which previously surrounded the officers' section have been removed and the area has been outfitted with contemporary furniture and new carpeting.

The check-writing desks in the center of the lobby have been replaced with contemporary wall-hanging models and all new lowline teller counters and multi-colored floor-to-ceiling vinyl wall coverings also have been installed.

GOP faces tough job in California

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Poll reported today that the Republicans face a tough job in retaining control of the governorship in 1974 — even should Gov. Ronald Reagan change his mind and run for a third term.

It said that in any early matchup, Democratic gubernatorial contenders Edmund G. Brown Jr., Joseph Alioto and Robert Moretti lead or are very close in overall voter preference to Reagan and GOP contenders Edward Reinecke, Robert Finch, Evelle Younger and Houston Flournoy.

Secretary of State Brown makes the strongest showing, beating Reagan 51-39, Reinecke 50-38, Younger 46-40, Finch 4836 and Flournoy 55-26.

When Mayor Alioto faces the same five men, the poll said the results are Alioto vs. Reagan 45-45, Reinecke 41-45, Younger 40-44, Finch 42-40 and Flournoy 46-33.

Assembly Speaker Moretti loses to Reagan 40-45, Reinecke 36-41, Younger 39-42, and defeats Finch 41-34 and Flournoy 43-27.

The poll listed several factors helping the Democratic candidates, including the registration bulge in California of 56 to 37 per cent, the current problems facing Republican President Richard M. Nixon and the fact that any two-term governor, no mater how popular he may have been, has more opportunity to alienate voters.

His lost love was a TV set

TOKYO (UPI) —A man checked into an inn known for romantic trysts—alone. He paid for two and said his lover would arrive shortly. She never arrived.

A room clerk finally became suspicious and went to the room where he found a kimono spread over the traditional "tokonoma" alcove. When the kimono was lifted, it was found that the room's television set was gone.

Police arrested a 25-year-old man and said he had made $3,800 in the last 15 days by stealing television sets and pawning them.

New product --algameat

MANILA (UPI) The Philippines' National Istitute of Science and Technology says its scientists have developed processes for making "algameat" from chlorella, a common single-celled alga that grows as scum in ponds and is rich in protein.

Who's on firstsky?

Why don't the Russians play baseball?

The muscular Muscovites do right well in track and field at the Olympics. The Americans taught them basketball and the Candians taught them ice hockey. For an underprivileged nation, they have done quite well. They don't play golf, of course (golf course, hee-haw!) and they are weak at tennis. But if they invented baseball, how come they're not in the World Series?

Antriklopedia Sportvania (Sports Encyclopedia) at the Lenin Library in Moscow claims that the game of beizbol was first played in Russia. (You could pick off a baserunner if he took too many steppes off first.)

USSR types claim that the ancestor of baseball was a sport named "lapta," played by the Russian peasants back in the Middle Ages. The game was played in the snow, of course, using the head of the latest foreign emissary to the court as the ball. The Czar usually threw out the first skull.

"Lapta," says Alexis Chickens of the Soviet Committee of Sports, "is older than the world 'sports' itself. In Romania they called it 'oina' or 'pesa', and Anglo-Saxon tribes overruning the Eastern continent became intrigued and carried the game back to the British Isles."

Why the game never caught on in the land of borscht and samovars is not explained. You might say that Alexis chickens out on the question.

Russia clearly had a long lead in the development of the game. They had night beizbol in Siberia, played by the light of the Midnight Sun, long before Gaylord Perry began firing his spit-skulls at the warclubs of the Kirghizians, or Wilbur Wood learned the cranium knuckleball.

There were problems, of course. It was hard to beat out a bunt wearing snowshoes. The umpires were Cossacks who would slash off the head of a batter protesting a called third strike. And then there were all those wolves in the grandstand.

It would be nice to see the Soviets develop in baseball, but what would be the attitude of a Russian team facing the Cincinnati Reds?

Don't tell a Polish joke, these anglers may hit you

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Three fishermen said that they were rescued at sea by a Polish fishing boat after several nearby ships of a Russian fishing fleet failed to answer their distress call.

Mrs. Shirley Collins, 39, James Ferdette, 40, and Kenneth Price, 56, all of Corvallis, Ore., said they drifted helplessly in their small boat for 30 hours Sunday and Monday before they were picked up.

"They're beautiful people," Mrs. Collins said of their rescuers

The three spent eight hours aboard the Polish vessel before a Coast Guard craft brought them back to shore. The engine on Ferdette's 17-foot boat quit as the three were returning from fishing Sunday.

Price said several ships of the Russian fishing fleet were nearby but did not answer their distress call. About 5 a.m. Monday a trawler "with a flag we had never seen" pulled alongside and a man inquired, "Motor trouble?"

The three were quickly taken aboard the Polish vessel and given the captain's cabin.

"They fed us so much food and were so nice to us I'll never forget," Price said.

"I've never tasted better food. There was real butter, fresh milk, homemade bread, sausages and frankfurters like I've never tasted and the vodka was out of this world."

Ferdette added, "They enjoyed it as much as we did. They were having such a good time they didn't want us to go."

A FAMILY WEEKLY "Star Chat" — September 16

James Garner

FAMILY WEEKLY: Do you have a temper?

JAMES GARNER: I lost it years ago and never found it again. No, honestly — I do have a violent temper. But I have a high boiling point. Usually I boil over when I encounter dishonesty or when somebody kicks somebody else who can't fight back.

For this week's cover story, Family Weekly's Hollywood editor Peer J. Oppenheimer has transcribed a rare, on-location interview with one of the movies' most elusive stars, James Garner. A very private person off-camera, the actor, who's usually very reluctant to talk about himself, explains, "I can't understand why anyone would want an opinion from me."

Xrays viewed as risking birth defects

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three types of X-ray examinations of pregnant women pose high risks of causing birth defects by damaging the embryo and seven other X-ray procedures are questionable, a government scientist has reported.

But Dr. Roberts Rugh, a researcher with the Bureau of Radiological Health, said there are 56 other types of X-ray examinations that now appear relatively safe although they too could expose a developing child to some radiation.

"I don't want to frighten people and imply that any diagnostic radiology is going to cause an anomalous child," Rugh said in a news conference.

Rugh, in a paper written with Dr. William Leach, told a meeting of the international Radiation Protection Association that the earlier in pregnancy a woman is exposed to radiation, the greater the chance the unborn child will be affected.

"The most crucial time for the human is between conception and 42 days," Rugh said.

"The physician must therefore consider and balance the benefit to the mother against the risk to the fetus," the report said. Rugh said that the mother's health should have priority and he said he personally would recommend a therapeutic abortion if the fetus was exposed to one of the three high-radiation X-ray procedures.

He said the three dangerous procedures were abdominal Xray filming of the aorta, the main artery; similar X-ray photography of an abdominal artery; and X-ray filming of the urinary bladder. Each procedure, Rugh said, could expose an embroyo to 20 rads.

Rugh said physicians in Denmark routinely recommend abortions if a pregnant woman is exposed to a 10-rad dose of radiation. He said there are no such standards in this country but there should be.

Rugh and Leach also said Xrays could harm an embryo when a woman doesn't realize she is pregnant. They suggested that diagnostic use of X-rays be limited when possible to the 10-day period of each month when a woman is unlikely to conceive.

Rugh said 7 per cent of children born each year have congenital abnormalities, but he said radiation during early development of the fetus probably accounts for a very low percentage, possibly only 1 to 2 per cent.

Student job preparation plan readied

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A special state task force has been set up to help public schools develop programs to prepare students for jobs of the future.

State Health and Welfare Secretary Earl Brian, in announcing the task force, Tuesday said that about 250,000 young people each year leave high school or drop out of college "with no plans, no marketable skill and no practical preparation for work."

"Instead of attempting to solve unemployment problems by manpower training programs costing millions of dollars, it's obviously wiser and more economical to prevent the problem arising in the first place," he said.

Brian said the Occupational Preparation Task Force, headed by state Finance Director Verne Orr, will gather labor market information and future job opportunities to provide schools with data needed for improved student counseling and career guidance.

He said detailed studies, the first of which will be held in the Los Angeles area, "will project new jobs and replacement needs for the state's entire work force, area-by-area, consisting of about 200 industries and 450 occupations covering all major employment opportunities."

Brian said this information would be provided to local schools and colleges to give students "an accurate picture of potential career opportunities."

The lighter side

From Dead Sea scrolls to Watergate

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Ancient scrolls, some of which appear to contain variations of Biblical narratives, continue to turn up in the Dead Sea area.

At the moment, I understand scholars are trying to piece together a crumbling parchment that bears some semblance to the familiar account of the origin of the Ten Commandments.

In the Old Testament version, Moses descends from Mt. Sinai with two stone tablets of laws written by "the finger of God."

Subsequently he breaks the tablets in anger over finding his people worshipping the golden calf.

Not enough of the Dead Sea parchment has been restored for scholars to state with finality that it deals with the same event.

From what has been translated thus far, the differences seem to overshadow the similarities. Nevertheless, it is interesting to compare the two accounts.

In the scroll version, a man whose name may be rendered in English as Mozes, or Mozis, is chosen as leader of a group of people.

He spends some time on a mountaintop in communication with an adviser, who may or may not have been God.

When he returns, the people are eager to learn what Mozus, or Mozis, said to God and what God told Mozus, or Mozis.

But Mozus, or Mozis, refuses to reveal the nature of the conference, citing executive privilege.

He explains that the chosen leader of a group of people must seek advice and counsel from a great variety of sources, including Divine Guidance.

These consultations must necessarily be held in strict confidence, he continues. Otherwise, his advisers would not feel free to speak frankly and without fear of their points of view being misconstrued.

His followers accept this argument. But subsequently it becomes known that Mozus, or Mozis, has secretly recorded the mountaintop conversations on two stone tablets.

The people contend that the stone transcripts constitute a breach of confidentiality and that the contents of the tablets should therefore be made public.

Mozus, or Mozis, rejects the demand, insisting that the tablets were inscribed for historical purposes. He says different people reading the tablets might interpret them in different ways.

And he reiterates that the chosen leader of a group of people has the inherent power and right to withhold such information.

If it comes to a showdown, he says he will break the tablets rather than reveal their contents. The scrolls do not make clear what happens after that.

CHP protesters ask halt to bond deductions

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The California Association of Highway Patrolmen is urging its 6,000 members to discontinue payroll deductions for U.S. savings bonds in protest of the recent federal rollback of state employe raises.

"We want to let the Cost of Living Council know we are unhappy and this is one of the few ways we have of protesting," said Sgt. Norton Robinson.

He said CHP employes have had "a very, very high participation" in payroll deductions for bonds.

Last week the council cut 1973-74 pay raises for 125,000 California state employes from an 11.9 per cent approved by the legislature to a maximum 7 per cent.

By L.T. ROGERS
Asst. City Editor

POMONA — The developer of a proposed 10-story, 100-unit condominium development near the Pomona Civic Center has been asked to acquire more property for the project.

Thomas W. Scott of Pasadena plans to build two 10-story towers with a central elevator system on two acres generaliy bounded by Park and Parcels avenues, Seventh Street and an alley behind the Barrister Building.

Scott appeared before the Pomona Planning Commission Wednesday night seeking a zone change to Civic Redevelopment; a use permit to develop a highrise residential structure under provisions of the redevelopment zone; and a variance to reduce various development standards, including all setbacks, off-street parking, tennis court fence height, distance between buildings, open space requirements and patio sizes.

The city planning staff, however, stated the proposed development as presented was unacceptable. Jim Lightfoot, planning aide, suggested that either the site be enlarged or the numberof units be reduced to 80.

Two major problems include the setbacks and the amount of open space, he added. "The applicant is seeking variances to permit an eight-foot setback on Park, three feet on sideyards and ne setbacks on Parcels and Seventh streets. The city ordinance requires 15-foot setbacks," said Lightfoot.

The ordinance also requires 400 square feet of open space for each residential unit. This is a total of 40,000 for the 100 units, he explained. Only 27,000 square feet of open space is being proposed.

"We do not feel we have an adequate project for consideration," he added.

In his presentation, Scott said his staff had remeasured the proposed site and discovered there are 37,000 square feet of open space for the units.

Scott also presented an alternate proposal which expanded the project onto three additional parcels at the southeast corner of Seventh Street and Park avenue. He doesn't own this property at present.

The addition of this property, he explained, would make the project compatible with most city ordinance requirements, except for some setbacks in some areas.

Scott reported he had met Tuesday night with the Pomona Redevelopment Commission, and members had approved the concept.

In discussing the project, Scott reported each two-bedroom condominium unit would have 1,100 square feet of floor space. The prices may range from $30,000 to $42,000, with the average price being about $36,000.

The project would include a two-level parking structure with 175 parking spaces.

Scott plans to construct the first wing of 50 units during the first year, then build the second increment when sales warrant, possibly a year later.

The total project is expected to represent a $4 million investment, including building and property.

In commission discussion, Planner J. Romo said the Redevelopment Commission was of the opinion the corner parcels should be acquired for the project.

The developer, he added, wants to get started by Jan. 1 or the cost will go up 7 per cent. "I would like us to move along with this and have the developer take steps necessary. This would help to upgrade that area."

Planner E. J. Gaulding, while noting the project would have a "tremendous potential" for Pomona, said he couldn't support it without the addition of more property. "If the developer acquires the corner parsel, that would be the minimum acceptable to me."

The commission took two separate actions on the application. The first was to recommend the developer acquire the corner parcels and the approval of a high-rise overlay for that area presented in the orginal application.

Members continued the hearing to Sept. 26 when the revised application will again be considered.

HIGH RISE CONDOMINIUM

This architect's drawing depicts a 10-story, 100-unit condominium development being proposed on a site between Park and Parcels avenues and Seventh Street and an alley behind the Barrister Building. The Pomona Planning Commission postponed approval of the project Wednesday night pending the acquisition of additional property. The developer hopes to begin construction this year.

Recreation Dept. offers program for preschoolers

POMONA — The parks and recreation department again is offering a preschool program for children between the ages of 3 years, 7 months, and 5.

The program will start Wednesday and will continue for 10 weeks at the Palomares Community Center, 475 E. Arrow Highway. Enrollment is limited to the first 30 children.

Classes, which will meet Wednesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to noon, will include arts and crafts, story times, games, outdoor play, snacks and field trips. Mrs. Shirley Jennings will be the instructor.

Motorcyclist breaks foot in crash

The cyclist, Robert L. Jenkins, 37, 1031 Friar Lane, also suffered injuries to his right shoulder and leg. He was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where his condition today was termed satisfactory.

The motorist, Marcus M. Whitechurch, 72, 1120 S. Reservoir St., told police his car had quit in the street and he was attempting to restart the engine when the accident occurred.

A La Puente man was arrested late Tuesday night after his car slammed into 80 feet of six-foot chain-link fencing at Teledyne Casting Co., 4200 W. Valley Blvd.

Reginald M. Arterberry, 24, 18433 Hurley Ave., was booked on a drunken driving charge. He told police he must have fallen asleep while driving westbound on Valley shortly before midnight.

Group planning cultural center will meet tonight

POMONA — The Citizens Committee of '76 will hold its second public meeting tonight for a first reading of the group's proposed by-laws. The public is invited to attend.

The meeting, which will start at 7:30 p.m., will be held at the Great Western Savings and Loan Association building, 300 Pomona Mall West.

Formed July 24 after an initial meeting of interested citizens, the committee has the purpose of organizing support and planning the construction of a social and cultural center for Pomona as a commemoration of the bicentennial of the nation's independence.

Fred Graff and Mrs. Harry Williamson are temporary co-chairmen, with Nancy Selby serving as secretary and Opal DeBeeson as treasurer.

Proposed by-laws were written by a committee made up of Graff, C. Mack Gilliland of the Valley Community Theater, and Parks and Recreation Commissioner Richard Owens.

The reading will have the intent of enabling the group to register as a California nonprofit corporation.

Other agenda items include the appointment of a nominating committee to select a board of directors and a report from Graff on a Channel 5 television interview with him broadcast this morning.

The committee presently is in the process of circulating petitions and various groups and organizations in the city affiliated with the committee are formulting resolutions of support.

The results of the by-laws presentation and the election of the group's first board of directors also is expected at the October meeting.

Graff urged all groups and organizations and private individuals who have not had a chance to get involved to attend tonight's meeting.

"The support we have received so far from petition circulators and the general discussion has been extremely rewarding," Graff stated. "It renews the faith that Pomona is ready, willing and more than able to renew itself with the construction of the arts center we envisage."

Further information about the committee, where its petitions are located, or about tonight's meeting can be obtained by calling Mrs. Williamson at 623-7467, or Graff at 593-2328.

Mexican festivity will close part of Grand Ave. Sunday

POMONA — Grand Avenue, from Park Avenue to Main Street, will be closed to traffic Sunday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. for a fiesta celebrating Mexican Independence Day.

Policing will be done by members of the Sharkey Park Committee which received City Council approval for the street closure, for use of city equipment such as tables, chairs and a public address system, and for city expenditures of $88 for portable toilets.

The request was made by Ben Carpio of the committee. The council asked that the event by coordinated with the police department.

On a motion by Councilman R. T. French, the council also asked that the Parks and Recreation Commission study the lack of restroom facilities at Sharkey Park.

POMONA — Brian Van Camp, California's "reform-minded" commissioner of corporations, said here Wednesday that he may run for secretary of state in 1974.

A final decision, he said, would be made "after the first of the year." He would be a Republican candidate for the nomination in the June primary.

Van Camp, who came to Pomona to address a meeting of the Kiwanis Club Wednesday noon at the Elks Lodge, said he was giving "close consideration" to running for state office, and that he had friends "starting steering committees in all corners of the state.

"I feel I have a grasp of the problems of those in corporations," said Van Camp, 33, a former deputy attorney general assigned to the office of the secretary of state as legal cousel to the late Frank Jordan.

"I feel there is a great need to simplify the filing procedure and speed-up and time required."

Van Camp said filing procedures were efficiently administered by Jordan, but have been allowed to lag by incumbent Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr.

He did credit Brown with "bringing necessary vigor to enforcement of the campaign practices code and state election laws."

However, such enforcement should be impartial and nonpartisan, Van Camp added.

Since Brown already is an announced candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor in California and will not be seeking re-election as secretary of state, Van Camp agreed he has no name competition at present for the office.

Van Camp was appointed to his current position by Gov. Ronald Reagan in August of 1971. He has focused department activities on improved regulation of investments, especially real estate investment trusts, mutual funds, credit unions and finance companies.

In addition, in recent months, the department has clamped down on abuses in real estate syndications, commodity option sales and "pyramid" sales schemes.

Fairs pay off

The Los Angeles County Fair which opens in Pomona Friday for its 46th year is an annual event well known throughout the state and the entire nation.

But it does not stand alone. As the largest county fair in America, it is the flagship of a statewide industry comprised of some 76 other fairs and expositions . . . an industry that generates more than $159 million in transactions annually and ranks 59th in the state.

That this fair industry is a resource not only to the areas in which they are located but to the state is indicated by the fact that between $15 million and $19 million is returned to the state in the form of sales, parimutuel and personal state income taxes. That is approximately twice the $8 million expended on support of the fairs.

These facts have been revealed by the Western Fairs Association, which in cooperation with the California Department of Food and Agriculture and the Joint Legislative Committee on Fairs Allocation and Classification assisted in a special study conducted by Security Pacific National Bank.

Far from being simply a valuable economic force, however, the fairs have an important social and cultural impact on the communities and the state. Approximately 13 million people and 4,000 organizations used these fair facilities last year. That is almost two-thirds of the state's population. Pomona's fair alone attracts more than one million persons during its 17-day run.

Fairs are fun. It's good to know they also serve so well in so many ways.

Look at presidency

If Watergate has accomplished nothing else of positive benefit, it has inspired a fresh look at the American presidency,and how it grows.

One of the latest books to put the White House under the microscope is "The Presidency in Flux," (Columbia University Press) by George Reedy, the late President Lyndon B. Johnson's press secretary.

In one section of the book, Reedy examines a phenomenon most other observers have ignored — the proliferation of presidential libraries in recent years which, according to Reedy, "has taken on megalomanic overtones."

Libraries have been established to house the works and papers of Presidents Harry Truman, Herbert Hoover, Dwight Eisenhower, Franklin Roosevelt, Lyndon Johnson and others.

The most pretentious edifice to date is that honoring Reedy's old boss, LBJ, on the campus of the University of Texas in Austin. A move to create a library to house the documents (and tapes?) of President Nixon has been stalled by the Watergate scandal.

In an article taken from his book and published in the current Intellectual Digest, Reedy suggests that rather helping historians, such repositories may actually confound their problems.

"I doubt seriously," he says, "that the libraries reflect a genuine concern for future generations and the problems they face. They smack more of the Egyptian pharoahs who sought immortality through the erection of stone pyramids."

Reedy explains the trend of contemporary presidents to establish presidential libraries as an attempt by the chief executives to have posterity think well of them. When a man achieves the White House, he says, "there is nothing more that the people can grant him."

Thereafter, he says, it is only a matter of time until constituencies fade in his sight. The larger question becomes the reaction of history to his administration rather than the reaction of voters.

"I suggest there is something unhealthy," says Reedy, "about a form of government in which a man who is faced with day-to-day problems of government devotes so much energy to his image in the future."

He adds, in words that deserve to be struck in bronze and affixed above the door of the Oval Office:

"The reaction of history — especially history that has yet to be written—is a poor guide to public policy."

Proposition 20

During the Proposition No. 20 campaign last fall the voters were warned over and over again that the so-called coastal conservation initiative was a mishmash of errors and highly questionable authorizations of power.

They were just as frequently assured by the proponents that if any such errors did exist they could be taken care of in the courts. They have been.

The State Supreme Court's recent adverse interpretation of Prop. 20 confirmed the warnings of last fall to such an extent that the chairman of the State Coast Commission, created by the act, considers it "a give-away to the developers," and the forerunner of further decisions weakening the impact of the initiative. He probably is correct in the latter, at least.

The court's ruling is too complex to discuss briefly, but it concerns exemptions from the new law based on "vested rights" acquired before passage of Prop. 20. Melvin B. Lane, commission chairman, charged that the court had misread the expectation of the voters favoring the initiative, that the average voter "had no idea that a giant loophole was being provided. . . "

If that is true it is because the voters believed the promoters of Prop. 20 and did not, as urged by the opponents, read the initiative itself. To read it was to oppose it.

Speaker wants to see FBI files

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Carl Albert has asked the FBI's new boss, Clarence Kelley, to advise him on the "very serious matter" of FBI congressional files.

For years, we have been reporting on the FBI's habit of keeping files on prominent Americans, including members of Congress. As evidence, we have quoted excerpts from the secret FBI files.

When Kelley's predecessor, Pat Gray, took over the FBI he blandly assured newsmen: "None of you guys are going to believe this — and I don't know how to make you belive it — but there are no dossiers or secret files."

We immediately offered to tell Gray, since he was new around the FBI, where some of the secret files were stashed. We even printed several of the file numbers to help him locate the hidden dossiers.

Caught snooping

But it wasn't until the FBI was caught snooping into the private life of a Democratic congressional candidate six months later that Gray admitted the FBI had been collecting information on both congressmen and candidates since 1950.

Several congressmen, eager to find out what the FBI has been compiling about them, have asked to see their FBI files. But the bureau has contended that the law prohibits the destruction or dissemination of existing files.

Now the mighty House Speaker has joined in the inquiry. As yet, Kelley hasn't responded to Albert's request. But he has been turning down other congressional requests.

For example, Rep. Edward Koch, D-N.Y., a leader in the effort to close the books on the FBI's political files, got nowhere with Kelley

'Equally entitled'

"I am confident," responded the FBI chief in a private letter, "that you have file references in your office on me and my predecessors (to locate correspondence). I see nothing sinister in your maintenance of file references on me and trust you would agree this bureau is equally entitled to maintain such file references concerning you."

From our own access to the FBI's secret files, however, we can report that the FBI keeps far more than routine references. The congressional dossiers, in addition to newspaper clippings and biographical data, also contain eavesdrop information, surveillance reports and gossip from informants.

Speaker Albert's FBI file, for example, contains a report about his relationship with lobbyist Fred Black based upon conversation picked up by an FBI listening device.

The firm but friendly Kelley, however, shows no inclination to open up the congressional files. Although the FBI hasn't hesitated in the past to show files to favored congressmen and newsmen, Kelley wrote to Koch:

'Seek new law'

"If there is a need to purge all references to you from FBI files or that you must inspect our files, certainly you are entiled to seek appropriate legislation to accomplish your objectives."

Unless Albert's intervention carries more weight with Kelley, in other words, it will take an Act of Congress to eliminate the FBI's political files.

DIPLOMATIC EXPRESS: Most of our wandering legislators are now back from their summer junkets, but the souvenirs they bought are following behind. Usually, these are shipped home by diplomatic pouch as if they were state secrets.

Thus the taxpayers not only pay the travel expenses for flying members of Congress all over the world but also the freight charges for bringing back their accumulated loot.

In South Vietnam, for instance, some visiting congressmen went on a shopping spree. They dumped their vases, jade elephants and bric-a-brac upon the U.S. embassy which shipped them by diplomatic air pouch to Capitol Hill.

But the U.S. embassy in Thailand balked when Rep. Lawrence Hogan, R-Md., tried to send a rattan patio set home by diplomatic pouch. The embassy fired off a cable to the State Department requesting guidance.

Air freight cost on packages Congressman Hogan requested embassy escort officer to pouch to Washington will amount to $620," explained the cable. "Embassy escort officer advised Congressman Hogan shipment via air pouch would be very expensive and recommended packages be forwarded via surface pouch.

"Congressman Hogan stated another Embassy had forwarded his packages by air pouch and thus did not agree shipment should be via surface pouch . . . Advise recommended mean of transport."

The State Department finally notified Hogan he would have to pay commercial freight charges to ship his patio furniture to Washington.

Hogan told us he never asked the embassy to send his package by diplomatic air pouch but merely mentioned that the Saigon embassy had done so.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

Pentagon keeps down studio troops

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) —According to a survey in the current issue of the magazine Human Behavior, the Defense Department provided technical assistance for 168 Hollywood war films produced between 1948 and 1970.

The magazine implied there was something unseemly about the Pentagon, letting picture studios make use of military personnel and equipment.

But when we consider the alternative, we can see that the cooperation of the U.S. armed forces in these pictures clearly was in the national interest.

The alternative would have been for the studios to maintain their own armed forces. Which would have made recent international negotiations enormously more complicated.

It was tough enough getting the Soviet Union to agree to a strategic arms limitation treaty. Imagine what the SALT talks would have been like if Henry Kissinger, the chief U.S. negotiator, had been required to deal simultaneously with the USSR and MGM.

Kissinger appears to get along well with heads of state, but he is quite unaccustomed to bargaining with heads of studios. Most of his experience has been with starlets.

It is easy to see what would have happened when Kissinger proposed a cutback in the production of nuclear submarines.

The Soviets would have balked, claiming it needed a larger Navy to match the sea power of Paramount.

And you can bet Paramount would have refused to sign any pact reducing its fleet unless there was an equivalent retrenchment in the air force.

Make no mistake about it, a studio arms race would have made it far more difficult to keep the lid on the munitions production.

For how could the Pentagon justify selling Phantom Jets to Israel unless it also made warplanes available to 20th Century Fox?

It is doubtful that any President, however dedicated to disarmament, could have withstood the pressures of the military-industrial-movie complex.

The wisdom of Defense Department cooperation in war films is particularly apparent at this time when the United States is trying to persuade NATO nations in Europe would be meaningless if the studios had large standing armies.

Burglary task force

I sincerely hope that the city will receive whatever money it needs to pay for the police special burglary task force. Recently my parents and sister were victims of a breakin at an apartment complex in Pomona. My father has had three heart attacks and this could have been fatal for him. My mother had never had any heart illness. She had a heart attack six days later and is still in the hospital.

My young sister will never forget the terror. The detective on the case told me they have sometimes twenty such cases per day in Pomona. Yet not many of these are put in the newspaper. Perhaps, because so many are not news anymore, or because the apartment complexes do quite a bit of advertising and the newspaper accounts would frighten away tenants and they like to keep things quiet.

Whatever the reason, people renting apartments should be warned to have the locks changed the first day in the apartment. Bolt locks should also be added, and some protection for their windows. If they have windows that slide back and forth, a piece of wood or a bar of some kind put in the groove so that the window will not slide, and the same thing in the sliding glass door tracks.

Young people in their first apartment, newlyweds, and older people who have not rented an apartment in years, are eager to make new friends quickly, and should be warned to take precautions. Unfortunately, Pomona is not the safe, happy town it used to be. Hopefully, with cooperation and money for the police, it can be again. — Marilyn Troli, Pomona.

Gossip for today

We Americans are literally second to no other race in the world in our ability to demonstrate the finer points in the art of the pot calling the kettle black. Recently, in articles and editorials which appeared in newspapers throughout the country, we piously bemoaned the booing of athletes competing in the World University Games in Moscow. But only a few days later, right here in the United States, who were the folks, I ask you, who were reported to have booed the 12-year-old Little League ball players from Taiwan?

INSIDE REPORT

No evidence of Watergate probe

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — The mid-August spurt of presidential statements on Watergate has made unmistakably clear that the new investigation President Nixon said he ordered March 21 simply did not exist. The closest to any such order was an offhand presidential request relayed March 28 by then presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman asking the Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst to pass along information incriminating White House or campaign aides if it ever turned up.

This by no means implicates the President in the Watergate cover-up. But the non-investigation points up two disturbing elements: first, even when the walls were crumbling, the President made little effort to probe deeply into the scandal. Second, and more disturbing, his public claims of ordering an investigation when one really did not take place reflect the imprecision and inaccuracy of many presidential comments on Watergate. Weary though the President and many Americans are with Watergate, critics will continue to contrast such comments with reality.

In his April 17 statement, the President first declared he had "begun intensive new inquiries" once new charges were brought to his attention March 21 — presumably when then White House counsel John W. Dean III told the President there was a cancer on the presidency. In his April 30 televised address, the President declared that on March 21 he 'personally ordered all those conducting the investigations to get all the facts and to report them directly to me."

Challenge from Weicker

Nobody challenged thees statements until the Senate Watergate hearings when Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut asked Justice Department officials whether they had received any such request. The answer from Kleindienst, Assistant Atty. Gen. Henry Peterson and former FBI Director L. Patrick Gray was unanimous: no.

But in his Aug. 15 supplementary statement, Mr. Nixon reiterated that he "immediately began new inquiries" after March 21. Pressed for details at his Aug. 22 news conference, Mr. Nixon asserted he "had a contact made with the Attorney General (Kleindienst) himself and . . . told him — this was on the 27th of March — to report to me directly anything he found in this particular area."

Did this refute Kleindienst's sworn testimony that the President did not contact him? No. According to authoritative White House sources, Mr. Nixon's contact was indirect: a March 28 telephone call by Ehrlichman. Moreover, thanks to Ehrlichman's egregious habit of surreptitiously recording his own telephone conversations, the offhand quality of that request is indisputable.

Ehrlichman spent the first several minutes urging Kleindienst to attack Sen. Weicker; Kleindienst refused. Then, in by-the-way fashion, Ehrlichman said the President had told him to report he had no information that anybody "in the White House had any prior knowledge of this burglary. He said that he's counting on you to provide him with any information to the contrary if it ever turns up and you just contact him direct." The same, Ehrlichman continued, applies to campaign committee staffers. There was no reference whatever to disturbing new information supplied the President March 21.

With good reason, Kleindienst did not interpret Ehrlichman's call as connoting presidential urgency, much less calling for an intensive new investigation.

Ehrlichman's inquiry

Two days after this conversation, President Nixon has said, he ordered Ehrlichman "to conduct an independent inquiry" without informing the Justice Department. Ehrlichman has testified his interviews of a half-dozen people constituted no "investigation."

According to the President, Ehrlichman gave him the inquiry's results April 14 and he was instructed to pass them to Kleindienst. In a brief telephone conversation that night, according to Kleindienst's sworn testimony Ehrlichman told him he had been "investigating" Watergate but gave no details.

Shocked, Kleindienst replied he should turn over any information to the Justice Department to avoid obstruction of justice charges. Ehrlichman answered, according to Kleindienst, that "it really doesn't make any difference anymore" because ex-campaign aide Jeb Magruder was talking to federal prosecutors anyway. That was the end of the conversation. That same night saw the now famous post-midnight briefing of Kleindienst by prosecutors.

The April 14 Ehrlichman-Kleindienst conversation was also surreptitiously recorded, but the tape was not submitted to the Senate committee and is believed in the White House files. It might provide further evidence of the strange non-communication between the President and the government's investigators as the scandal broke last spring.

Presidential aides and some Republican politicians claims the public is past caring about such details. But so long as Mr. Nixon persists in talking about investigations that were never made and reports never delivered, questions will be asked and suspicions nurtured.

La Verne family visits Europe in a camper

LA VERNE — Traveling by camper in Europe is apparently a rarity. This is the observation of a La Verne family which has just returned from a yearlong trip from the Nordic countries to the tip of the African continent.

The Daryl Brandt family, which includes four children, has been gone for the past year covering 22,650 miles in 30 countries, traveling in their own camper. It was the only one of its kind which they saw on the entire trip, a 1967 GMC camper, a common sight on any U.S. highway.

Everywhere they went it drew the curious. At camp grounds, rest stops and in parking lots they found themselves surrounded by interested people and gave tours, showing off its advantages for traveling.

An editor for a Scandinavian magazine about travel trailers saw it and asked to see everything about it.

The Brandts found it to be a good way to get acquainted with people, especially their fellow campers when they made stop-overs. They found that other campers did use trailers and some motor homes and many Volkswagon buses, yet most Europeans out on "holiday" used tents, some of them elaborate affairs with several rooms. On one occasion they saw a small vehicle something like a camper, English made.

This was a year long trip planned for by the Brandt family. Keith, the eldest child, had just completed the eighth grade. Lori Ann would be in the sixth grade and could, with her parents guidance, handle independent study for a year. David and Ruthie, in primary grades, could miss a year without too much difficulty.

Brandt, a teacher in special education at Gladstone School, was granted a sabbatical year for travel and study of systems for special education, especially in England. His wife, Nancy, freed herself from her many community involvements.

The family was readied for the long trip by the experiences of a summer traveling to Alaska three years ago. Both Daryl and Nancy had been in Europe while they were Brethren Service Volunteers and had hoped for more time to travel then. Part of their assignment had been in Morocco.

The Brandts decided that their best means of transportation would be their own camper. Living in it would solve a great many problems. They could cook foods to which the family was accustomed as well as save money. It would free them from motel and hotel expenses and the need to meet reservation dates. They could stay almost anywhere, including the Eastern block of countries.

Leaving La Verne on June 19, 1972, they drove the camper to New York City and it was loaded on a ship headed for Antwerp, Belgium. Ten days later they picked it up after they had flown across, landing in Luxembourg. During a 9-day wait they had traveled in the near area in Germany, The Netherlands and France, by boat, train and bus. In Amsterdam they made a special point of visiting the home where Anne Frank had lived.

Mrs. Brandt said that before leaving the U.S. she had felt that it would be fun to travel that way, staying in motels and hotels and eating in all kinds of restaurants and inns. But she found hers and the family's reactions to be quite the contrary. It was no fun.

They were very glad to move into their camper when they got to Antwerp. A few things such as blankets had been stolen en route from New York, but they replaced them and started out.

From that time on they slept every night in the camper. In each country they tried to find an especially indigenous restaurant, but they prepared most meals, shopping for groceries and produce along the way with no difficulty.

The camper never let them down. They had only one flat tire throughout the year and no major mechanical problems.

Both Brandts commented about the feeling of security it gave them to have a home base, a constant center for the family.

They found the roads in western Europe to be very good and traffic much heavier than when they were there 13 years ago. Their most hazardous driving was on a one-way road which skirted the fjords in Norway and the narrow roads along the seacoast of Portugal.

When in doubt as to whether their camper could take a certain route they would wheel in behind a truck or bus knowing that those drivers knew where they were going and could get through. A few times they did get lost but found that people in general were very courteous and helpful. One time at least 10 men gathered around them trying to counsel them as to the best way to go since the road on which they were traveling was being worked on and the Brandts had gotten themselves about half-way to their destination.

The family acknowledged that travel through the Iron Curtain countries caused more tension. They kept a tight rein on the children to "behave."

The Brandts said that they visited a few acquaintances along the way, such as Bob Minnich in Bergen, Sweden. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Minnich of Claremont, and is studying for his doctorate there. They also saw Dale Ott in Switzerland, an old friend whose mother and sister live in Pomona, and by pure chance Steve and Ann West in Istanbul. She is the former Ann Keim, formerly of Pomona. In Morocco they met Dr. Tom Pencheon, professor at UCLA, who was making a study of the Berbers. He had come to know the Wests and in the chance conversation with the Brandts told them of the Wests' presence in Istanbul.

Everywhere they went, the Brandts found that traveling as a family gave them many more chances for getting acquainted with people. Their small daughter, Ruthie, an outgoing youngster, usually went out in search of someone to play with at the campgrounds.

Playing with a Frisbie usually drew interested children and adults who were invited to join in. They found that even a language barrier can be overcome with a game of dominoes. Monopoly was a favorite game of the Brandts and they found sets in shops which had streets and real estate named for use in other cities and played these games with new acquaintances.

The Brands' travels allowed them to spend time to see all kinds of special things such as the Russian ballet and circuses, the Vienna Choir Boys singing Mass in their own church, being present in St. Peters Cathedral in Rome for the elevation of 30 Cardinals, attending a performances of "Aida" and "La Boheme" and being awakened by the 4 a.m. call to prayer by the Moslem priest in Istanbul high in his tower near where they stayed overnight.

They feel that they saw, felt and heard all the things they had hoped to experience.

Would they go globe riding again? Yes, they say, but not back to Europe. They have satisfied that wish.

CAMPEROVING NATION TO NATION

Monopoly was a favorite game of the Daryl Brandt family of La Verne that has recently returned from a year-long trip of Europe by camper. Playing a game here are daughter, Ruth, 7, Mrs. Brandt, Brandt and son, David, 9. Brandt is a special education teacher at the Gladstone School.

Friday showdown scheduled for San Dimas school buy

By LENORE WALLACE
P-B Staff Writer

SAN DIMAS — The city's interest in buying the old San Dimas Elementary School property for a park may be settled once and for all Friday.

Attending a meeting at San Dimas City Hall at 9:30 a.m. will be Don Anderson of the State Allocation Board, Sen. H. L. Richardson, R-19th Dist., Assemblyman Bill Lancaster, R-49th Dist., local school district officials, and Mayor Thomas Nuss and James Lough, vice mayor of San Dimas.

City Manager Bob Poff said the meeting will not be open to the public since the city will be discussing possible negotiations for the former school property that has been vacant for six years.

The city was anxious to purchase the site up until a fire destroyed the auditorium of the school Aug. 28.

Vice Mayor Lough feels that the city's purchase of the school site is "a whole new ball game" because of the fire. Lough has suggested that the city look for other possible park sites in the neighborhood.

Lough and Bryce Bailey, recreation director for the city, surveyed the neighborhood around the park this week seeking suitable park sites. Lough has suggested that the city could use several lots instead of one large park area. These could be improved with basketball courts, picnic areas and a tot lot.

Ray Witt, commander of the San Dimas American Legion, said he would be interested in attending the meeting if invited. The original plan was for the Legion to share the purchase cost of the building with the city and it would use the auditorium for a meeting hall.

Witt said the fire at the auditorium has brought "mixed" reactions from members about what their next step should be. Witt said the executive board of the Legion voted to "forget the project" but the commander, who wasn't at the board meeting, feels differently.

"I feel we could use the building if the walls are safe for use."

Witt said it would be expensive for the Legion to rebuild the roof and restore the building but he said it would also be expensive to build a new building.

He has estimated that it would cost $35,000 to restore the building plus the $25,000 purchase cost which would be the Legion's share if the city purchases the property for $53,000.

A new appraisal of the property will be necessary since the fire.

Witt said the auditorium is the only possibility for a meeting hall for the organization in the city. He said it has been suggested that the top floor of a downtown market be used but he said he has estimated it would cost about $35,000 to improve the building for use.

The commander said the Legion hasn't had a meeting hall since the former building was sold two years ago when it became impossible to insure it. The former building is located in an area behind the Puddingstone Shopping Center.

He said he is certain American Legion members from surrounding towns would share functions with San Dimas if a meeting hall could be found.

If the city and the American Legion decide against the purchase of the school property Friday, it will leave the school district in a bind because of the present zoning which doesn't permit commercial uses.

The city has said it will not change the zoning to commercial use as requested by the school district.

At last Monday night's City Council meeting, Wes Edmondson, president of the San Dimas Civic Association, asked the council what could be done to tear down the fire razed auditorium which is a hazard for neighborhood children.

City Manager Robert Poff said the city could possibly enforce its nuisance ordinance. City Atty. Norman Oliver said he would have a legal opinion on the matter in the near future.

LA VERNE — This city may get its first pizza and beer parlor downtown next month.

Objections to the sale of beer at 2340 D St. were overruled by Carl A. Pierson, a hearing officer in the office of administrative hearings this week.

Protestors to the issuance of the license have 40 days in which to file appeals with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

In recommending the issuance of the license to Jon and Bobbie Knerr, operators of Warehouse Pizza, the hearing officer concluded that those who objected did so on moral grounds rather than on factual or legal bases. He ruled that moral grounds were not admissible as evidence.

There are four establishments holding beer licenses within the city right now, but none of them are downtown.

If no one files an appeal, the Knerrs will automatically get their license in October.

Painting of swimming steps urged

SAN DIMAS — City Councilman D.F. Hooper has requested that steps at Puddingstone Swim Park be painted to warn visitors of their existence.

Mrs. Paul Spencer of San Dimas was treated at San Dimas Community Hospital for injuries received when she tripped on the steps in the pavilion of the swim park at a party Saturday night. She later was released.

Hooper said Mrs. Spencer's fall, shortly after her arrival at the party which was sponsored by the San Dimas and La Verne chambers of commerce, marred the party for many.

He said something needed to be done about the steps which aren't marked. "I almost fell myself once," Hooper said. "It's a dangerous situation."

He suggested that the city staff contact the county to see what could be done about painting the steps. He said he would also like to see the steps at the entrances to city hall painted.

Otherwise, Hooper said the fiesta was a huge success and congratulated both chambers for their efforts. He said about 500 people attended the party.

Kaldenbachs home

Kaldenbach is now back on duty at the La Verne City Hall. He is the director of parks and recreation for the city.

Saudi Arabia dropping velvet glove approach

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

When King Faisal of Saudi Arabia visited Washington in 1971, he gently prodded the United States to bring pressure on Israel to withdraw from the Arab territories she seized in the 1967 war. Today, a steel tip has been added to the prod.

As the United States grapples with inflation and goes through two devaluations of the dollar, the ideological and economic goals of the Arab oil producing states merge and become one.

This is especially true of King Faisal.

Saudi Arabia played no active role in the 1967 Arab Israeli war. But as protector of two of Islam's holy places, Medina and Mecca, Faisal also feels a responsibility for Israeli-held old Jerusalem. His opposition to Israel therefore takes on the aspects of a holy war.

Saudi Arabia long has been regarded as one of the United States' few friends in the Middle East.

But uncertainties effecting the world's leading currencies, especially the dollar, have injected a new element into the picture. Saudi Arabia and other Arab oil producing states are beginning to believe their oil is better off in the ground, especially since oil revenues already are piling up faster than they can be used effectively in the development of the exporting countries.

In the face of American pressure to nearly double her present export of around eight million barrels of oil per day, Saudi Arabia is dropping her velvet glove approach and stating bluntly the relationship she sees between the export of oil to the United States and the role she believes the U.S. should play in the Middle East.

In an interview with the National Broadcasting Company, Faisal declared:

"We are deeply concerned that if the United States does not change its policy in the Middle East and continues to side with Zionism, then, I am afraid, such course of action will affect our relations with our American friends because it will place us in an untenable position in the Arab world and vis-a-vis the countries which Zionism seeks to destroy."

Last weekend, Libya nationalized the last six Western oil companies, five of them U.S. owned, operating on its territory. Oil sources in Tripoli said similar measures may be forthcoming by the Persian states, Saudi Arabia among them.

Closely tied with Saudi Arabia's review of her ties with the United States are her improving relations with Egypt.

Faisal, who is in active charge of his country's foreign relations, has used his oil wealth in the last year to win African states away from Israel.

He choose to conclude an $800 million contract for Saudi Arabia's air defenses with Britain rather than with the United States.

He has discussed with France the purchase of Mirage jet fighters instead of the Phantoms he first discussed buying from the United States.

Bridge

Sir Lancelot trips himself

By Oswald & James Jacoby

When Tristram de Lyonesse arrived at King Arthur's court he had already established a reputation as the best knight in Cornwall. What wasn't known was that he also was a top bridge player.

This gave him a chance to work a beautiful swindle against none other than Sir Lancelot the first time he got into the game.

Tristram proceeded to ruff his partner's good heart in order to lead a diamond.

If Tristram had not made this play. Lancelot would have laid down his ace of spades when he got in and then finessed against Tristram's queen after the jack dropped.

As it was Lancelot gazed long and hard against the country bumpkin who had already shown his prowess with sword and shield. Could he be equally good with cards?

Finally, Lancelot decided that Tristram would never waste a trump if he held an honor. He did play his ace of spades, but after Gareth's jack dropped Lancelot tried to drop the queen with dummy's king.

Agnew hometowners claim press unfair to vice president

By FRED McNEESE

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) —Ken Smith works the chair closest to the door of the Alleghany barber shop here cutting hair and criticizing news coverage of a hometown boy —Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

"Ninety nine per cent of the people that come in here and in this town feel that the press is crucifying the man," Smith said. "Even the people that never voted for Agnew think that the press has really been unfair to him with all the leaks about what he has supposed to have done and no proof at all."

Sam Cimino, sitting on a bench in front of the Baltimore County courthouse, agrees that the press has not treated Agnew fairly during a federal probe into alleged kickbacks to Maryland officials from consulting and engineering firms.

"I think the newspapers should have waited until some facts were presented before they came out with the assumption that he is going to be indicted," he said.

For most of those interviewed in this county, where Agnew first held elective office, the news reports have done nothing to lessen support for him.

In fact, the heat wave, the Orioles ability to win and the Colts inability to do so are more prominent topics of conversation where people gather.

Investigations into alleged corruption are becoming a way of life in this county. Charges of "carnal bribery" have been filed against the county prosecutor. The former speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates and former U.S. Sen. Daniel Brewster are prominent county figures convicted for past misdeeds.

The latest indictment came Aug. 24 against Dale Anderson, Agnew's successor as the county's chief executive. He is charged with 39 counts of bribery, extortion and conspiracy.

Ray Miller, waiting while his car went through the Whiz Fast Car Wash, said, "These are not the first charges of corruption and I know they won't be the last."

"I think Agnew is just as bad as the rest of them but not any worse," said Tawney, a Democrat. "This graft has been going on for years so what is the use of trying to stop it now is what I want to know."

Navajos charge disrespect for their land by campers

By ERNEST and FLORENCE DICK

"Fishing, scenery, starlit skies, wide open spaces . . , and you can still hear a coyote at night."

Those words by Martin Link, department head of museum and research, Navajo Tribal Museum at Window Rock, Ariz., were an accurate description of the Navajo reservation we visited in the fall and, for a longer time, in the spring.

Window Rock, capital of the Navajo Reservation, is reached by taking Highway 666 north from Highway 66 in Gallup, N.M., approximately nine miles, then turning west on Highway 68.

"Tseghahodzani" ("The Rock With a Hole in It") was declared the center of administration for the Navajo Tribe by John Collier, commissioner of Indian affairs, in the 1930's. The "window," almost 50 feet in diameter and visible from a long distance, was formed through the ages by the action of wind, water and sand on the reddish sandstone cliffs. Below its base is the site of a historic dwelling, used between 700 and 1100 A.D. Figures, still visible, were painted and carved on the rock face. A spring once flowed at the base of the rock, and medicene men used its waters for rain-making ceremonies. The area is protected by th Navajo Tribe. Window Rock Tribal Park is open to visitors, with picknicking and photography permitted.

It comes as a surprise to many people to learn that this is the private land of the Navajo people, and is not to be treated as a National Park. In the past few years, tourism has been encouraged, as there are so many spectacular sights here, and it was hoped that the economy of the local area would be helped by the sale of Indian crafts.

There are several designated campgrounds on the reservation, but many tourists have set up camp wherever they chose, and as one Navajo put it, "Camping on my land is like going to Chicago, and camping in a resident's back yard."

Those who have disrespect for the law are making it increasingly difficult for other visitors, and increasing numbers of Navajos are favoring off-limits regulations.

"The parks and recreation department has doubled its staff, but it has built only one new campground in 10 years," Link says. "It is all we can do to maintain the campgrounds, and we've had to abandon some." Vandalism is rampant, according to Link, and visitors are mostly to blame. "The Indians have their own camping spots on their own land," he says.

"Today's campers are not the elderly, as they were, mainly, in the past, and we have to adjust to a new kind of tourist who simply has no respect for the land. He scatters trash, illegally picks up fossils and digs up pottery. One visitor even hooked a chain onto his trailer in a campground, and pulled the iron grill out of the fireplace. Thievery is bad. Navajos are not used to putting locks on their doors when going to summer camp in the mountains."

In 1972, a resolution was presented at the Navajo Tribal Councl meeting to enact an antiquities preservation law to protect excavation sites and objects of antiquity or general scientific interest. The bill was overwhelmingly passed.

To date, touris m has not brought much money into this reservation. Whereas the Pueblos have their tourist attractions and guides, the Navajos have no roadblocks, and 17 rangers assist and control 25,000 square miles. Twelve of the rangers are on field duty; the others are in administration. This means each ranger has the responsibility of more than 2,000 square miles. The Navajo Tribal Councl has passed but, at this writing, had not put into effect, a camping fee. The tribe feels it has paid for maintenance long enough.

With the new Indian movement, there is more reluctance toward being "stared at." "Tourists sometimes leave their manners at home," Lind says. "One tourist even wanted to charge a Navajo for having his picture taken, and another visitor said he was going to write his congressman, after picking up a Navajo hitchhiker, and learning that the man couldn't speak English."

"I may sound like a pessimist, but I am not," Link says. "If I have a message to give to visitors, it is this: "Come and see the land. Become involved. Respect it for what it is. Don't try to change it. Nature is so extreme around here, and ts is such a good place. When you see a culture that has grown up in this environment, there is something t learn. If Christ felt that in order t renew His spirit He had to spend 40 days in the wilderness, maybe He's trying to tell us something."

The Navajo Tribal Museum is located at the Navajo Tribal Fairgrounds. Address is Post Office Box 797, Window Rock, Ariz., 86515. Open seven days a week, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m (except Christmas, New Year's, Easter and Thanksgiving), the museum is dedicated to the preservation and presentation of the cultural heritage of the Navajo people and the natural sciences of the Navajo country. Administered by the parks and recreation department of the Navajo tribe, its operating expenses are derived solely from tribal funds.

Collections housed in the museum are among the finest and most complete found in any museum of comparable size. Thousands of articles of Navajo and other Southwest Indian tribes are on display, as well as artifacts of prehistoric cultures and specimens of geological and biological interest.

From Wednesday through Sunday, the 27th annual Navajo Nation Fair will be held at the fairgrounds in Window Rock. Largest Indian fair in the world, the event features exhibits of produce and livestock, 4 H and domestic arts, silversmithing and weaving; sports and games; and a nightly program of dancng, singing and pageantry. Navajo girls compete, prior to the fair, in local contests, and queens are chosen on the basis of beauty, talent and poise. Each of the five agencies of the reservation chooses a winner to compete for the "Miss Navajo" title, announced the last evening of the fair. The winner is crowned with a diadem of silver and turquoise, and she reigns for a year, traveling throughout the United States and other countries as official representative of the Navajo Tribe.

Rodeos and horse racing are held, and native foods are served. More than 50,000 visitors attended the 1972 event. Reunions of relatives, separated throughout the year by distance and time, are common at the event.

Governing the Navajo Tribe is a Tribal Council of 74 elected members, presided over by an elected chairman and vice-chairman. Present chairman is Peter MacDonald.

Elections are held every four years. Each councilman represents approximately 1,800 Navajos. Delegates meet four times a year in the octagonal Council House, which represents a ceremonial hogan. Wall murals in the Council House depict the history of the Tribe. Beside the entrance of the chambers is a bell, presented by the Santa Fe Railroad in appreciation of the service of thousands of Navajos who helped to build and maintain the Santa Fe line. It is used to call Council sessions.

The Navajo have made considerable industrial progress in recent years, operating sawmills, establishing outlets for their craftwork and producng oil, gas and other products.

Many major industries have opened branch facilities on the reservation.

In 1968, General Dynamics Pomona opened its Navajo Facility at Fort Defiance, five miles from Window Rock. Some 85 trained Navajos are presently employed in electronic assembly and test work. John Hunt, production superintendent, says of the employees, "My people are very adaptable."

The air-conditioned concrete and steel building houses offices, a machine shop, a test equipment maintenance and calibration area and more than 21,000 square feet of production floor space. New employes receive instruction in soldering, electronic welding, wiring and assembly techniques in a separate training room.

In charge of quality control is Michael Enfield, a former Pomona resident, who lives in Window Rock with his wife, Cindy, and three sons. The family has been active in civic, social and church affairs in the three years they have lived on the Indian reservation.

Cindy grew up on a ranch in Utah, and the family is "sold" on life in the great outdoors. Mike started the 4-H Club in Window Rock, and is now particpating in the formation of a fire department. Cindy is an officer in the Window Rock Area Homemakers Club that boasts more than 50 members among Indian and Anglo women. Club members have promoted and helped to maintain an excellent public library.

Information on all recreation and tourism in Navajo land can be obtained by writing Navajo Parks and Recreation Department, P.O. Box 418, Window Rock, Ariz., 86515. Rest areas and picnic tables are located along the major highways on the reservation.

L.A. County oranges hurt by cool air

LOS ANGELES — One of the coolest Augusts on record caused a few crop development problems, according to Ralph W. Lichty, Los Angeles County agricultural commissioner.

Lichty said citrus trees look fine but the fruit set on navels and valencias is one of the lightest in years. The lemon crop looks better than the orange crop, and the fruit is sizing well at this time, he added.

In the Los Angeles basin a few acres were planted to strawberries, but the bulk of the berries will be planted in October. Harvest of grain now is complete and some growers are discing their stubble, said Lichty.

Youth lifts tractor to free buddy

Kennebec County investigator Leo Bazinet said Arthur Hinkley, 18, heard the screams of Lloyd Bachelder, also 18, who was pinned in the seat of the vehicle when it tipped over while Bachelder was attempting to lift a junked car.

Hinkley, who was working on the Bachelder farm, somehow lifted the tractor enough for Bachelder to wriggle out. He was taken to a Waterville hospital where he was reported in good condition Wednesday with a fractured hip and internal injuries.

"I don't know how I did it," Hinkley told Bazinet, "I can't remember anything."

Plane tips agents on illegal aliens

SAN DIEGO (UPI) —Two border patrol agents, tipped off about possible alien activity by a spotter plane, arrested 66 illegal aliens recently at a house in the city's southeast sector.

The agents followed a car with eight aliens from an area near the international border to the house.

The aliens were awaiting transportation to Los Angeles and other points north.

Japan's steel industry: no space, will travel

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan's mighty steel industry is running out of places to build new mills in the cramped Japanese islands.

As a result, Japanese steelmen soon will be looking for developing countries that need steel mills and are willing to build them in partnership with Japan.

Those are the conclusions of the steel committee of the Japanese government's Council for Industrial Reorganization, an elite body of business executives who advise Japan's political leaders on long-term industrial prospects.

"The steel industry should actively contemplate overseas sites in parallel with domestic locations," the council told the government a few weeks ago.

Japan's steel industry has been a handmaiden of her post World War II economic miracle. Japan's bombed-out mills made less than two million metric tons of crude steel in 1945, the year of her surrender.

In the 1972 calendar year, crude steel production reached 69 million metric tons, trailing only the Soviet Union and the United States. It may approach 120 million metric tons this year. And all this production is crammed into an area of 144,986 square miles, slightly small than California.

"We have the problem of getting sites for plants and trying to build non-polluting plants," said Yogoru Komatsu, director general of the Industrial Policy Bureau of Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI).

Komatsu said that arrangements for Japanese steel ventures overseas must fit the needs of developing countries.

"The basic principle is to help the economies of less developed countries with desirable results for Japan," he explained. "If we fail to extend cooperation to them, our own future is not hopeful. No civilization can stand alone."

Komatsu said Japan is not overly concerned about the threat of nationalization, because her steel ventures will go only where they are welcomed.

At present Japan has only two direct steel investments overseas. One is Nippon Steel Corp. investment in the Udiminas plant in Brazil. The other is a projected plant at Auburn, New York. Ground has just been broken for this wholly owned Japanese venture. Ataka and Co., a trading firm, and Kyoei Saka Ltd., a machinery maker, are partners in the deal. There are also many Japanese loans to foreign steel firms and technical cooperation agreements.

The government's Council for Industrial reorganization says that Japan eventually will cease to be a steel exporting country except for a few high-technology products.

It says virtually all of Japan's domestic steel production will be needed to meet internal demands.

Japan presently supplies 30 to 40 per cent of the world's steel exports The United States and China are the largest customers. However, South Korea, Saudi Arabia and some other developing countries have a critical dependence on Japan's steel.

Criminal action kills 14 police during August

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Fourteen law enforcement officers were killed nationwide due to criminal action during August, according to the FBI. During August, 1972, eight officers were slain.

According to information collected through the FBI's uniform crime reporting program, a total of 93 local, county and state law enforcement officers were killed due to criminal action during the first eight months of 1973 compared to 72 officers slain last year.

Eighty-seven of the 93 officers were killed through the use of firearms, 64 of these slayings were committed with handguns, the FBI said.

THE FOX BY AUDI — A newcomer to the Audi line is the Fox. The front-wheel drive car is available in both two and four door styles with choice of four speed or automatic transmission.

Audi introduces new machine--the Fox

The Fox, the newest car offering from Audi, shows how starting with a clean sheet of paper and imaginative engineering can produce a clever, nimble car, say the manufacturers.

Though it has a family resemblance to the well-known Audi 100 LS, the Fox is a completely different machine in size and engineering features.

Audi engineers have, through the use of modern computerized design methods, developed a compact, sporty sedan, with plenty of room for four adults. The Fox is 171 inches long, is available in a two-and four-door model and weighs just 1,984 pounds.

The water-cooled, four-cylinder engine powers the front wheels, an Audi feature since 1932. Equipped with an overhead camshaft, the engine is tilted 20 degrees to the right to achieve a lower hood line. The engine is mounted ahead of the transmission to improve traction and help provide more interior space.

"Audi engineers started with a clean sheet of paper and developed a totally new example of what a compact should be. I predict you will see more cars like the Fox from other manufacturers in the future. It's a pacesetter," said John A. Cook, vice president in charge of Porsche-Audi Operations for Volkswagen of America.

Through computer analysis of stress forces in the unitized body shell, Audi engineers were able to determine which areas of the car's body required increased structural integrity. These areas are reinforced and callapsible zones are integrated into the rugged passenger capsule both front and rear to provide added protection.

Other safety features on the new Audi Fox include a diagonally controlled dual braking system and a self-stabilizing steering system. The steering system automatically corrects skids during hard braking. If one front wheel is on ice or water, or if a tire blows out, the Fox can be brought to a sure, straight stop.

To minimize maintenance costs the Fox is designed to travel 10,000 miles between oil changes and maintenance checks. The layout of the engine compartment permits easy access to spark plugs, oil dip stick, distributor and battery. All electrical relays and fuses are centralized in an engine compartment module for easy replacement.

The car's flow-through ventilation system changes the air inside the car three times each minute, even with the windows closed. Air conditioning is available as a factory installed option, as is a full sliding sunroof. An electric rear window demister is standard.

ALL IN THE FAMILY — The Allen Family, rising young pop-rock group, will perform in the John Wayne Theater at Knott's Berry Farm at 1 and 3 p.m. Monday through Sept. 22. Two years ago the four Allen brothers — Tony, 20; Gary, 19; Ronnie, 17, and Larry, 15 — were a barbershop quartet. Then they added sister Mitzi, 14, and turned to soft rock and popular music. Their first record is "Baby, Baby, Don't Bring Me Down" with "Heart's Desire" on the flip side.

Severinsen Bowl concert called off

HOLLYWOOD — The concert of trumpeter Doc Severinsen with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, orignally scheduled for the Hollywood Bowl Wednesday, has been canceled because of the pressures of his television and recording work.

Those holding tickets for the concert can call (213) 87-MUSIC for information on exchanges or refunds.

On Sept. 21 the Philharmonic will perform with the rock group, Procol Harum, and the Roger Wagner Chorale.

The Bowl season will close Sept. 22 with a benefit concert for the Philharmonic's pension fund. John Green will conduct a program of music by Richard Rodgers, Oscar Hammerstein and Lorenz Hart. Singers taking part will be Karen Armstrong, Andress Jordan, Ken Remo and Richard Fredericks.

Green, a veteran of 23 seasons of guest conducting at the Bowl, is a composer, conductor, arranger and pianist in both the light and serious fields. He has won five Academy Awards for his film work, and regularly takes the podium to lead many of the nation's major symphonies.

Miss Armstrong's career began its ascent after the soprano won two important competitions: the San Francisco Opera Auditions in 1965, and in 1966 the Metropolitan Opera Auditions. Since then she has sung with both companies, and those of Santa Fe, Milwaukee and Fort Worth and the New York City Opera.

Miss Jordan has been a featured soloist with the Los Angeles Master Chorale for several seasons.

Fredricks is a leading baritone of the New York City Opera and the San Francisco Opera, as well as of other companies. A versatile performer, he sings repertoire from Handel to Rodgers and Hammerstein, and besides his opera appearances, sings as soloist with many of the country's major orchestras.

Remo's career has led him from the Broadway musical theater to Los Angeles television and recordings. Winner of the 1964 San Francisco Opera Auditions, Remo has since performed with opera companies there and in Los Angeles, San Diego, Honolulu, Montreal, Chicago, Vancouver and Portland.

Pomona girl featured on TV show

POMONA — A 15-year-old Pomona girl will be featured on the ABC television program, "The Girl in My Life," (Channel 7) at 2:30 p.m. next Thursday.

She is Cynthia "Cindy" Massey, daughter of Mrs. Erma Massey and a sophomore at Ganesha High School.

Twice during the past three years Miss Massey has flown to Roseville, Mich., to babysit with the children of her married sister, Mrs. Nancy Bolin, while the latter went to the hospital to have another baby. Mrs. Bolin, unbeknownst to her younger sister, wrote to the TV producers. They invited Miss Massey to appear on the show and had Mrs. Bolin flown out to appear with her.

The show was taped last Sunday in Hollywood. Among the gifts presented to the Pomona girl were a one-week houseboat vacation, a $250 wardrobe, $100 in cash, and a new VW.

Hostels, built on friendship, are havens for travelers

PARIS —(NEA) — Young wanderlust is having a record year. Some 20 million young Europeans are "on the road." In France alone, one out of every two students has crossed the frontier, answering what the French know as "the call of the wild," seeking new pastures, new scenes, new customs.

It is fact that youngsters are more eager to travel far, to explore, to see the world. Thirty years ago such travel was beyond their reach. The commonest modes of locomotion then were bicycling and walking. But educators tell us that the relaxing of family ties and parental authority, as well as better economic conditions, has led to the upsurge in travel.

Favorite spot

A favorite spot is the youth hostel — of which there are some 3,000 in Europe, 250 in France alone.

The grandfather of French youth hostels was Marc Sangnier, a prominent industrialist who, in 1930, donated a large plot of land 40 miles from Paris to build a center where young travelers could gather.

As Sangnier saw it, a youth hostel should be more than just a place to sleep and eat. He dreamed of bringing together adolescents of all nationalities and races, of all philosophies and political opinions, providing them all with a rich basis for understanding their fellow men.

Student's card

What does one need to get into a French youth hostel? First of all a bona-fide student's card issued by his home college is required. In Paris, the maximum stay at the "Auberge de la Jeunesse" hostel is three nights. Here for less than five dollars a day, a student is supplied with a bed, breakfast and two three-course meals. Wine, beer or cider as well as soft drinks are obtainable, and there is a cigarette and ice-cream machine.

The Paris hostel, with its 320 beds, is open from 8 a.m. to midnight. There is an information service and organized visits to various points of interest around the city. A house father and mother are there to help solve every imaginable kind of problem, as well as to supervise a staff of 20 employees. Guests are not even expected to make their own beds.

No trouble

According to M. Durant, the house fahter: "I have never had any serious trouble with my guests. No drug problems, no excessive drinking. Only three guests had to be expelled last year out of a total of 9,000. By and large they might be considered more apathetic than turbulent."

According to Durant, the German and Dutch students are the untidiest. Americans, espeically the girls, are usually the first to ask about laundry facilities. The ratio in the Paris hotel is 90 per cent foreigners to 10 per cent French. This year, of course, there are fewer Americans because of the dollar situation.

According to Pierre Mulet, general-delegate at the french youth hostel headquarters, many youths are inclined to consider a hostel as simply a cheap accommodation where they behave more like "clients" than members of an international club. "They are something of "freeloaders,' believing that everything should be handed to them, forgetting that the real spirit of a hostel should follow the precept of the Spanish inn — that is, to give something of oneself if one wants to receive anything."

Plans afoot

There are more plans afoot to establish another hostel in Paris and to increase the number of residential hostels in vacation centers —at the mountains, sea or river — where students can stay as long as they can afford to. The new hostels would offer all kinds of sports facilities, even equipment for riding, deep-sea fishing and canoeing, free of charge.

"All these plans may be considered somewhat utopian," agreed Mulet, "but we want to put across the idea that a hostel is neither a cheap hotel nor a welfare center. We do believe we have a human and social mission." Over the door of the Paris headquarters an inscription read: "Love is stronger than hate."

Oldest licensed driver

McDonnell was born in Chicago on June 20, 1871.

McDonnell said that in 51 years of driving he has never been involved in an accident or even had a fender dented. He added that the only time he was stopped by police—for doing 40 in a 25-mile zone—"the cop took one look at my license and turned me loose."

In Washington, where Motor Vehicle officials have discretionary authority to require retesting when license renewal time arrives, McDonnell said he has only been asked twice to take the test.

"The last time," he said, "they sent a paper to my doctor. Then they checked my eyes."

McDonnell admits, however, that he finds today's traffic too fast for him, particularly in the populated places.

"I haven't driven in down town Seattle in 20 years," he said, "but I still go at times to North Gate (a shopping center near Seattle's northern city limits)."

"I think it will outlive me," he said of his present car, a 1967 Volkswagen.

Cats need shots, too

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (UPI) — Pet cats as well as dogs should be vaccinated against rabies, say Dr. C.J. Peetz, president of the Animal Medical Care Foundation of Marin County. Many persons do not realize that cats can contract rabies, Peetz says.

Collective bargaining okayed for teachers

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill giving all California public school teachers collective bargaining rights except the right to strike has reached its final legislative hurdle.

On a 53-22 vote Monday, the Assembly approved the measure by Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, and returned it to the Senate for concurrence on amendments.

During floor debate one coauthor, Assemblyman Willam T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, called for the measure's defeat. He said there were many unresolved issues.

Under the bill (SB400), public school teachers in all grades as well as faculty members at the University of California and state colleges would be extended collective bargaining rights similar to those of labor union members in private industry.

Assemblyman Howard L. Berman, D-Los Angeles, pointed out public employes are not authorized to strike under current laws. He told the Assembly he believed the measure created machinery that would make teacher walkouts "much less" likely than presently exist.

The measure repeals existing laws covering teacher bargaining and establishes new negotiating procedures, including a provision for secret ballot union representation elections. It also establishes an "agency shop" in which teachers who choose not to join a union would pay a fee equivalent to dues to the union.

Assemblyman Mike D. Antonovich, D-Los Angeles, offered amendments to repeal the "agency shop" provision but they were tabled on a 46-25 vote.

During debate, Berman noted the legislation provided for fact-finding and arbitration but said the recommendations of an arbiter would not be binding on a school board of trustees unless the board agreed.

But opponents, such as Assemblyman Newton Russell, R-Tununga, warned the measure would strip the board of its power of government.

"There are absolutely no limits on the scope of bargaining," Russell insisted. "What we are really talking about is power—who is going to control the schools ... There are no management rights clauses."

The bill also would create a three-member state commission appointed by the governor to supervise operation of the legislation and calls for collective bargaining sessions to be held in public.

Insurance sales rising

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Increases in population and family formations will bring life insurance in force in the United States to $2 trillion by 1978, according to Marvin N. Demchick, president of Life of Pennsylvania Financial Corp.

Demchick also cited greater awareness of the need for adequate insurance protection and expansion of group coverage as factors contributing to the growth of life insurance in force. He said new products such a variable life insurance and portable pensions as factors.

Schools kept open despite teacher strike

CUPERTINO (UPI) —Substitutes and non-striking teachers Thursday kept open the 42 schools in the Cupertino Elementary School District, largest in the state, when teachers went on strike.

The Cupertino Education Association said 700 of its 900 members refused to report for work.

At issue was district proposal to pay teachers a two per cent pay increase and $250 "purchasing power improvement bonus." The CEA sought a flat percentage increase.

10 years after big march: have goals been reached by Blacks?

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The city closed down the bars and liquor stores and many downtown merchants never opened that day. Tens of thousands of government workers took leave. There were 5,000 policemen, National Guardsmen and Army Reservists in the streets.

Negroes, 200,000 of them, were marching on Washington.

When it was over, writer Marya Mannes commented: "It was a wonderful and immensely important thing that happened here. And the only pity of it was that the people who fled it, the people who deplored it, the people who resented it, missed one of the great democratic experiences of this century: a people claiming, with immense control and dignity, the American rights long denied them."

How it was

But remember how it was in the summer of 1963:

The United States was clutched by racial ferment. Freedom Rides, sit-ins, marches on courthouses and state capitals were popping all over the country. There were violent exchanges between blacks and whites, marchers and police, pickets and hecklers.

Americans, having just begun to adjust to the reality of nuclear weapons and missiles in the 1940s and 1950s, now were confronted with trouble at home, and it was frightening.

In Washington, the President was no less under pressure, prodded more than two years after assuming office into asking Congress for civil rights legislation. The prospects were for long months of windy public debate followed by private horse-trading and enactment of a weak bill.

Jobs, freedom

The "March for Jobs and Freedom" was the dream of Asa Phillip Randolph, then only five years from retirement as president of the Sleeping Car Porters union. Randolph, the only Negro sitting on the AFL-CIO Executive Council, resurrected the idea he had first proposed in 1941, when his threat of a black march on Washington pushed Franklin D. Roosevelt into creation of a federal agency to fight racial discrimination in war industry hiring.

This time the march was for the benefit of Congress, and that made hackles rise on Capitol Hill. Segregationists and civil rights supporters alike warned that Congress would respond in 1963 as it had to the Bonus Army in 1932 —by killing the legislation that the marchers were seeking. Bloodshed, they said, would set back the cause of racial equality by half a century.

The organizers of the march made a concession to this talk —the Capitol was to stand in splendid isolation; ter on the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial.

Hell at High Noon

Washington in August can be like Hell at high noon. The temperature on Aug. 28, 1963, promises rain elsewhere. In Washington, it signifies only sweat.

As late as 10 a.m., the city seemed deserted except for deployed policemen and troopers. Then, they started arriving on the Monument grounds. There were 1,514 chartered buses and 31 special and regular trains. There were thousands of private automobiles; there was a man who roller-skated —from Chicago, he said.

At mid-afternoon, when the "March" had flowed the eight tenths of a mile from the Monument to the Memorial, Metropolitan Police Chief Robert Murray and Park Police Chief Nelson Murdock estimated the crowd at 175,000 to 200,000. It probably was larger; the Washington Post said "more than 200,000" in its Aug. 29 edition and that estimate is the accepted reference now.

It took two and a half hours for the throng to fill the Memorial grounds, the streets in front of it and the banks of the Reflecting Pool, where hundreds cooled their feet.

At least 70 per cent of the marchers were black and older, on the average, than any Washington demonstrators until the adult white middle class started marching against the Vietnam War late in the 1960s.

It was a revival; impassioned but without anger, enthusiastic but never rowdy. There were four arrests, all of outriders heckling or threatening the marchers.

Then the speeches. It was there that Martin Luther King Jr., intoned "I have a dream" —the phrase that became a symbol of his unquenchable faith in nonviolent civil rights activism.

Randolph, Roy Wilkins of NAACP, Whitney Young of the Urban League, Walter Reuther of the Auto Workers union and John Lewis of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee spoke too, but King's soaring sermon and call to action ("We will not be satisfied until justice rolls down like water and righteousness like a mighty stream") was what the marchers, and millions of television watchers, remembered.

Advanced cause

Ten of the leaders went to see President Kennedy and he told them that their march had "advanced the cause of 20 million Negroes" in America.

Did it?

After 10 years, what has come of the goals that 200,000 people marched for on that hot August day?

They had 10 demands for government action. Before a year had passed, their call for civil rights legislation to guarantee access to public accomodations, to bolster voting rights, to create a fair employment practices commission, and to cut off federal subsidies for programs in which discrimination was practiced, had passed Congress and been signed by a new President, Lyndon Johnson.

Congress also responded with programs—but less money than sponsors felt was needed —for job training and the Supreme Court eventually enlarged the protection of the 14th Amendment, as the marchers had asked.

But they called for a minimum wage of $2 an hour (still not a part of federal law); for federal action to bar discrimination in sale or rental of all government-subsidized housing (still a matter of controversy); and for desegregation of all school districts in 1963 (a goal still unreached.)

And they asked for jobs at decent wages for all who had no work. That was central to the march, part of its name.

In August, 1963, the unemployment rate among Negroes and other nonwhites was 10.1 per cent. In July, 1973, it was 9.3 per cent.

FDA conducting study

Preservatives may be cause of cancer

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Government researchers are looking for a possible contributing cause of cancer in bacon and other cured meats but have reached no definite conclusions, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) said Tuesday.

The study, which began several months ago and is now at the midway point, centers on the use of sodium nitrite as a preservative in hot dogs, hams, fish, bacon and a long list of other meat products.

The chemical has been used for decades to give cured meat its red color and to prevent the growth of bacteria which can produce deadly botulism poisoning.

Recent studies, both within and outside the government, have suggested that sodium nitrite may be responsible for the formation of nitrosamines— chemical agents which have been proven to cause cancer in some test animals.

One possible solution under study is a theory that large quanties of vitamin C — ascorbic acid—can somehow prevent sodium nitrite from triggering nitrosamine formations.

The nitrosamine question has been under study by a panel of experts formed by the Agriculture Department and the FDA. The health problem was last in the news on July 19 when the two agencies revealed they had found nitrosamines in some U.S. meat products where sodium nitrite was mixed with spices before being placed in some prepared meat products such as sandwich meats and sausage

The government ordered the nation's meat packing industry at that time to stop premixing curing agents and spices, unless a chemical buffer was employed to prevent the substances of reacting to each other.

Agriculture Department officials have discounted the possibility that a person could develope cancer just from eating cured meats. But researchers outside the government have called for curbs on sodium nitrite use, claiming that it could have a cumulative impact in conjunction with other possible causes of cancer in the environment.

Oil firm delivers records in probe

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —A federal grand jury investigating the operations of major oil companies received several crates of records from Shell Oil Co. and more are on the way, a Shell spokesman said Monday.

The federal panel subpoenaed the records of Shell, Standard, of Calif. Gulf, Texaco, Atlantic-Richfield and Union Oil last July 10, in its investigation to determine whether officials from the companies met to discuss prices

Dodgers digging their own graves

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

HOUSTON — It's impossible to know what else can happen to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

What else is there? There is no easy answer but the Dodgers will find something weird to happen.

When an .036 batter drives in three runs to break your back in a vital game, anything can be expected.

The Dodgers, stunned by Jack Billingham and the Cincinnati Reds Wednesday night, will try to pick up the pieces here tonight in the opener of a four-game series at the Astrodome.

Considering their 1-4 record in the Dome this season this is isn't the most ideal location for the Dodgers to rebound.

Tommy John (12-7) will face lefthander Dave Roberts (14-9) in tonight's opener while the Reds enjoy a night off to celebrate Wednesday's 7-3 victory, before hosting Henry Aaron and the Braves Friday for a three-game set.

The Dodgers need plenty of help from their friends in the National League West if they're going to overtake the defending champions.

"We were four games ahead two weeks ago," Dodger skipper Walt Alston said, "Now we're five games back. Let's hope the same thing happens to them."

At Cincinnati Wednesday, the Dodgers saw Billingham, who once had an 0-for-68 string this year, knock in his first three runs of the campaign with a bases-loaded double over Willie Davis' head.

It's obvious Davis can't run with his bad leg but it's also understandable why he wouldn't be playing Billingham very deep.

Billingham, who has an awesome 096 lifetime average, received a standing ovation from the 50,795 (39,083 paid) Riverfront Stadium fans. His unexpected two-bagger was the key hit in a five-run explosion in the second inning when Claude Osteen was knocked out in a jiffy.

Earlier in the inning, Osteen fielded Darrel Chaney's grounder but had nobody to throw to at first as the infield assignments got messed up. Chaney's "'hit" loaded the bases to set the stage for Billingham.

Dodger pitching, which is supposed to be the strong suit, walked in two runs, an unpardonable sin in the pennant stretch.

Not everything was bad for the Dodgers.

Rookie right-hander Greg Shanahan allowed only one hit in his 3 2-3 innings of work. He prevented what could have been an even bigger inning for the Reds in the second by striking out Johnny Bench and Ed Armbrister with the bases full after forcing in a run by walking Tony Perez.

Osteen's troubles began on a pair of walks to Armbrister and George Foster. Dennis Menke's single scored the first run to get the Reds going.

Thanks to the early lead, ex-Dodger Billingham was able to sail to his 18th victory.

Davey Lopes hit a two-run homer in the third and back-to-back singles by Tom Paciorek and Lopes led to a third tally in the eighth.

But the Reds added a pair of runs in the sixth and seventh off Charlie Hough for unnecessary insurance.

DODGER NOTES . . . IT will be Andy Messersmith, Al Downey, and Don Sutton in that order against the Astros Friday, Saturday, and Sundav with Osten opening the last homestead Monday night against the Giants. The Dodgers have announced that if Hank Aaron ties or breaks Babe Ruth's career home run record next Wednesday or Thursday at Dodger Stadium fans in attendance can send their ticket stubs to the Dodgers in care of P. O. Box 714-what else-to receive a photo of Aaron's accomplishment.

Alston enjoyed a day at his home in nearby Darrtown. The skipper said the highlight was home grown corn-on-the-cob.

The Dodgers had n unuasual reunion with former captain PeeWee Reese. The Dodger bus scraped Reese's car entering the Stadium parking lot.

Al Michaels, the radio voice of the Reds, sounds like a carbon copy of Vin Scully. Michaels denied reports from San Francisco that he has accepted a similar job with the Giants in 1974.

LEAPING LOPES

Dodger second baseman Davey Lopes leaps out of the way of Cincinnati's George Foster to complete the throw to first for a double play in Wednesday night's game. The Reds won anyway, 7-3.

Poly preps for Utah trip

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA —The excitement of pulling off the college football upset of the week and possibly the year hasn't worn off yet but the Cal Poly coaches and players are well aware that 'One game does not a season make.'

The Broncos shocked Pacific Coast Athletic Association powerhouse Fresno State University 17-9 last Saturday night to launch the 1973 grid program.

But that game has come and gone so Poly head coach Roy Anderson and his staff are hard at work preparing the team for Saturday's 1:30 p.m. kickoff with Southern Utah at Cedar City.

The Brocos will board a bus Friday morning, in the Kellogg Field parking lot, and head for Las Vegas, where the team will lunch.

From there, it's on to St. George, Utah and Dixie College where the Broncos will eat supper and have a light practice. The team will then reboard the bus and trek to Cedar City to spend the night.

"We enter the game a 7-point underdog psychologically," said defensive coordinator Marv Weetman. "The kids will be playing after a nine-hour bus ride, besides playing under the unfamiliar conditions of a higher altitude."

Ceder City has a population of 7,543 and an altitude of 8,000 feet.

"Coming off the biggest win in the school's history, we're a target for any team we play so we can't let ourselves get fat heads," continued Weetman. "We're thin in a lot of key positions so if a couple of people get hurt it's going to be tough replacing them."

Southern Utah will also be inspired for other reasons. They'll be out to avenge 9-6 and 22-6 defeats to the Broncos in 1971 and '72 plus the fact they're coming off a narrow 10-3 loss to powerful Chico State last Saturday, which played in the Camellia Bowl two years ago.

In preparing for a '73 Thunderbird team, bigger and stronger than the squad that visited CP last year, the Broncos will be trying to correct some of the mistakes that occurred in last Saturday's season opener.

"I think we should have recorded a shutout over Fresno," said Weetman. "But we are young and inexperienced. We have several freshmen playing in crucial positions and those were the positions where the mistakes occurred.

"Their only touchdown came when defensive back Rod Hiatt, a freshman, misread the play and got burned on a long bomb," he continued. That shouldn't have happened but our younger players are going to make mistakes. We know it. So all we can do is work hard on reading the keys of the opposing offenses and improve."

The Broncs are also looking for another kickoff and punter to replace quarterback Jim Zorn. The southpaw signal-caller did a great job in his role as foot specialist in his first game of the season. His kickoff were consistently reaching the end zone and his punts, although not great in distance . . . 29.9 yard average . . . his seven boots were returned for a total of one yard.

The coaching corps is not unhappy with Zorn's kicking, they just don't want to risk any injuries to him. Zorn, on the opening kickoff, made the tackle that forced the funble which resulted in three points for the Broncos.

In fact, Zorn did everything but sell peanuts and popcorn in his Poly debut. He was successful on nine of 21 passes for 136 yards and two TD's. The Broncos have four non-league battles before their Oct. 13 rivalry with California Collegiate Athletic Association (CCAA) powerhouse Cal Poly San Luis Obispo.

Although it seems impossible the CCAA is tougher than ever.

Fullerton, which has some of the best football material around, will be competing in its final CCAA season. Next year the Titans will join the rugged Pacific Coast Athletic Association after meeting the requirements of securing funds to offer 55-full ride scholarships.

UC Riverside—The Highlanders' budget is increasing therefore so is their football program. They receive approximately twice the amount of funds as Poly receives.

Cal Poly, SLO — is the class of the league because of its location and the financial backing it receives. Ranked as one of the small college powerhouses, the Mustangs have attained their strong program because of its financial ability to recruit grid prospects and its geographical location.

Being isolated from large communities and a large number of universities, small colleges, and junior colleges, the campus presents an ideal location for students to get away from the Southland, but no so far where they can't drive home for a long weekend.

As for the Broncos, it's no secret that financially they can't compete with their CCAA comrades. However, the team does have the support of the school administration.

"The advantage of the other schools have over us is the finances to recruit," said Anderson. "But we're going to get anybody from any place we can from now on. The pressure is on to get a winning team. We'll recruit anybody we can. It will take time, and we knew it would, but our program will get there."

Singer nears 20 wins

LOCAL-NATIONAL Sports

ANAHEIM (UPI)—Bill Singer, who won 20 games with Los Angeles in 1929, is closing in on that mark as a member of the other team in Southern California.

Singer, part of a seven-player trade between the Dodgers and the California Angels last winter, got No. 18 Wednesday night by withstanding a strong Chicago comeback in a 5-5 victory over the White Sox. The White Sox touched Singer for 11 hits but Angel manager Bobby Winkles was determined to let his pitcher stay in the game.

"I went with Singer for a long time tonight and I meant to," Winkles said. "I wanted to give him every chance to get those 20 wins."

After his big season with the Dodgers in 1969, Singer was 8-5 in 1970 including a no-hitter, but fell to 10-17 in 1971 and 6-16 in his last year with the Dodgers. His record in the American League this year is now 18-12.

"I should be able to win 20 because I've won 18 in 36 starts and I've got four starts left," Singer said.

The Angel celebration was marred by the news that seuond baseman Sandy Alomar suffered a broken leg and will be out for the rest of the season. Alomar was injured in a collision at second base in the third inning.

Bob Oliver provided the Angels with the winning run by driving in Winston Llenas with a single in the eighth inning. It was Oliver's third single of the game, and came after the White Sox had come roaring back with four runs in the eighth to tie the game 5-5.

The Angels jumped on loser Terry Forster, 6-7, for three runs in the first and added a pair in the third. Forster, usually a reliever, went the distance despite allowing 16 hits.

Bill Sharp's three-run homer in the eighth was the big hit in Chicago's comeback. Designated hitter Frank Robinson had three hits while Alomar collected a double, a single and two RBI's before leaving in the third inning.

The Angels send Andy Hassler, 0-3, against the Kansas City Royals and Al Fitzmorris, 6-2, in the first of a four-game series tonight.

Fair meet starts Friday with Foothill Stakes first

POMONA — Stakes winning three-year-olds Bensadream and Brush Cutter and two other quick sophomores poised for a shot at an initial victory in an added-money event are among nine horses ready for the $10,000-added Foothill Stakes Friday as the Los Angeles County Fair Meeting at Pomona opens.

The 14-day season includes 11 races daily, Monday through Saturday, with first post time at 1 p.m. Exacta wagering will be offered on the fourth, eighth and eleventh races. In addition to the eight thoroughbred races (fourth through eleventh) there will be one for the appalosas (first race) and two for the quarter horses (second and third).

The foothill, a six-furlong contest which serves as a stepping stone to the Pomona Derby, is the first of 13 thoroughbred stakes to be offered at the half-mile oval where speed and the ability to handle the sharp turns are of special importance.

Trainer M. E. (Buster) Millerick, who saddled Kissin' George for a track record performance at six furlongs five years ago, will boost 1972's leading rider, Don Pierce, aboard Bensadream.

Bensadream, the quick son of Nasharco, captured the Baldwain Stakes at Santa Anita last spring and ran six furlongs in 1.09 at Hollywood Park in his last California outing. He was unsuccessful as the heavy choice in an allowance race at La Mesa Park in his most recent start.

High Protein, set to break from the outside post position under Lambert, contested the Del Mar Derby but his best races at the seaside course were in seven and one-half furlong turf sprints. The son of Cop Conference captured a pair of those events in front-running style.

Francisco Mena, who won the 1972 Foothill aboard Tragic Isle, has the call on Nabu, another son of Nasharco. The front-running colt tallied in 1.09-3-5 at Del Mar in his last start and was runner-up in a pair of allowance sprints.

Midwestern invader Brush Cutter, to be ridden by Nels Peterson, has banked nearly $40,000 this year and has won four of his last five starts the Kentucky-bred colt won the Centennial Derby at a mile and one-sixteenth and more recently tallied in 1.09-2-5 for six furlongs.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. and E. W. Johnston, whose colors have been carried to victory in numerous stakes races at Pomona, are represented in the Foothill roster by the entry of Fleet's Deal and the filly Sleek and Fleet. Frank Olivares is named on both horses.

Cal 500 ready for March

By KEVIN CLOE
P-B Staff Writer

ONTARIO — California's biggest sports attraction, the California 500, will be at Ontario Motor Speedway a little earlier next year.

That may not be news, but the reasoning behind it may be.

The group, which took over the operations at the Speedway after the original owners were forced to close down due to financial problems, has changed the racing date for the prestigious Cal 500 championship car race from the first week of September to early March.

The date for the fifth annual 500 has been set for next March 10, and the new owners feel it'll be a better date to run the race.

"The March date is the best way to go," said OMS general manager Jim Cook. "There is no less competition for the spectator dollar and for press coverage. In September, we had the Dodgers in the midst of a pennant race and the Rams and colleges just starting their football promotions. In March, there's no baseball or football."

"The only problem we could see was the rain," he commented. "But it even-rained in last year's race—so that problem existed then. We've done some research with the weather bureau, and they think it's the right date—weather-wise."

The first three California 500s at OMS drew over 150,000 spectators, 180,-223 in 1970, 168,420 in '71 and 161,240 in 1972.

But in the fourth annual event, held earlier this month, the official atendance was never announced. The stimation was somewhere between 90,000 and 100,000 spectators.

So what was the reason for the reduction in the estimated attendance?

"We didn't have very much time to get ready for it," Cook indicated. "But we didn't cut any corners. We tried to put the track back in shape as best we could."

What was the reason for concealing the attendance and the financial figures of the race?

"Our policy is not to reveal either attendance or financial figures," Cook noted. "That's the way it's run at Indianapolis, and the people running the track here are from there. We think it's the best way. That way you can't possibly get some false figures floating around, just a lot of guessing."

The decision to stay with the track or abandon it must be made by Jan. 1, when they must decide whether or not to exercise a five-year option that includes an annual $500,000 rent guarantee plus the first $450,000 in profits which goes to the bond holders.

Cook has indicated that the group has been working on the speedway as though it were goint to stick around for those five years and maybe more, but first it wants to take a look at what happens to the Spark Plug Motorcycle Classic (Sept. 27-30) and the Supernationals (Nov. 17-18).

There was also talk going around bout a Can-Am race for OMS in early December, but so far it has only been talk.

"There are a lot of things we're looking at for the speedway," Cook added. "We're doing the best we can to make the speedway go.

"A group that would want to operate the track for just one race would have cut down on a lot of things just to have the race," he inserted."We could have cut down, but we didn't. We're thinking on a long-range basis. We want to build around racing schedule."

No doubt, the most important race at the speedway is the 500-mile race, but other scheduled races aren't being pushed aside.

With the Motorcycle Classic set for the end of this month, the new group is already starting to get out some public announcements and other publicity.

"We are trying to get the word out about the Classic," said Cook, "and at the same time start our publicity on the Cal 500 for next year."

There is no doubt that the Ontario Motor Speedway Operating Co. (OMSOC) is very optimistic about the speedway's future.

"The group feels that this race has potential of drawing crowds like Indy," Cook added. "We think Ontario can draw crowds of 300,000 some day. It'll just take sometime to build it up."

Cook also indicated that the new operators were pleased with the paid attendance, even though it was down from last year's total.

The reason behind that was because the group cut down on the total purse from $500,000 to $150,000 and also on advertising from $500,000 to $100,000. Even though the purse was trimmed, it was still a larger payoff than any other United States Auto Club (USAC) race except for the Indy 500.

The optimism is so strong that the contract the speedway has with USAC calls for a five-year March date for a championship car race.

National League roundup

Pennant race is all in East

By United Press International

The Eastern Division race keeps getting tighter. St. Louis' loss to Montreal dropped the Cards a half-game behind Pittsburgh while the Expos are only a game out.

Steve Rogers pitched out of two bases-loaded and none out jams to pace Montreal over St. Louis. He was helped by the fine fielding of shortstop Tim Foli and first baseman Mike Jorgensen. "You'll never see a shortstop and a first baseman on the same team on the same night perform at that level," Manager Gene Mauch said.

The Expos now are shooting for their first pennant "I keep looking for the Pirates to get hot but they haven't so far," Bob Bailey said. "Maybe there's no reason to think they will unless Steve Blass has found himself." Bailey's ninth inning homer decided the game.

The Pirates were able to beat Chicago as Bruce Kison, called up from the minors recently, limited the Cubs to six hits in seven innings before Dave Giusti came on to get the save. Bob Robertson's three-run homer in the fourth inning gave the Pirates the punch they needed.

Homers by Wayne Garrett and John Milner helped New York down Philadelphia. Jon Matlack got the win with relief help from Tug McGraw. Wayne Twitchell was tagged with the defeat. The victory moved the Mets to within 2 ½ games of first place in the West.

Hank Aaron got two singles for Atlanta but he didn't homer although he did hit a shot that was foul by inches in the third inning. The Braves beat San Francisco as Darrell Evans, who homered twice, and Marty Perez, who homered once, each drove in three runs.

Aaron's pursuit of Babe Ruth is just one of three home run records within reach of the Atlanta Braves this month.

In addition to Aaron, who needs four more homers to tie Ruth's career mark of 714, Dave Johnson is two shy of tying Rogers Hornsby for most homers in a season by a second baseman, and Aaron, Johnson and Darrell Evans are zeroing in on yet another record.

No team has ever had three players hit 40 or more home runs the same season. But Johnson is already at that mark, Aaron is only three away and Evans hit Nos 37 and 38 Wednesday night while leading the Braves to a 10-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Evans had faltered from the major league home run lead to third on his own team, not having hit a homer in Atlanta Stadium in six weeks, and he admits that it was beginning to bother him.

The Braves, who have 190 home runs, have three of the top five home run hitters in the majors.

American League roundup

Yaz thinks it's '67

By United Press International

Yaz won the Triple Crown six years ago while leading the Boston Red Sox to the American League pennant with an incredible stretch run performance. While no threat for Triple Crown honors this season, Yaz did rip his 14th and 15th homers and drive in five runs Wednesday night to lead Boston to a 7-1 victory over the New York Yankees

Despite the victory, Boston dropped another half game behind first place Baltimore in the American League East. The Orioles took two from Milwaukee 4-1 and 5-3 to increase their lead to six games and reduce their magic number to 12 with 18 games remaining.

"He's doing it all," said Red Sox Manager Eddie Kasko, referring to Yastrzemski's latest performance which has seen him hitting at a .391 pace since Aug. 2, to raise his batting average to .298 and increase his RBI total to 80.

"He's the first to help out, too," added Kasko, taking note of Yaz' switch to third base to fill the gap left by injured Rico Petrocelli. "He volunteered to play first base when we needed a first baseman and he was eager to play third when we needed help there. That's a big thing for a superstar like Yaz to do."

Yastrzemski's only comment: "I'm not doing anything differently than I did before Aug. 2. I'm just playing the race.'

Yastrzemski's slugging backed the five-hit pitching of unbeaten Roger Moret, who posted his 11th victory. The only run he allowed was Ron Swoboda's homer in the seventh.

In the only other AL games, Kansas City blanked Oakland 5-0, Texas beat Minnesota 5-2 and California edged Chicago 6-5.

Rich Coggins, battling teammate Al Bumbry for AL Rookie of the Year honors, had three hits, two RBIs and scored twice to give the Orioles their first game triumph and help Jim Palmer notch his 20th victory for the fourth consecutive season. Coggins tripled in the eighth inning of the nightcap and scored on Boog Powell's single to snap a 3-3 tie and provide reliever Grant Jackson with his eighth win without a loss.

Hal McRae homered twice and drove in four runs to lead Kansas City past Oakland and move the Royals within five games of the first place A's in the West. Paul Splittorff, with eighth inning relief from Doug Bird, gained his 16th victory.

Tom Grieve's two-run homer and the clutch relief pitching of rookie Rick Henninger gave Texas its win over Minnesota. Henninger allowed one run and six hits over 5 2-3 innings to pick up his first major league win. Harmon Killebrew slugged his 545th career homer for Minnesota's first run.

Wants 'live' UCLA TV

LOS ANGELES — A suit was filed in Superior Court Tuesday to halt the live television blackout of all UCLA football games played here and on the road.

The suit was filed on behalf of Dr. Jerry Olivett and three women, all of whom said they were taxpayers, against the University of California Board of Regents.

Judge David A. Thomas set a hearing Sept. 20.

The action claimed the blackouts discriminated against the poor who cannot buy tickets to the games, the sick who are confined to convalescent homes, people without cars, those who go to church on Sundays and cannot see delayed tapes, and medical doctors who cannot attend games because of professional responsibilities to their patients.

Pop Warner clubs open 1973 season

The 1973 Pop Warner football regular season begins Sunday. Last week the teams had their final tuneup in the annual Kick-Off Bowl activity consisting of 20 minute exhibitions.

The Pomona Bruins defested the Montclair Pirates 8-0. This week the Bruins open regular season play against the defending Champion Ontario Packers at 12:30 p.m. Last year the Packers won 20-6.

Chino teams played two ties and suffered one loss. The Chino Colts of the Midget division battled hard in a 7-0 loss to the Claremont Warriors.

The Chino Dusters (Pee Wee) fought a scoreless standoff with the Diamond Bar Gauchos while the Jr. Pee Wee Mavericks and Claremont Raiders battled to a 13-13 tie.

This Sunday. the Chino Colts travel to Santa Ana to play the Dons. The Dusters and Mavericks are at home at Chino High. The Dusters meet the Banning Bandidos at 12:30 p.m. and the Mavericks take on the San Dimas-La Verne Lancers at 3:30 p.m.

MSAC has what it takes

By MIKE RAWLINSON
P-B Staff Writer

WALNUT — This year's Mt. San Antonio College football team features something "old", something "borrowed" and something "new." All three appear to add up to a very successful season — on paper anyway.

Just how good the 1973 Mounties are will be determined in the weeks ahead. It begins Saturday night at Citrus Stadium when MSAC tangles with old-rival Citrus College in a 7:30 p.m. contest.

SOMETHING OLD — Back from an outstanding year in 1972 is second team All-South Coast Conference quarterback Steve Myer, who led the nation's community college QBs in passing by completing 181 of 331 attempts for 2,244 yards and 14 touchdowns. Myer has appeared strong and healthy in two pre-season scrimmages following a summer automobile accident in which his throwing arm was severely injured. Myer has added pounds to his lean, 6-foot-2 frame and should weight-in at about 190 Saturday night.

Defensively, the Mounties will field a veteran unit, composed of seven lettermen, most of whom were starters a year ago. Up front it's all veteran — Rick Gohl, Chuck Shrewsberry, Mike Stanridge, and Mike Hammers. At linebacker veteran Damon Petta and Richard Gomez will be joined by some talented newcomers. The secondary shapes up the same way with all-SCC selectee Tom Mackenzie, starter Russ Dion and veteran Bill Keilty

MacKenzie shared the team lead in interceptions (4) and kicked 9 of 13 field goals and 20 of 24 extra points as the team place kicker. He was second in scoring with 47 points.

SOMETHING BORROWED — Coming off two fine seasons as a sprinter on the MSAC track team is speedy Sam Jenkins, who is a likely starter in the defensive secondary. Sudden Sam will also see action as a receiver. He is a 9.7 sprinter with a determined competitive attitude. Having used up his track eligibility, Jenkins elected to complete his fifth semester at MSAC as a gridder. He last played football as a senior at Garey High three years ago.

SOMETHING NEW — Freshmen and transfers bring a talented collection of athletes to MSAC this year. Most notable are a pair of All-CIF linebackers. Don Curtis of South Hills High has earned himself a starting berth, and Pete Constantino of Alhambra, a cross-district transfer, is moving in that direction. Offensively, Keith Keating, 6-foot-4, 240-pound guard, who prepped at Bishop Amat two seasons back and spent his sophomore year at Washington State, will probably work into the starting lineup soon. Keating is expected to add strength to an inexperienced offensive line, John Huston, a diminutive (5-8, 170) running back from Sweetwater, Tex. is expected to push veteran Teddy Farmer at tailback in the newly installed I-formation offense.

So that's what head coach Mal Eaton and his assistants will throw against Citrus in the season opener

The Owls will have a new-look this year, with coach John Strycula's son Bill directing a passing attack in a rebuilt backfield. Citrus depended on the run a year ago with JC All-American running back Ken Williams, a 1,000-yard rusher two-years in a row.

Of much interest to the Mounties Saturday night will be a game across the valley between Chaffey and defending South Coast Conference champion Cerritos at Panther Stadium. The Mounties face the latter in the first conference game Oct. 20. Cerritos is favored to take the title again this year.

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI)—South African Gary Player, fresh from his first tour win of the season and shooting for $1 million in career winnings, was the man to beat as the $150,000 Heritage Open golf tournament began today.

U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, the defending Heritage titlist, and a pair of one-time Wake Forest University golfers, Arnold Palmer and Lanny Wadkins, also had to be rated as favorites among the invitational field of 102.

Player picked up $20,000 for his Southern Open win last week, boosting his career earnings to $973,000 on the American tour, and the Heritage's top prize could move him into the company of Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Billy Casper and Lee Trevino as a winner of more than $1 million in tour money.

More than momentum and financial incentive, though, the key to success for Player appeared to be the course, the par 71, 6,655-yard Harbour Town links.

Player, who leaves Monday for his South African home, had never before played in the five-year old Heritage, always held before in November after he had departed for the season.

"It's such a pleasure to play on small greens, and, really, this is the greatest golf course in the world," said Player.

Fast Field aim at win at Elsinore

HAWAIIAN SPEEDSTER — Dave Packer of Hawaii will compete in the Lake Elsinore 250 mile race Sept. 15-16 in this 19-foot Mercury powered Mokinari, against the world's fastest boats.

ELSINORE — The fastest field ever assembled will be gunning for thousands of dollars and all of the prestige that goes with winning the annual Lake Elsinore 250 mile endurance boat race.

Boats have been entered from as far away as Hawaii and many of the world's foremost drivers will be on hand for the two day event.

Saturday's action will center around the STP Time Trials. Those entered in Sunday's main event are eligible for the trials in which the STP Corporation donates the prize money. Competition will be for one lap around the surveyed two and a half mile course. The entrants will be divided into classes and may enter the trials as many times as they wish. The trials start at 10 A.M. and end promptly at 3 P.M.

Sunday morning at 10 A.M. the starter will fire the gun that will start the world's fastest boats and drivers on the 6th annual Lake Elsinore 250 mile endurance race. Participants will race until the first boat completes 100 laps around the course.

The race will be headquartered at the Holiday Trailer Park on the northeast shore of the popular southland recreation area. Lake Elsinore is located halfway between Los Angeles and San Diego and 25 miles inland from San Juan Capistrano.

Wooley indicted

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI)— Former Ball High football coach Joe Woolley, whose resignation was demanded after he admitted tampering with a Oklahoma football player's grade transcript, was indicted Wednesday in connection with the grade rigging scandal.

A Galveston County grand jury indicted Woolley on the misdemeanor offense of "altering an academic record." Lynn Nix, a former vice principal and an assistant coach under Woolley at the time of the grade tampering, also was indicted on the charge.

Woolley admitted last April he changed the transcripts of former Ball High player Kerry Jackson. The Sooners, ranked No. 2 at the end of last season, revealed the doctored transcripts and forfeited eight victories in which Jackson, then a freshman quarterback, played.

Oklahoma also was placed on two years probation by the Big Eight conference because of the rules infraction.

Woolley first was demoted by school superintendent Eli Douglas, but the school board later voted to reinstate him by a 4-3 vote.

The action prompted Woolley's assistant coaches to resign and the ensuing controversy resulted in Douglas' demanding Woolley's resignation last July.

"I know what I did was wrong and I have learned a very valuable lesson but once again I did it with the kid in mind, trying to help him stay at Oklahoma," he said last April. "I changed the record to match what was on their record to protect the kid."

Woolley refused to comment on the grand jury charges Wednesday.

The indictments were returned under a provision of the Texas State Education code which makes it a high grade misdemeanor to tamper with a student's transcript. The maximum penalty upon conviction of the charge is a $1,000 fine or one year in jail, or both.

Bowl matchup early

By United Press International

Colorado-LSU. On the surface, it looks like a college football matchup just made for New Years Day.

The schedule-makers couldn't wait that long this year, however, and so the Buffs and the Bayou Bengals will kick off their '73 seasons Saturday in an unaccustomed bowl-like matchup at Baton Rouge.

Normally, the big-time schools with winning football traditions choose to pad the early non-conference part of their schedules with patsies and perennial also-rans. So either somebody goofed on this one or else coaches Eddie Crowder of Colorado and Charlie McClendon of LSU want to find out quickly just how good their clubs really are.

The oddsmakers have installed Colorado a three-point favorite—a risky bet considering the past fates of visiting teams at Tiger Stadium

In other intersectional games around the country, defending national champ Southern California is an off-the-board choice against Arkansas, Penn State is rated seven over Stanford, Georgia Tech seven over South Carolina, Alabama is listed 24 over California, Arizona State 10 over Oregon, Georgia 17 over Pittsburgh, Oklahoma 17 over Baylor and Florida 21 better than Kansas State.

The biggest reason Colorado goes into Baton Rouge a favorite is the return of the entire backfield from last year including quarterback Ken Johnson and the swift running back Charlie Davis. Crowder seems to be putting up a smoke-screen though after announcing early this week that Davis is not likely to start—despite having scored 26 touchdowns in two years at Colorado.

It was Johnson who engineered a 31-21 upset victory for Colorado over the Bengals at Baton Rouge two years ago. The Buffs also feature 6-foot-6 J.V. Cain, Johnson's favorite receiver and an early-line favorite for All-America honors as well as a big pro bonus come January.

LSU, as usual, is supposed to be top-heavy with defensive standouts and that's a good thing if it is to stop Colorado's multi-faceted attack. Linebacker Warren Capone, a bonafide All-America prospect, is the key man in the LSU defensive unit.

Southern Cal, favored to repeat as national champion, is not expected to have too much trouble with Arkansas. Last year, the Trojans trounced a highly-rated Arkansas team led by super passer Joe Ferguson, 31-10. This time around, Southern Cal returns much of its 1972 cast (including All Americas Anthony Davis and Richard Wood) which went 11-0, while the Razorbacks '73 squad is comprised of 65 per cent freshmen and sophomores.

The Penn State-Stanford nationally-televised game should be a little more interesting. Once again Joe Paterno's Nittany Lions are loaded with talent including All-America hopefuls Dan Natale at tight end and tailback John Cappelletti.

Stanford, however, must be taken seriously if for no other reason than Mike Boryla, the top returning passing quarterback in the nation. The Cardinals also will be enjoying the home field advantage.

Charlie O. says Tams will play

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Charlie Finley, owner of the American Basketball Association's Memphis Tams, promised to bring the club out of oblivion today.

In a telephone call to the Memphis Commercial Appeal Wednesday night, Finley said he told trainer Don Sparks to open training camp today and to reopen the club's office at the Mid-South Coliseum.

Finley also said he would hire a coach for the team today and had already made one man an offer. "I am still waiting for a yes or no from this man," he said. "Until I receive an answer, it would not be fair to bandy his name about.

"If he does not take the job, then I will hire someone else I have in mind tomorrow."

The millionaire insurance executive from Chicago, who also owns the Oakland A's baseball franchise, bought the Memphis club last summer and saved the team from being disbanded. After the Tams compiled the league's worst record last season and Finley said he lost $500,000, he announced that the club was being sold to a group of Providence, R. I., businessmen.

When the league trustees failed to approve the Providence deal, the future of the franchise appeared uncertain. Coach Bob Bass had quit to become head of ABA officials, the team office here was closed, no tickets for the coming season had been sold and almost) none of the players had contracts.

Finley promised Wednesday night that all of the problems will be corrected, with the new coach tackling the job of negotiating players' contracts.

"I'm still going to try to do everything possible to bring a winning club to Memphis," he said. "I realize we didn't have a great team last year, but we hope to do better this season.

L.A. netter upsets Fillol

SEATTLE (UPI)—Bob Kreiss of Los Angeles opened his pro tennis career Wednesday night with an incredible 6-1, 2-6, 7-5 upset win over Chilean Davis Cup star Jaime Fillol in the first round of the Seattle International Tennis Tournament.

The former UCLA star appeared to have the match wrapped up when he was serving with a 5-1 advantage in the final set. However, Kreiss was called for foot-faulting on his second serve for match point and his concentration left him.

Fillol fought back to win the seventh game, then held service twice and broke Kreiss twice to tie the third set at 5-5.

HE WON'T PLAY UNLESS . . . — Bob Love, of the Chicago Bulls, says he won't play until the Bull renegotiate his contract. Love did not report to training camp. At left is his agent Irwin Weiner.

Mackey quits NFLPA prexy post

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Mackey, former all-pro tight end who recently retired after 10 years in the National Football League, Wednesday resigned his position as president of the NFL Players Association to accept an executive position with WMA Sports Inc., a subsidiary of the famed William Morris Agency, Inc.

Mackey, who starred for the Baltimore Colts for nine seasons and played last year with the San Diego Chargers, could have served as president of the Players Association until January but decided to step down now to avoid a conflict of interests. He will be succeeded as president by Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers until January when a new election is held.

In joining WMA Sports, Inc., Mackey will assume a similar role he held as Players Association president. His job will be to handle negotiations and management of athletes in their dealings with the entertainment world.

"The sports division is a new concept for an agency like William Morris. We started out by signing Mark Spitz after his great Olympic victories, and John Mackey gives us another dimension," said Berle Adams, president of WMA Sports. "He was elected unanimously for two terms as president of the NFL Players Association. He was personally involved with complex negotiations with many people in the upper levels of sports management. With WMA he will directly handle player negotiations and management of athletes.

"Clients of WMA Sports will be represented in a total spectrum including television, films, Broadway, endorsements, testimonials, profitable commercial associations, variety entertainment, speaking engagements and literary endeavors, all areas in which the William Morris Agency has excelled for 75 years."

The objective of the WMA Sports Division, according to Adams, is to get a representation of sports personalities, teams, associations and related organizations under one roof from which a variety of commercial and entertainment opportunities can be developed.

"My joining WMA Sports is in keeping with my objective of helping the athlete's career on and beyond the playing field," said Mackey, who gained a reputation as a hard-bargainer during his term as NFL Players Association president. "I only wanted to play 10 years and I am fortunate enough to be able to walk away from the game healthy."

Mackey, a graduate of Syracuse University where he starred as a running back and offensive end, was an all-pro tight end three times for the Colts and played in five pro bowls.

Gal gridders OK

WISHKAH, Wash. (UPI) — "If the guys are too busy drinking or whatever, we'll let the girls do a man's work."

So says coach John Clark at Little Wishkah Valley High School where three girls are turning out for the football team in an attempt to stop an 18-game losing streak.

Only 11 boys out of Wishkah Valley's 102 students showed up this fall to form a squad for the local football league of eightman...er, that is, eight-person — teams. Last year's losing scores like 48-0, 52-6 and 54-6 had the team and the school demoralized.

"None of the other guys at school would turn out so we figured the team needed us," says Carol, at 5-5½ and 170 pounds a candidate for a line position.

Clark says 16-year-old Carol and Delores, who at 14 is 5-9 and decidedly heavier than her sister, are still in the running for one starting guard spot. Both girls easily exceed the average team weight of around 150 pounds and at least the younger can move with power.

"She (Delores) hit me so hard she hurt my arm," complains custodian Ronald Warwick, a 210-pounder who sometimes holds a practice dummy for blocking workouts.

"It kind of hurt our pride at first," admits team member John Haskey, "but it took a lot of guts for them to turn out. And we've got to have them."

So far there has been no opposition from the agricultural and logging community of about 1,000 people that sends its children to Wishkah Valley schools.

"We're really excited about the whole thing," says Russell Darrin of his daughters' decision to play football. Their mother, Muriel, agrees that it's "neat" and wishes she'd done the same thing.

Dennis Darrin, assistant football coach and brother of Carol and Delores, isn't worried his sisters will get hurt. In fact he says he feels "sorry for some of the guys."

During practice the boys wear white jerseys, the girls black.

"That's so we can tell if anyone is picking on them or if the boys aren't hitting them hard enough," explains the coach. Then he adds that "the black jerseys don't have holes."

The girls say they aren't worried about someone getting grabby in a pile-up.

Fund-raising ocean fishing derby set

LONG BEACH — The second annual fund-raising fishing derby to help improve southern California's marine fishin, has been set for Sept. 22, 1973, by the sponsoring Sportfishing Association of California (SAC), according to SAC President Bill Nott.

Nott said September 22, which is also National Hunting and Fishing Day as proclaimed by President Nixon, was chosen as the Derby date so what ocean anglers could participate in NHF activites by helping to contribute to a better marine environment.

The SAC Derby is held in cooperation with the 27 SAC member sportfishing landings from Morro Bay to Imperial Beach, below San Diego. SAC landing operators and skippers donate their boats that day to the Association, regular passenger fares prevail, and profits are turned over to SAC for its continuing efforts in improving ocean sport fishing.

"We're pushing for such programs as that recently announced by the California Department of Fish and Game." Nott explained. "We've been working closely with the Marine Resources Branch of the Fish and Game Department since our group was formed September of last year, and we're beginning to see the fruits of that labor now."

Nott said that after SAC began formulating a plan to outline ways to benefit the deep sea angler, the Department of Fish and Game responded with a new Marine Improvement Program announced recently.

"Part of that program is the introduction of 20,000 fingerling striped bass into southland waters next year," Nott emphasized. "We're going to get 20,000 eight-to nine-inch-long striper fingerlings planted in 1974, and equal numbers in 1975 and 1976. These are the types of programs we're implementing with SAC funds."

Nott said this represents the first introductions of marine fish off southern California in any quantity, adding, "the average fisherman figures to receive direct benefit from programs such as this."

Fishing tackle prizes are also awarded to anglers catching the largest fish of several approved species at official SAC landings on Derby Day, but Nott emphasized that the main thrust of the day is conservation and improved environment.

To participate in this year's SAC Derby, anglers need only to make a reservation to fish that day at any of the 27 member landings.

"This is a cooperative effort between our sportfishing landings and the customers they serve," Nott said. "Anglers fishing on this day can take pride in the fact that they are whelping themselves, and future generations of fishermen."

Hunters warned of fire closures

ONTARIO — Hunting in San Bernardino county's West End area will be both restricted and poor.

Lt. Tom Wickham of the San Bernardino County West End Sheriff's substation announced that a county ordinance has resulted in a West End fire closure that closes all of the Mt. Baldy range south to the valley.

Lt. Wickham said the closest area to the West End open for hunting is Lyttle Creek in the Stockton Flats area. Deer prospects for that area are reported poor.

"Sheriff's and Forrestry officials have patrols on duty to make sure there is no entry to the closed areas," Lt. Wickham said.

"Hunters should check the fire closures and firearms restriction areas before starting to hunt," he said. Firearms restriction maps are available at the West End substation, 6th and Mountain, in Ontario or any sheriff's substation.

"We would like to caution hunters to use extreme care," Lt. Wickham continued. "All members of the party should be dressed so that they can be easily identified. Last year two hunters were shot."

One rattlesnake bite was reported by hunters last year. This year the rattlesnake problem is moderate as compared to bad last year.

Hunt safety clinic slated

SANTA ANA — The Western Outdoors Hunter Safety Clinic, a one-day course of instruction to qualify first-time hunters for their California hunting license for 1973 will be held Saturday.

Registration is limited to 500 participants. Minimum age for youngsters is 10 years old. All youngsters up to 17 years of age must be accompanied by an adult. Adults may also participate if they do not have a hunting license and have yet to qualify in a hunter safety course.

Elmendorf agrees with the boss--the Rams are 'Super'

The Los Angeles Rams, says the third-year pro from Texas A&M, are Super Bowl timber.

"We definitely have a shot at it all," said Elmendorf, who intercepted three passes in the Rams' exhibition finale last weekend. "We've improved every week and we've improved quite a bit But that figured because this is a completely new club; a new coaching staff and new players. It just takes time."

At 24, Elmendorf is the only returning starter in a defensive secondary that allowed 20 touchdown passes in a disappointing 6-7-1 season. The Rams ranked next-to-last in this category in the NFC in 1972.

In fact, the young pro from Texas is only one of 10 men—four on defense—who started in the Rams' season opener against New Orleans last season who will be in the starting lineup at Kansas City Sunday, Los Angeles' first regular season game of 1973.

Against the Chiefs, it will be Elmendorf at strong safety, rookie Cullen Bryant at free safety and veteran Charlie Stukes anl rookie Eddie McMillian at the corners.

"I think we could win the Super Bowl this year," Elmendorf said, "but there are a lot of other teams that could do the same thing. I can name 12 to 15 teams that could do it.

"I've only been in the league three years and that's not very long but the teams seem to get more even every season."

The Rams went through their exhibition schedule with a 2-3-1 record but capped the preseason off with 30-17 and 38-10 victories over San Diego and San Francisco, respectively. In the game with the 49ers last Friday night, Elmendorf picked off two John Brodie passes and one by Steve Spurrier.

"It takes a lot of things besides talent to win the Super Bowl," Elmendorf said. "You have to have a lot of luck on your side.

"I'm not taking anything away from Miami last year because they were just a great football team but there was a certain element of luck involved to accomplish what they did."

The Dolphins, of course, went undefeated, beating Washington for the big money

"I was surprised that happened," he said "and I'll be even more surprised to see it happen this year. There's no way any team is going unbeaten this season."

For Elmendorf, it will be his third season as a regular, too. He stepped right into the starting lineup out of college, playing free safety for the Rams as a rookie and then moving to strong safety last year.

"It takes several years to learn how to play a particular position," he said, "and I'm still learning. But the things I used to have to think about are coming more naturally now."

Shoemaker reaches milestone

DEL MAR, Calif. (UPI)—Bill Shoemaker has reached another milestone in his fabled career that began 24 years ago.

Thoroughbred racing's all-time winningest jockey scored victory No. 100 in a $100,000 stakes race Wednesday as Del Mar wound up its 43-day meeting.

Shoemaker, 42, was aboard the 6-5 favorite, Such A Rush, in the $116,190 Del Mar Futurity, the richest event ever here, and he didn't disappoint his backers.

Such A Rush won easily, finishing 3¾ lengths in front of longshot Fast Pappa. The Gay Greek was third in the field of 11 2-year-olds at 7½ furlongs on the turf.

"He ran perfect," said Shoemaker after his 601st stakes triumph. "Today certainly was the day for him to do it, too I knew if I didn't get him settled down and off the lead, he would never make two turns.

"We were in perfect position around the first turn and he really calmed down for me. He wasn't lugging in like he did in his last two races."

A crowd of 17,408 turned out to see Such A Rush win in 1:29 4-5 and pay $4.60 to win. They also saw Shoemaker win two other races—the third on Brave And Daring at $3.80 and the ninth on Ice Cap at $6.60 —to increase his career victory total to 6,564.

Del Mar's 1973 season was a record breaker for the fourth consecutive year. Attendance (629,335) was up 13 per cent over 1972 while the handle ($67,809,021) increased 14 per cent.

Soap box figure asks adjustment of charges

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI)—A prominent businessman who encouraged his 14-year-old nephew to cheat to win the 1973 All-American Soap Box Derby asked a juvenile court judge Wednesday for a "non-judicial adjustment" of charges against him.

Robert Lange Sr., president of the Lange Ski Boot Co., made the request to Judge Horace Holmes after appearing in court on charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Holmes agreed to take the request under advisement and ordered Lange to return to court Oct. 2 after memoranda have been filed by his attorney and by the prosecution.

Lange was charged with violating the Colorado Children's Code late last month after officials discovered a hidden electromagnetic system in a soapbox derby car owned by his nephew, James Gronen, 14.

The discovery led to the disqualification of Gronen as winner of the national event at Akron, Ohio, and forfeiture of a $7,500 scholarship. Lange's son, Robert Lange Jr, won the same derby crown in 1972.

Lange admitted he encouraged his nephew to use the electromagnetic device, which was activated when the youth pushed his helmet against the cockpit headrest.

Pro Football roundup

Veteran stars finished

By United Press International

Carroll Dale, a key member of Vince Lombardi's great Green Bay Packer teams of the 1960s, and Johnny Roland, a former Rookie of the Year, apparently have ended their playing careers.

Dale, 35, a wide receiver on Lombardi's three-time NFL and two-time Super Bowl champions, was waived by the Packers Wednesday. He reportedly has been offered a job in the Green Bay organization.

"It is hard to put into words what Carroll has meant to this organization," said Green Bay Coach Dan Devine. "He has been a constant source of strength and inspiration to all of us. As a football player, he has always given 100 per cent."

Roland, beaten out of his starting position at running back by rookie Terry Metcalf, announced his retirement after even years with the St. Louis Cardinals. Roland, 30 was voted Rookie of the Year in 1966.

"I had seven great years of active play," Roland said. "On the whole, I have to say it was a satisfying career, but it had to come to an end some time."

Elsewhere in the NFL as teams prepared for their season openers this weekend, Chicago Coach Abe Gibron denied reports that star middle linebacker Dick Butkus is nursing an injured knee and will not play Sunday against Dallas.

"All I can say is that Butkus will be in the starting lineup Sunday," Gibron said. Butkus missed much of the pre-season and several practice sessions because of the injury. A local news story Wednesday quoted "sources close to Butkus" as saying "there is no fluid left in his knee and he can feel the bones rubbing together. The pain has been killing him all summer"

"Nonsense," was Gibron's reply.

"The decision was based on the six exhibition games and Bert's ability to get the ball across the goal line," Schnellenberger said. "It was a very difficult decision."

Cal League shows good fan interest

SAN MATEO, Calif. (UPI)— Minor league baseball may be hurting in some areas of the country but it's nice and healthy in the Class A California League.

According to figures released today by League President Eddie Mulligan, the recently completed 1973 season was the circuit's most successful at the gate since 1954.

Attendance for the year totalled 453,316, an increase of almost 94,000 or 26 per cent from 1972. It was the best showing at the gate since 503,438 fans turned out in 1954.

San Jose led the Cal League with an attendance figure of 125,047, highest for an individual club since 1952 when Fresno's champion Cardinals drew 129,524. It was a record for San Jose, topping the previous mark of 113,358 set in 1949.

The other city with an attendance record was Salinas, whose 51,477 was nearly 10,000 more than its previous high in 1955. The Packers outdrew Stockton, the city they replaced in the Cal League this year, by 29,352.

Additionally, the champion Lodi Lions doubled their 1972 attendance and Reno's Silver Sox showed an increase of 32 per cent over 1972. Modesto's attendance was up slightly, although the Reds finished last in 1973 compared to winning the championship in 1972.

WHA files anti-trust suit against NHL

NEW YORK (UPI) — The World Hockey Association Wednesday filed a $6 million anti-trust suit in a Brooklyn Federal Court against the New York Islanders of the rival National Hockey League, charging the club with violation of the Sherman anti-trust act through operation of the reserve clause.

The suit also named the National Hockey League and its member as co-conspirators.

The complaint alleges that the defendants, by use of the reserve clause, have gained complete control of the pool of players capable and available to play pro hockey, have denied access to that pool of players by any potential competitors and have taken other steps to monopolize trade and commerce in pro hockey.

The suit states that "unless the relief requested by the plaintiffs is granted, the defendant and their co-conspirators will maintain their monopoly over pro hockey and will destroy those who seek to compete, including the plaintiffs, by depriving them of competent and available hockey players."

In the suit the WHA maintains that through a series of arrangements with amateur hockey clubs in the U.S. and Canada talented hockey players are channeled into the NHL under its reserve clause.

WACs appear at Fair

There will be something of interest to both men and women in the Army's Ninth Division display at the Los Angeles County Fair.

One of the Army's first women military police officers, Sgt. Lillian "Cookie" Barber, will staff the display to answer questions on the Army Police Corps or the Army in general.

A graduate of Baldwin Park High School, Sgt. Barber will be an assistant recruiter in the Army's Montclair Recruiting Station during the Fair dates of Friday through Sept. 30 She is representing Ft. Lewis, Washington, where she is stationed.

Sgt. Barber was part of the WAC on the job training program last year in which a small group of women were trained for the military police program. The program is part of the Army's new approach to include women in all positions, with the exception of hard combat. According to Sgt. Barber, the military police is the closest position to hard combat.

A WAC for over two years, Sgt. Barber's new duties as an MP include patrolling, standing gate guard duty at installations and transferring prisoners. For her job she was trained in judo, hand-to-hand combat, law such as search and seizure practices and in assembling weapons. Women MPs must also qualify with a weapon.

Besides assuming the position as one of the Army's first WAC MPs, Sgt. Barber also served as the first female desk sergeant at Ft. Lewis

Sgt. Mary Brown, the WAC counselor for the East San Gabriel and Pomona valleys, will also be part of the Army staff in the Fair display. She will be wearing the current summer uniform of the Women's Army. The new uniforms are being tested across the country.

Five hundred Army women now wearing the three new styles will recommend one of the uniforms to the Army Uniform Board for adoption throughout the Army. The test is aimed at developing an attractive wash and wear summer uniform that is both durable and comfortable.

The three styles to be worn by Sgt. Brown include a three-piece ensemble consisting of a jumper, shirt and jacket. The jumper has a roll collar and modified princess lines with a zip-up closure stopping at the neck seam. The shirt may be worn in short or long sleeve versions, in white or pale green solid colors, and has a front zipper closure with the neckband forming an ascot. The optional jacket is a long-sleeve cardigan with button front and modified princess lines.

The second design is a short sleeve dress with an optional long-sleeve cardigan jacket. The dress has a roll collar, modified princess lines, back zipper closure and shoulder loops. The jacket has a button front and shoulder loops.

A two-piece outfit consisting of a short-sleeve notch collar jacket and an a-line skirt is the third version of the uniform An optional short-sleeve over-blouse may be worn in place of the jacket.

All three uniforms were designed by Koret, a California fashion manufacturer.

MRS. CLAIRE STRANGE

Manager of bank is woman

At United California Bank's Holt Avenue office it's a not a man, but a woman who holds the top job.

Mrs. Claire Strange, a 14-year veteran with UCB, assumed the office's position as bank manager earlier this year. She held management positions in several branches before assuming the Pomona manager position.

UCB's Holt Avenue office is almost an all-woman operation. Of the 18 staff members, only two are men. They are James Kirsch, customer service manager, and Norman Brown, operations managers.

"A lot of customers think I'm the manager," according to Kirsch whose desk is next to Mrs. Strange's. "They come up to me because they're used to a man being manager."

Along with the 12 women managers, UCB branches have also had four female vice presidents.

Her cathedral-length train was trimmed in matching lace. Her veil was held by a headpiece of fresh flowers, and the bride carried a nosegay of multi-colored flowers.

Miss Janet Engle served as maid of honor and Mrs. Roberta Lahr was the bride's matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Jill Acuna and Sheryl Morse.

Bob Yerrington served as best man for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bonnard E. Morse of Claremont. Ushers were Noel Travis, Randy Morse, Tim McLarty, Steve Lahr and Chris Barr.

Inviting guests

DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: When my widowed mother visits us soon, I would like to give an afternoon champagne party in her honor. How do I word the invitations to indicate the party is to introduce her to my friends?

"On the invitations, do I refer to my mother as Mrs. George Jones, Mrs. Alice Jones or Alice Jones? How do I indicate that she is my mother? Do I refer to the party as a champagne reception, a champagne party or what?

"Would it be preferable to have printed invitations? Those I have seen at some in stationery shops seem somewhat tacky. — Mrs. E. F., Dayton, Ohio."

The simplest way is to use fill-in engraved invitations. At the top you write: To meet Mrs. George Jones. It is not usual to indicate any relationship on an invitation like this, but, of course, it is clear when you introduce guests to your mother Fill in the rest of the invitation.

You may call it a reception, if you wish, or even a champagne party. All good stationers have these fill-in engraved invitations. Be sure to use black ink to match the engraving.

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: Will you please state in your column what a hostess has a right to expect from a dinner guest and what a dinner guest has a right to expect from a hostess?

"I am thinking of guests who say something like 'How come no antipasto to start with?' or 'Cheese and crackers?' 'I was looking forward to one of your pecan pies.' I have a relative who actually talks like this. I get upset, but I suppose you'll say he doesn't know any better and I should overlook it. — Mrs. E. R., Boston, Mass."

I'm sure he knows better. Some people enjoy upsetting others — especially family members. Somehow it makes them feel important. Just know when he comes that he is going to try to get a rise out of you If you don't overreact, he will probably mend his immature ways.

With a reasonable person who has a habit of teasing, it sometimes helps to say quietly "You know, it bothers me when you tease. I'd appreciate it very much if you wouldn't do it." Teasers should realize that what seems to be amusing and friendly is often disguised hostility.

(Amy Vanderbilt welcomes your letters and strives to answer all those of general interest in her column. Send your questions and comments to Miss Vanderbilt in care of Progress-Bulletin.)

Lots of rum

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Connecticut in the early 19th century imported more West Indian rum in proportion to its size than any state in the Union. Rum was also produced locally, mainly in Hartford. By 1810, the state boasted more than 500 distilleries producing 1,374,000 gallons of spirits annually. The Hartford firm of Ward and Bartholomew manufactured both rum stills and church bells.

Mt. Baldy Club sets family potluck night

A family potluck night for all villagers is planned Saturday by Mt. Baldy Community Club.

The new Village School principal, Madison Lowe, will be present to meet all village families at the Chapman Ranch at 5:30 p.m.

All families with names starting with A to M are requested to bring a casserole and a salad; families with names beginning with N to Z should bring a casserole and dessert. Beverages and rolls will be furnished by the hostesses, Mmes. Robert Walker, Edward Troup, Guy Alexander and Richard Richards.

Each family should bring table service.

A campfire program has been planned to follow the dinner.

There's freedom afoot in heathery suedes that warm up a bared toe and give the sole preferred treatment. The shape: the sandal with a high heel.

To keep frozen foods from drying out use good moisture-resistant containers. If it's clean and durable, it will help preserve food value, color, flavor and texture.

I, HAROLD J. OSTLY, Tax Collector of the County of Los Angeles, State of California, being first duly sworn on oath, say to the best of my knowledge and belief, that the total amount due for taxes, assessments and other charges levied in the year 1972 for the fiscal year 1972-73 were unpaid at 5 o'clock P.M., June 29, 1973 on the real property shown in the attached list.

This property, except that portion previously sold to the State and not redeemed, was by operation of law sold to the State of California on June 29, 1973.

The amount shown in dollars and cents opposite the description of the property is the amount for which it was sold to the State. Such real property may be redeemed by the payment of the amount of sold taxes together with such additional penalties and fees as prescribed by law, or may be redeemed under an installment plan of redemption at the Office of the Tax Collector at 225 North Hill Street, Los Angeles, California 90012.

The "name" which precedes each parcel number refers to the name of the assessee. Where no name appears, the name is the same as that of the last assessee above shown.

Dated this 31st day of August, 1973.

HAROLD J. OSTLY,

The doctor comments

Orange juice a good source of potassium

sium is? My doctor tells me I am low in it and tells me to eat lots of bananas and drink orange juice. What other food is helpful? What does it do to your body?

Dear Reader — Potassium is one of the basic chemical elements. Everything we know is made up of chemical elements. Such as oxygen, hydrogen, carbon, sodium, potassium, chlorine, zinc, lead, gold, and so on. There are a little over 100 elements.

Our entire body is made of combinations of these chemical elements, so are our household furniture, buildings, automobiles, etc. It is this fact that amuses me when someone tells me that something is harmful because it is "a chemical," for example a given ingredient in a food. Everything we know is "a chemical." This is true whether it's part of a plant, part of an animal, distilled water, spring water, purified water, medicine, poison, "organic food," a food additive or anything else you might want to mention.

In the fluid part of the body, the water in the bloodstream and outside of the cells contains a small amount of sodium which is an element and is the same sodium element that we have in ordinary table salt called sodium chloride. We have about the same amount of sodium salt in our body water as exists in sea water. Inside the cell membrane we have relatively little sodium, and, instead, we have potassium which can occur as a salt called potassium chloride. Both sodium and potassium belong to the same group of chemicals and have a number of similar characteristics.

When the body retains too much sodium we tend to retain excess fluid and this can cause edema, swelling and other problems. Many medicines are used to eliminate sodium through the kidney and, with it, eliminate the accumulation of water. Some of these medicines also eliminate potassium, and then we lose potasium from the cell.

In order to maintain good health, one needs a normal amount of potassium inside the cells. These chemiclas are necessary for normal function of the cells. The heart muscle won't contract normally, or act normally, if you have a deficiency in potassium. If you have too much potassium the electrical activity of the heart may even be stopped. There is a proper balance of almost everything in the body, and this includes sodium and potassium. Potassium, as a salt, is commonly used as a salt substitute for people who

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB —Would you please tell me what potaneed to avoid sodium.

A deficiency of either sodium or potassium can cause a lot of vague symptoms, including excessive fatigue. A large glass of orange juice three times a day will usually provide about the same amount of potassium as prescribed in most medical conditions. Orange juice is probably the best natural source of potassium and contains considerably more potassium per weight than do bananas and most other fruits. In general, however, the fruits are an excellent source of potassium. I usually favor instructing people to drink three large glasses of orange juice a day if they need additional potassium in their inake, unless, of course, there is some medical reason why they can't use orange juice.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of The Progress-Bulletin, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on cholesterol, send 50 cents to the same address and ask for "Cholesterol" booklet.

Girl with apartment has problem

By Jean Adams

PERSISTENT: (Q.) I am lucky to have wealthy parents. They provide me with an apartment of my own. I am a girl, 18.

Reg and I went together for a little over a year. I thought we had a perfect relationship, but now I see that I am not really serious about him.

He still comes to my apartment almost every night, even though I have told him I don't want to see him any more. How can I get him to leave me alone? —He Doesn't Listen in Louisiana.

(A.) A girl with an apartment of her own is vulnerable to a thick-skinned boy friend. She should be very careful about too-close relationships.

Tell your freiend not to come to your apartment anymore. Tell him firmly and clearly so that he cannot misunderstand. If he continues, ask your parents to help you. Ask to return home for a while or to move to another apartment with an unlisted telephone.

When you move, do not tell your former boy friend when or where you are moving. This may be retreating, but it is better than getting into big trouble.

UNTOLD: (Q) I am only 12 years old. There is a girl that I like but she doesn't know it. I am pretty sure she dislikes me, but no matter how much I try, I can't forget her. What should I do? — Loser in Florida.

(A.) You are entirely too negative. When you decide you are defeated, you ARE.

Be positive. Be friendly with the girl. Show her you like her, and eventually tell her. It is entirely possible that she will like you as much as you like her.

Panel approves Cal employers' incentive bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill giving California employers a $5 million incentive to hire Vietnam veterans has reached the Senate floor after winning approval of the Finance Committee

The measure (AB276) by Assemblyman John Burton, D-San Francisco, requires the state to reimburse employers for half the wages paid to Vietnam veterans for up to 18 months. It cleared the committee recently on a 7-5 vote, the minimum required.

Eligible for the job program would be veterans who served after Aug. 5, 1964, and who are native Californians or were residents when they joined the military.

Pollution hits at ankle level

KINVER, ENGLAND (UPI) —Pollution struck a new low Thursday—at ankle level.

Villagers said a man and his wife were walking along a potato field when his socks and her stockings began to disintegrate. The potato field had been sprayed with an acid.

Controversy still rages

Top finishers of Soap Box Derby on display

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) —This is the time of year they display the new cars in showrooms all across the country, but what they're doing here is a little different—they're showing old cars.

The display features the top finishers from this year's All-American Soap Box Derby, and with 10 cars on the floor, it's easy to guess which one everybody wants to see.

It's the sleek, dark green, No. 12 racer Jimmy Gronen of Boulder, Colo., drove to victory in the Aug. 18 race, only to be disqualified a day later when officials found the car contained, in clear violation of the rules, a battery-powered electromagnet. The only power the rules allow is gravity, and the Derby unofficially calls itself the "World's Gravity Grand Prix."

Battery works

The battery still works, but the rest of the inside of the car is a mess from where officials cut through to uncover a maze of wires.

Monday, curious onlookers toyed with the wires while Soap Box Derby officials stood nearby and explained what they were doing to make sure the race wasn't tainted by cheating again.

"I think the rules need to be clarified," said Paul Livick, general manager of the Derby. "And I've got a file full of suggestions."

Livick was upset because so much attention has been focused on the first disqualification in the Derby's 40-year history and "no one has talked about the good points.

"I feel the press has been unduly critical," he said. "This is the first time something like this has happened, and it's only natural people are interested, but I think the program has too much merit to it.

"We're going ahead now with plans for the 1974 race," he added. "We feel there's too many worthwhile benefits to it for something like this to kill it."

Rule violated

The man who won the race its very first year, in 1934, Robert Turner of Anderson, Ind., said the other day that one of the Derby's most basic rules—that the kids have to build their own racers—has been violated since the start.

"You can't name me a year when they were 100 per cent boy-built," Turner claimed. "I argued for years that they should throw out this buy-built-rule. It should be called home-built. It's a great family project. Why make a liar out of everybody right off the start?"

Tom Jenkins, a pit crew worker this year, charged that professionally-built cars were common, and said there were 67 violations of rules this year.

Livick disputed the charges, but admitted a lot of violations were found in the routine pre-race inspection this year, and action was taken.

"There was a considerable number (of violations), and we had all kinds of complaints about the enforcement of the rules," Livick said. "Some of them even accused us of harassment."

Livick conceded it's almost impossible for officials here to determine if the racers are, in fact, built by the kids themselves and the frames are within the limit of $40 for materials.

"We have to rely on the local committees ... and on human nature," he said.

Pet chameleon must have bowl of water

DEAR DR. MILLER: In the time I have had Camelot, my chameleon, I have never known her to drink a drop of water from her bowl. Does this mean she doesn't need water? Am I just wasting my time providing her with water at all? — T. D.

Dear T. D.: Hopefully, at least a portion of Camelot's environment, includes a reasonable number of large, clean, green leaves. If so, they will provide he ideal water source as far as she is concerned. She will be much more likely to lap water from the leaves than from the bowl. And she should. She has to have water to survive. Dehydration is a common cause of death among pet chameleons.

Awn warning

Early autumn is a time of dry fields loaded with grass awns (foxtails). These potentially deadly, sharp-pointed barbs are the bane of sporting and other dogs. During open-mouth breathing a dog may inhale them into his windpipe where they may penetrate, causing neck abscesses. They can also migrate on into lungs causing other problems. The awns most often lodge in the cheeks and the back of the mouth where they later bore in causing abscesses in gums or elsewhere in the mouth. Recently we mentioned their dire effects in other parts of the body (nose, eyes, ears, sheathe, rectum, vagina, between the toes and, in some heavy-coated dogs, anywhere on the body where continued movement and friction allow the sharp points to penetrate the skin). Any time the dog runs or plays in an area where these awns are encountered, inspection is indicated. When checked immediately, the foxtail may be seen just entering the ear canal or some other parts of the body. Later inspection would only reveal those which are still at the surface or lodged in an easily visible area. The mouth certainly should be inspected. Many awns present in the checks below the gum line can be wiped out with a piece of rough toweling. An inspection of the entire dog can be accomplished in a minute or two. Treatment of the damage they do may take weeks and, occasionally, they pentrate some vital parts of the body to do deadly damage before even being discovered.

Nixon urges Congress act on antibusing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon, again endorsing the right of a child to attend the school nearest his home, urged Congress Monday to approve antibusing legislation

"I am opposed to compulsory busing for the purpose of achieving racial balance in our schools," said the President in his second state of the union message.

"I continue to believe in the neighborhood school —in the right of children to attend school near their homes with friends who live near them."

Under Nixon's leadership, the administration has opposed court-ordered busing as a means of achieving a racial balance in public schools, although it has stopped short of endorsing unsuccessful moves in Congress to approve a constitutional amendment banning it.

In his message to lawmakers Monday, Nixon said Congress should pass antibusing legislation to "aid rather than challenge the courts."

"I continue to believe that busing is an unsatisfactory remedy for the inequities and inequalities of educational opportunity," the President said.

"...We should place effective and reasonable curbs on busing in a way which would aid rather than challenge the courts," he said. "...I will continue to work with the Congress in an effort to enact legislation which will end involuntary busing for the purpose of racial balance and concentrate our effort on true opportunity in education."

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Johnny Bench, who has won all sorts of awards as a star catcher, was originally drafted by the Reds as a first baseman. Bench also played in the outfield as an amateur.

SUSPECT IS WELL-COVERED

Robbery suspect William Thomas Betzner, 22, on balcony, gives up to police after officers surrounded the area after the shooting of a woman in a food stand holdup in Los Angeles. No less than seven officers have their weapons trained on the suspect. Betzner was chased on foot in a running gun battle by an off-duty officer to the apartment house in his escape attempt.

Jet strikes power lines near OIA

ONTARIO — A Continental Airlines jet passenger plane struck some electrical lines near Etiwanda Avenue and the San Bernardino Freeway today while preparing to land at Ontario International Airport.

The airplane, a Boeing 707, was en route from Los Angeles International Airport to Ontario to pick up passengers for a scheduled flight to Chicago.

After the plane hit the electrical wires, it immediately returned to the Los Angeles airport, officials said. The three flight crew members and eight hostesses aboard weren't injured.

Officials said a wheel apparently struck the lines. The weather was reported to have been "real foggy" at the time of the incident. Damage to the plane was reported to be minor.

Passengers for Flight 88 were bused from Ontario to Los Angeles for another flight, officials said.

Members of the Federal Aviation Administration were at the scene this morning to make an investigation.

Southern California Edison Co. officials said the plane apparently struck a "skyline" on a high voltage tower and dropped it over 500,000-volt conductor lines. This static support line, which carries no power itself, is some 180 feet above the ground.

There were no interruptions in electrical service, officials said, but "dips"—brief flickers in lights—may have occurred as far away as Arizona and Northern California because of the high voltage involved.

Most victims trapped on 3rd floor

Rest home blaze kills 11

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Eleven elderly persons died today in a predawn fire which wrecked a convalescent home in West Philadelphia.

Fire Commissioner Joseph Rizzo said a faulty alarm system at the Washington Hill convalescent home brought firemen to the scene too late.

Rizzo said the home also had no overhead sprinkler system.

Firemen rescued about 30 other residents of the home, which had an alarm system connected directly to the fire department's central communications room.

"I feel the alarm did not work properly," Rizzo said.

"The fire could not have gotten a head start the way it did if the system had been working properly."

Fire officials said most of those killed were believed to be men who were trapped on the third floor of the brick structure, a converted Victorian mansion, when the roof collapsed. Officials said there were 39 female residents on the first two floors and 13 men on the top floor.

A Red Cross spokesman said 36 women and three men were taken to a shelter set up in the auditorium of the St. Ignatius Nursing Home.

The three-alarm fire broke out in a second-floor bathroom in a wing of the building shortly before 5 a.m. and quickly spread throughout the structure. It was brought under control within an hour by firemen, who found the building engulfed in flames when they arrived on the scene.

Possible weapon in inflation fight

Nixon reported toying with tax hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is considering asking Congress for a temporary tax increase of up to 10 per cent —refundable later —as a tool to fight inflation, the White House said today.

Melvin R. Laird, Nixon's chief domestic adviser, said a tax boost was one of two proposals recommended to the President by Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, to deal with inflation. The other proposal concerns a variable tax credit of 4 to 15 per cent.

Burns told Congress Wednesday that he had discussed the tax matters with Nixon at a meeting Tuesday and that the President indicated "considerable sympathy."

Laird stressed that no decision had been reached but added, "These particular economic tools are important and they are being given consideration by the President."

Laird, speaking with reporters at the White House, said Nixon had ordered the Treasury Department, his budget analysts and the White House Domestic Council to make detailed studies and to report back to him at an unspecified date.

Congress might not be able to act on such legislation this year, he said, but "there is no reason the President of the United States should not be considering these new ideas and perhaps even be proposing them."

Rowland Dist. parents mull transfer of students to West Covina schools

By LANGE WINCKLER
P-B Staff Writer

ROWLAND HEIGHTS — Residents of the Woodside Village area, disturbed over transfers of their elementary school children to different schools over the past few years, are considering a switch from the Rowland Unified School District to West Covina schools.

Parents met Tuesday evening at a home in the community—located astraddle Walnut and West Covina—to consider their plans. The discussion followed a meeting last week with administrators from the two school districts, which, a community spokesman said, indicated the transfer would not change matters greatly.

However, the parents' session was inconclusive, with some strongly promoting the transfer, and others unsure, said Robert Stankiewicz, chairman of the group. He said another community-wide meeting has been set for later in the month. Then, parents are expected to reach some decision.

At the heart of the issue is Woodside Village's desire to have a neighborhood school—or, lacking that, at least have all the elementary school children in one place. As it stands now, children are divided by grade levels, breaking up families between schools, and they have been shuffled from one school to another every year for the past three years.

According to Dr. Don Wickert, assistant superintendent of administrative services, Woodside Village is caught in a dilemma. There are not enough elementary-level students in the area to justify building a new school there, although developers apparently told those buying homes that a school was planned in the vicinity. And, because growth has put the Rowland district in a pinch, students have been reassigned to schools to make the best use of space.

"What these people are looking for, understandably, is security in assignment," Wickert noted. In that search, parents approached the Rowland board at its last meeting to ask for study of the transfer of territory.

Wickert and Dr. George Dibs, assistant superintendent of education production in the Nogales area, conferred subsequently with community representatives, Dr. Cliff Thyberg, superintendent of the West Covina district, and other West Covina staff members.

No conclusions were reached in that meeting, said both Wickert and Dibs. Thyberg concurred, saying he felt that the Woodside Village area would not benefit from the change, since students would also be bused to West Covina schools, as space allowed, and that his district would not be able to build a school in the area in the foreseeable future.

Furthermore, the administrators all pointed out, West Covina recently lost a bond election for school construction. They said it is doubtful district voters would be any more willing to pass an election so a new facility could be built in Woodside Village.

"This is a many-faceted issue," explained Dibs. "The basic question is, 'How do we get good schools for these kids'?" Not only is de-annexation a problem, he said, or bonded indebtedness, but also transportation. West Covina would have to obtain more buses to handle the total population of 550

STOCKHOLM (UPI) —King Gustaf VI Adolf of Sweden, hospitalized a month ago, suffered a setback during the night when his lung functions worsened and the oxygen content in his blood diminished, a hospital bulletin said today.

Murder victim's heart transplanted into man

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — The heart of a crime victim whose bullet-punctured brain showed no signs of life was removed Wednesday, flown across San Francisso Bay and successfully transplanted into a 52-year-old man.

The heart had been kept beating for two days by a machine and "cerebral death" had been diagnosed before the victim's wife and mother consented to the removal by Dr. Norman Shumway.

Doctors said it was the first reported case of a murder victim's heart being removed for transplanting.

The murder victim, Samuel Moore, 29, had been found in a pool of blood Monday, a bullet in his brain, in the home of an acquaintance, who was arrested.

Alameda County authorities hesitated in their decision to allow the operation on grounds it could cause legal confusion in a future trial.

But early Wednesday a neurologist and a neurosurgeon made a final series tests on Moore's brain and diagnosed "cerebral death."

Deputy Coroner Roland Prahl said, "As long as Dr. Shumway has a patient ready to receive the heart of this man, we'll make an exception."

The recipient of the heart, a victim of heart disease, was reported in satisfactory condition after receiving Moore's heart.

Castro receives tumultuous welcome on Hanoi arrival

SAIGON (UPI) — Cuban Premier Fidel Castro received a tumultuous welcome from government leaders and thousands of civilians when he arrived in Hanoi Wednesday, Hanoi's Vietnam News Agency (VNA) reported today.

"As Premier Fidel Castro, dressed in his legendary olive uniform, emerged from the plane door, hurrahs and shouts of 'viva Fidel,' 'viva Cuba' swept Gia Lam airport," VNA said. The broadcast was monitored in Saigon.

Banners, with welcoming greetings in Spanish and Vietnamese, decorated both the airport and the streets leading to the official guest house where Castro is staying.

VNA said Castro was met at the airport by Le Duan, first secretary of the Communist Party Central Committee; Truong Chinh, member of the politburo; Pham Van Dong, politburo member and chief peace talks negotiator, and several other high ranking officials including Gen. Vo Nguyen Giap.

Fear of letter bombs drives him to suicide

LONDON (UPI) —A coroner's jury ruled today that a 54-year-old BBC messenger commited suicide because he was terrified of carrying a letter bomb from the Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Thomas Eddington was a messenger at the British Broadcasting Corp. whose job it was to sort incoming mail. Three weeks ago, when extremists who Scotland Yard said might be the IRA began mailing letter bombs to targets in London, Washington and Paris, Eddington was frightened to death.

"He watched the television news and kept calling me over and saying, 'There's another one'," Mrs. Eddington said.

Through a long holiday weekend, when police filled the air with warnings about suspicious packages, "all he kept talking about was the letter bombs," she said.

At the end of the weekend, Eddington's daughter testified, Eddington couldn't face it. He went into the bathroom and cut his throat. The daughter found him.

"As I went with him into the ambulance," she testified, "the last words he said were: 'Letter bombs. Letter bombs.'"

Welfare dispute down to wire

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Democrats today hoped political pressure by Califtrnia's aged, blind and disabled would prod Senate Republicans into releasing their grip on a $100 million-plus welfare bill opposed By Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The fight over monthly welfare payments for 500,000 aged, blind and disabled Californians was one of the angriest of this or any recent legislative session. Unusual personal attacks and name-calling were commonplace.

It was the legislature's last major unfinished business before scheduled adjournment of the 1973 session Friday night.

Welfare payments for the aged, blind and disabled now average $212. But unless the state acts, they will plummet to $130 when the federal government takes over administration of the program on Jan. 1.

The Democratic bill (AB18), by Assemblyman John L. Burton of San Francisco, would raise payments to $235 for the aged and disabled and $255 for the blind. It would cost anywhere from $107 million to $170 million annually, depending on whose figures are accurate.

Reagan wants to increase payments to $221 for 87 per cent of the recipients. The other 13 per cent now receive more than that, and their payments would not be changed. Future recipients, however would get just $221. The governor insisted he could do this without legislative authority, something Democrats questioned.

With only one day to spare, the Assembly Wednesday approved the Democratic bill after a bitter noon hour debate. The vote was 55-19, with seven Republicans siding with 48 Democrats.

The bill had been rejected Tuesday by the Senate on a 22-18 vote, five short of passage. But Moscone was granted permission to have the measure reconsidered. The senator planned to wait, he said, until enough favorable votes were assured.

The strategy of Moscone and Burton, two of the legislature's most outspoken liberals, was to drum up senior citizen political heat on Republican senators.

Moscone said he hoped Republicans would "abandon Reagan and his madness of gambling with the fate of our aged, blind and disabled. It's very clear that Reagan seeks to continue his callous disregard for people in pursuit of conservative Republican support for president."

Moscone, a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, said Reagan was pushing California toward "the worst crisis this state has known" and the "blind, old people and severely crippled" faced being "thrown into the streets begging."

The senator also charged that Health and Welfare Secretary Earl Brian, who is trying to run for the U.S. Senate, had "blatantly lied" about the bill.

"The only real lie in this situation," Brian replied in a face-to-face television debate with Moscone, "is that 500,000 people will be thrown out on the streets." He called Moscone "very deceitful."

Moscone said welfare recipients now "eat catfood and dogfood."

During floor debate, Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, told Burton he had worked himself into such "a little emotional whirlwind" he was pushing legislation which didn't stand a chance of being signed by Reagan even if it did pass.

Freshman Assemblyman Lawrence Kapaloff, D-San Diego, told the veteran Bagley he was "selling his soul" to Reagan to win the governor's support in a race for comptroller.

New fighting breaks out in Chile; 1,000 are dead

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Heavy firing broke out in the vicinity of the Defense Ministry and the presidential palace today only half an hour before a 45-hour curfew was to be lifted by the military junta which overthrew the government of socialist President Salvador Allende.

The firing was launched from the Defense Ministry toward the north, in the direction of the partially destroyed presidential palace.

It was not immediately possible to determine the combatants, or the target of the machine gun and artillery fire.

The firing pinned this correspondent to the floor of the UPI bureau directly across the street from the Defense Ministry and only a few yards from the presidential palace.

(In Mexico City, the government announced that the family of Allende, who died in the military coup on Tuesday, had been granted asylum.)

Before the new firing flared in the middle of the capital, it appeared that the ruling military government was in full control of the country.

The junta took office Wednesday night after using warplanes, tanks and artillery to crush resistance by die-hard Allende followers.

Unofficial reports said "at least" 1,000 persons had met death in the revolt. Government sources declined to make even an estimate of the dead, including their casualties. Military sources said 3,000 persons had been detained in the big seaport of Valparaiso and were being kept on ships in the harbor pending investigation.

The junta announced Wednesday that Allende had committed suicide.

Gen. Augusto Pinochet Ugarte, the army chief, was sworn in Wednesday night as president of the four-man junta which led the armed revolt against Allende. Other junta members were heads of the navy, air force and national police. A new cabinet comprised of 13 military men and two civillians was also sworn into office.

He didn't want to leave

Man freed after 21 years in prison in double killing

BERLIN (UPI) —After 21 years behind bars for a double murder, Dietrich Derz was a free man today, but he said he'd rather be back in prison.

"I do not want mercy," he said. "I want justice. I wanted to be freed only on the condition that the authorities admitted they made a mistake and I did not kill my father and his fiancee."

Derz, 53, was convicted 21 years ago of murdering his 61-year-old father and his father's 39-year-old fiancee two days before they were to be married. He received a sentence of life imprisonment.

The sentence was commuted against his will and he agreed to leave West Berlin's Tegel prison only after he was told he would be evicted.

"I would rather be in prison than have people point their fingers at me as a double murderer," he said.

Authorities said Derz was a difficult prisoner with the reputation of a "jail house lawyer." He went on a series of hunger strikes, threatened suicide and sent countless petitions and letters and complaints to city officials.

In the end, he proved just as difficult.

He was let out of prison Wednesday afternoon to look for a place to live on the promise he would be back at 10 p.m., so he could be formally released today.

He did not return.

2 hostages wounded in capture

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (UPI) —A man who said he was fleeing arrest kidnaped three persons to aid in his escape but was captured Wednesday night when he was jumped by one of his wounded hostages, police said.

Witnesses said the man told his hostages, whom he stopped outside a home where they had been visiting, "I'm wanted by the police and one of you is going to have to drive me someplace and I don't want to have to use my gun."

He apparently first wanted to be driven to a nearby airport, but when police gave chase, he took refuge in an unoccupied house. An exchange of gunfire followed.

p.m., when one of the hostages

The 1½ hour incident ended about 7 grabbed the man from behind as the alleged kidnaper held a gun to another hostage's head.

The suspect, identified as Victor Heidlage, 26, was booked at the Newport Beach Police Department on charges of kidnaping and assault with intent to commit murder. Authorities were checking to see if he was wanted elsewhere.

Marco DeSilva, 20, Newport Beach, who jumped Heidlage as police surrounded the house, was shot in the stomach and arm, police said. Denine Baeseman, 16, Pasadena, was wounded three times. A bullet punctured one of her lungs.

The third hostage, a woman, was not identified. A policeman was cut by flying glasss.

Authorities were examining all the guns used to determine the source of the bullets that wounded the hostages.

At one point, a photographer was summoned to act as a go-between when the kidnaper demanded to see a reporter. The gunman at first demanded a police helicopter with a full tank of gas and a female pilot, police said.

FUGITIVE CAPTURED

Progress in UAW, Chrysler talks

DETROIT (UPI) —United Auto Workers President Leonard Woodcock says he is "still hopeful there will be and can be a settlement" with Chrysler Corp. on a new contract before Friday night's strike deadline.

Emerging from an 11-hour session with top company officers Wednesday, Woodcock and Vice President Douglas A. Fraser said there was a feeling that "progress has been made" toward a new contract for 127,500 U.S. and Canadian auto workers.

Rowland Dist. parents . . .

Dibs has promised to work for a solution to the school space problem. He says in the short range, the district needs to keep the community happy with stability in the school assignments. Long-range needs, as he sees them, are improvements in the school programs to serve the public better.

Additionally, West Covina would have a problem with high-school age students, while Nogales High—which serves Woodside Village students—is leveling off in population. With the expected extension of Nogales Street to the development, access to the high school will be simplified.

"Rowland has been very cooperative," said Mrs. Robert Sankiewicz of the district's part in the conversations. "Dr. Dibs, expecially, has made a real effort."

She said discussion on the issue has been going on among parents for the past six or seven months. "The breaking point came last year when they (the district) moved our children again—that's when we started thinking about redistricting."

This year, students from Woodside Village are attending Hurley School in kindergarten through third grades, Villacorata School in fourth through sixth, Giano Intermediate School, and Nogales High School.

Dispite the size of the community—700 homes—Mrs. Stankiewicz says "it will be quite a long time" before there are 600 elementary aged students to populate a neighborhood school. Larwin Development Co. is now building 60 new homes in Woodside Village, and Umark Corp. has plans for apartments, condominiums, and single-family housing in the rest of the undeveloped areas of the vicinity.

All concerned are watching closely a bill sponsored by Assemblyman Joseph Montoya, D-50th Dist., revising transfer of territory procedures. Passed in the lower house last week, Assembly Bill 2613 was due for consideration Wednesday before the Senate Education Committee. A spokesman for Montoya said the bill may proceed through the Senate prior to Sept. 14 adjournment. However, the bill was returned to consultants for further review, which may kill early passage chances.

That measure proposes action on redistricting first by the losing school district's board of trustees, then by the board of the district receiving the new territory. Negative votes by either board kills the action. If 25 per cent of the registered voters in the affected area petition for an election, under the Montoya bill, voters in the receiving district may be asked to approve or disapprove the transfer.

"The door is still open," said Wickert. Neither Rowland or West Covina have acted on the issue, or formed final opinions.

Less for poorer districts

More aid for rich schools

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The nation's better-financed, big city and suburban school districts will get more federal aid this year to educate needy children, while poorer, rural school systems will get less than last year because of new census data, the U.S. Office of Education has disclosed.

Some rural school systems have had to make drastic reductions in their staffs for this fall. Many had made their plans last spring when the new census information was not widely available and the level of federal aid for this school year was undetermined.

Casey County, Kentucky, for example, had to dismiss physical education teachers, an art teacher, librarians and teacher aides because 1970 census data made available by the Office of Education in July reduced its federal aid for needy children by $122,000.

Allocations under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, the largest federal aid package for schools, previously had been made on the basis of 1960 census data. But Congress ordered a change to 1970 data when it became available, in order to reflect population shifts during the 1960s.

As a result, big shifts in aid levels are occurring within states, although states generally are receiving about what they received last year, a combined total of $1.4 billion compared with $1.3 billion.

In Georgia, with a statewide allocation of $39.9 million this year, down $626,000 from last year, Fulton County, including Atlanta schools, is up from $3,750862 to $6,140,037, while rural Stewart County is down from $214,727 to $95,354.

In Pennsylvania, with a slightly increased allocation of $67,113,702, Philadelphia County schools gained $7 million from $20.7 million last year, while rural Somerset County schools declined from $636,078 to $322,451.

Big city and suburban school systems like those in Baltimore, New Orleans and St. Louis generally gain money under the new formula, but there are exceptions, like San Francisco County which loses $400,000.

Basically, the formula reflects the flight of low-income families during the last decade from rural to metropolitan areas. But a rural area did not necessarily have to lose poor people to be hurt by the formula.

Some rural counties have as many poor people as they used to, but their percentage of the state's poor as compared to the cities has changed, and therefore so does their share of aid to the state.

18,844 enrolled in Pomona schools

POMONA — First-day attendance Wednesday in Pomona's public schools was down 689 at the elementary level and up 197 at the secondary level compared to last year.

Combined, the total first-day count fell 492 below last year. However, it was higher than had been projected by district administrators.

Educators reported 10,719 elementary pupils and 8,125 secondary pupils took their places in district classrooms Wednesday for a total attendance figure of 18,844.

This compares to 11,408 elementary and 7,928 secondary pupils — totaling 19,336 — who attended school the first day last year.

Mother of slain baby pleads Fifth

ONTARIO — A Fontana woman, twice arrested and twice released, turned silent under the Fifth Amendment Wednesday after giving brief testimony during a hearing on a motion for new trial for the convicted murderer of her 10-month-old daughter.

In the second day of a West Valley Superior Court hearing requested by William Lattimer Wheeler, 27, of Fontana, convicted of murdering little Virginia Ann Dekker in an Ontario apartment March 9, Francine Edith Dekker, 19, of 7571 Juniper St., Fontana was called back to the stand. Mrs. Dekker last week under questioning by Deputy Dist. Atty. Bill Parker testified that a purported confession she wrote several days after Wheeler was convicted was only partially true.

Admits throwing baby

Mrs. Dekker's confession, addressed to Parker but never mailed, said that she felt Wheeler, her former boyfriend, could not have killed her daughter, and that she picked the baby up in a fit of anger and threw it to the floor. According to the San Bernardino County pathologist, Dr. Irving Root, the baby died of two massive head fractures, that could not have been suffered in a fall or similar accident.

Mrs. Dekker's confession note was found by Wheeler while out on bail awaiting sentencing on a second degree murder conviction in the baby's death. He forwarded it to his attorney and the deputy district atty's office.

Mrs. Dekker on March 9 was arrested along with Wheeler during the police investigation of the baby's death. She was later released and the murder charge dropped.

But several days after Wheeler was convicted of the crime, Mrs. Dekker was arrested again on a murder charge due to the information in the purported confession.

The purported confession spurred a motion for new trial by Wheeler's attorney John Whyte of Pasadena. The day of the hearing on the new trial motion, Mrs. Dekker was again released from custody and the murder charge dropped in West Valley Municipal Court.

Parker, calling Mrs. Dekker to the stand in the Wheeler new trial motion hearing last week, had her say that not all of the confession was true. Mrs. Dekker testified that she still loved Wheeler and wanted him to be free.

Events since release

Whyte, cross-examining Mrs. Dekker Wednesday, asked her what she had done betweeen the time she was released last Friday and Wednesday. She said she got out of jail and went to the Wheeler family home with her sister. She said she had no place to stay Saturday and Sunday night, so she stayed with the Wheelers.

Whyte asked if Mrs. Dekker she knew a woman by the name of Jann Clarke, to which she replied she did.

Whyte asked if Mrs. Deker had talked to Miss Clarke at the county jail after her second arrest on the murder charge. Mrs. Dekker said she had. Then Whyte asked her if she had told Miss Clarke that she intended to plead innocent by reason of temporary insanity to the charge logged against her. Mrs Dekker instead of answering Whyte said, "I refuse to testify on the grounds that it may incriminate me." Her refusal was based upon the Fifth Amendment in the Constitution that allows individuals suspected of crimes not to testify to anything that might incriminate themselves.

Other questions

Mrs. Dekker took the Fifth Amendment on a number of other questions asked by Whyte including "Did you talk to the senior Mr. Wheeler about the case?" And "do you remember a lady named "Val" you had talked with in county jail and you telling her that 'Billy Wheeler did not kill your baby?'."

Mrs. Dekker was dismissed from the stand by Whyte who then called Miss Jean Clarke to the stand.

Miss Clarke testified that she had talked to Mrs. Dekker at the county jail, where she was a visitor, and that Mrs. Dekker had told her than she intended to plead innocent by reason of temporary insanity to the murder charge.

Judge James Cunningham, after hearing the testimony, told Whyte to submit his written arguments to the court in the next week and then told Parker he had until Oct. 26 to reply to the information submitted by the defense. The hearing was continued to Oct. 26, when the judge will determine if Wheeler will have an opportunity for a new trial

By RICK GOTCHER
P-B Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Should the painful back ailment of Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., keep him from seeking another term in office, ending his reign as chairman of the powerful Ways and Means Committee, the committee will not collapse but will undergo an active transition, says a Republican committee member.

California Rep. Jerry Pettis, R-33rd Dist., says the prevailing belief that without Mills the Ways and Means Committee cannot function stems from the personal stature of the Arkansas congressman.

"The fact is, that when you have a strong oak tree like Wilbur Mills, people are less likely to look to the No. 1 or 3 man for leadership and counsel," Pettis said.

"Probably few people even know that Al Ullman (D-Ore.) is No. 2 on our committee," the Californian said. "I know there are congressmen here who can't name the second men on more than a couple of committees.

"Prophets who predict dire results for Ways and Means are bad students of history. It seems the office makes the man and Al Ullman is the kind who will make a good, strong chairman."

Pettis hastened to add he is not counting out Mills' recovery from the back problem that now has him bedfast in an Arkansas hospital. He also noted that Ullman will not attempt to usurp Mills' position while Mills is still in office, regardless of personal circumstances.

The congressman said a small vacuum has been created by Mills' absence from Ways and Means. But this is only because Mills' status is uncertain, he added.

Pettis said should Ullman succeed Mills he expects an "expert change in modus operandi" of the committee.

He said the one-man rule of Mills has sometimes caused committee activity to be wasted. Under Ullman, Pettis said he expects to see a "task force effect," enabling more members of the 25-man committee to "get a piece of the action."

Ways and Means is the only House committee that operates without subcommittees. And while Ullman's "task force" approach does not imply subcommittees, it still gives a specific chore to three or four well-versed members and leaves the rest of the committee free for other jobs, said Pettis.

Pettis also said that with the "broad spectrum of interest" overseen by Ways and Means in writing tax laws, it would be beneficial to take advantage of all expertise within the committee.

Some reports have cast doubt that without Mills Ways and Means can write effective tax legislation, which now seems necessary to put the brakes on an overheated economy.

Pettis thinks otherwise.

"We have set up the agenda for the rest of this session," Pettis said, "and we've done so knowing that Wilbur Mills might not be back.

"I cannot talk specifics about tax proposals, just yet. But I will say we have outlined a strict discipline for ourselves and taxes are on the agenda."

Pettis said if some tax is not levied this year, no tax increase will pass next year due to elections. He also said the following year could very well be too late to allay the recession that can follow the current boom.

Walnut expands issue of lower speed limits

By LANGE WINCKLER
P-B Staff Writer

WALNUT — The City Council Wednesday took mostly delaying action for a later session. A routine vote setting speed limits on Lemon Avenue blossomed into a traffic study of lower speed limits on Grand Avenue, while final decisions on city procedures for making environmental impact reports and granting a rubbish hauling franchise were held up by a councilman's absence

Hottest action of the night was a mildly disputed transfer of a city lighting maintenance district to a countywide agency.

Speed on Grand

When the council dipped into language changing speed limit statutes for Lemon from 45 to 35 miles per hour, member Joe Dyer stepped in with a suggestion the whole issue be delayed for study of a lower speed limit on Grand. He was joined by Councilman Robert Lovemark, who noted, "It's supposed to be 45 now and they do 60 — maybe if we post it at 35, they'll do 50."

Amid comment on the success of new traffic control signs around Mt. San Antonio College, the council finally decided to send the question back to staff for study. As proposed the council wishes to drop the speed limit to 35 m.p.h. for all of Grand from Valley Boulevard to the northern city limits.

Possible revision of the way city environmental impact reports are prepared has been a topic of council conversation for some time. However, Councilman William Cotten, one of the principals in the talks, was not able to attend Wednesday's meeting, so action was held off.

Likewise, Cotten is a member of the council-staff committee that has been working on terms of a proposed contract and invitation to bid for an exclusive rubbish hauling franchise in Walnut. In his absence, the panel decided to wait for final action.

Lighting district change

What looked like a potential "hot potato" before the session turned out to be a change in names when the council backed transfer of the city lighting district to county status. It appeared earlier as though the transfer could open up Walnut residents to a tax raid by the county, and councilmen probed this before being satisfied that such will not be the case

But Lovemark, noting the transfer was sought to evade some of the restrictions of Senate Bill 90, which put a ceiling on charges levied by the district, was displeased. "We scream at the legislature to lower our taxes," he declared, "and here we find ways to get around that."

His was the only negative vote on the action.

School rental fees going up in Upland

UPLAND — The cost to outside groups for the use of Upland School District buildings will increase under a new policy being considered by the school board.

In general, the new policy, accepted on a first reading at this week's board meeting, sets forth a more extensive schedule of rental fees which will be charged all religious groups and all groups and organizations which charge admission or enrollment fees or solicit contributions that are not spent for the benefit of district pupils or charitable purposes.

According to Business Manager Glenn Hardy, the new policy is prompted by the increase in building operation costs and the increased use of district buildings for community college extension courses.

In the fee schedule, a minimum charge is set for the first two hours of use of any facility. A fee equal to half the minimum charge is set for each additional full or partial hour.

For example, the fee for all classrooms will be $8 for the first two hours and $4 for each additional hour. The fee is higher for the use of larger facilities such as multipurpose rooms, gymnasiums and shower and locker room facilities.

The fee for kitchen facilities will be $5 per hour The fee will be charged all groups, except district students or PTA groups, even when the free use of other facilities has been granted.

The fees will be paid at least seven days in advance to the district business office. Advance payments will be refunded in full if cancellation notice is received 24 hours in advance of the scheduled activity.

Man stricken fatally while painting roof

Grant Donald Mesmer, who lived with his wife, Mary, at the trailer park, collapsed after climbing a ladder to the top of the trailer. He was taken to San Dimas Community Hospital where he died a few minutes later.

Mesmer was painting the roof of the trailer with a neighbor, Aloysius Vollmer, 59, when he collapsed shorily after 4 p.m.

DIAMOND BAR Pending zone changes, to bring undeveloped land into line with the county's new general plan, will be discussed by representatives of the Diamond bar Development Corp. and directors of the Diamond Bar Homeowners Association when they meet tonight at 7:30 at the home of Charles Hall, 1656 Aspen Road.

Registration issue signed by governor

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill allowing California voters to register as "nonpartisan" was signed recently by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Under the bill (SB294) by Sen. Albert S. Rodda, D-Sacramento, the "nonpartisan" designation would be in addition to current alternatives of party affiliation or "decline to state."

Voters who choose the "nonpartisan" label, like those who opt for "decline to state," would not be allowed to vote in party primary elections.

Martha says Nixon linked to Mafia

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Martha Mitchell said today the Senate Watergate committee probably will not call her as a witness because the committee is trying to protect President Nixon.

"You know why they don't want me to testify?" she asked UPI reporter Helen Thomas in an early morning phone call. "They don't want to crucify President Nixon. Don't kid yourself—they're trying to go easy on him.'

She also said, "I think the Mafia was involved (in the President's re-election campaign) and I think Nixon was involved with the Mafia." She did not elaborate.

In a previous conversation, she said she had seen a campaign strategy book allegedly approved by Nixon and his former chief aide, H.R. Haldeman, which she said contained blueprints for Watergate-style operations.

She also said today she was "very upset" that the perjury and obstruction of justice trial of her husband, former Attorney General John N. Mitchell, and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans, was postponed Tuesday to give their lawyers more time to prepare a defense

"I want him tried immediately," she said. "I can face the outcome better and he can, too, if it is not prolonged."

Mitchell and Stans are accused of attempting to obstruct a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco in return for a $200,000 cash donation to the reelection campaign.

She said she is anxious "to get rid of" the trial because "I've been through this for a year and a half—for so long."

Mrs. Mitchell disputed the lawyers' arguments that they needed more time. "That is not true," she said. "John has been sitting here day after day getting ready."

She said the delay was sought because if all the Watergate bit comes out there could be no trial."

Mitchell and Stans had claimed they could not get a fair trial because of prejudicial publicity about the Watergate case.

Chino B of A to unveil new look

CHINO — The Bank of America here will unveil its streamlined new look to customers and guests at a public open house all day Friday, announced James Fero, vice president and manager.

The event marks the completion of a $320,000 expansion and modernization project in which both the exterior and interior of the office have been remodeled.

Key element in the renovation was the construction of a 2,700-square-foot addition to the rear of the building permitting the expansion of the lobby, officers' section and teller line and the installation of two new walk-up and two drive-up teller units.

The exterior face of the office has been modernized in a contemporary Spanish design featuring ceramic tile walls and mission tile roof sections.

Inside the bank has been expanded and redesigned according to the bank's open area concept. The railings which previously surrounded the officers' section have been removed and the area has been outfitted with contemporary furniture and new carpeting.

The check-writing desks in the center of the lobby have been replaced with contemporary wall-hanging models and all new lowline teller counters and multi-colored floor-to-ceiling vinyl wall coverings also have been installed.

The academy will provide instruction in the basic organization and concept of the state correctional service in a five-week series of classes.

Both programs will be directed by Robert W. Reed, coordinator of the college's department of administration of justice.

In other action, the board approved a $65 maximum daily allowance for expenses of board members traveling on official school business.

GOP faces tough job in California

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Poll reported today that the Republicans face a tough job in retaining control of the governorship in 1974 — even should Gov. Ronald Reagan change his mind and run for a third term.

It said that in any early matchup, Democratic gubernatorial contenders Edmund G. Brown Jr., Joseph Alioto and Robert Moretti lead or are very close in overall voter preference to Reagan and GOP contenders Edward Reinecke, Robert Finch, Evelle Younger and Houston Flournoy.

Secretary of State Brown makes the strongest showing, beating Reagan 51-39, Reinecke 50-38, Younger 46-40, Finch 4836 and Flournoy 55-26.

When Mayor Alioto faces the same five men, the poll said the results are Alioto vs. Reagan 45-45, Reinecke 41-45, Younger 40-44, Finch 42-40 and Flournoy 46-33.

Assembly Speaker Moretti loses to Reagan 40-45, Reinecke 36-41, Younger 39-42, and defeats Finch 41-34 and Flournoy 43-27.

The poll listed several factors helping the Democratic candidates, including the registration bulge in California of 56 to 37 per cent, the current problems facing Republican President Richard M. Nixon and the fact that any two-term governor, no mater how popular he may have been, has more opportunity to alienate voters.

His lost love was a TV set

TOKYO (UPI) —A man checked into an inn known for romantic trysts—alone. He paid for two and said his lover would arrive shortly. She never arrived.

A room clerk finally became suspicious and went to the room where he found a kimono spread over the traditional "tokonoma" alcove. When the kimono was lifted, it was found that the room's television set was gone.

Police arrested a 25-year-old man and said he had made $3,800 in the last 15 days by stealing television sets and pawning them.

New product --algameat

MANILA (UPI) The Philippines' National Istitute of Science and Technology says its scientists have developed processes for making "algameat" from chlorella, a common single-celled alga that grows as scum in ponds and is rich in protein.

Who's on firstsky?

By JOSEPH FIRMAN

Why don't the Russians play baseball?

The muscular Muscovites do right well in track and field at the Olympics. The Americans taught them basketball and the Candians taught them ice hockey. For an underprivileged nation, they have done quite well. They don't play golf, of course (golf course, hee-haw!) and they are weak at tennis. But if they invented baseball, how come they're not in the World Series?

Antriklopedia Sportvania (Sports Encyclopedia) at the Lenin Library in Moscow claims that the game of beizbol was first played in Russia. (You could pick off a baserunner if he took too many steppes off first.)

USSR types claim that the ancestor of baseball was a sport named "lapta," played by the Russian peasants back in the Middle Ages. The game was played in the snow, of course, using the head of the latest foreign emissary to the court as the ball. The Czar usually threw out the first skull.

"Lapta," says Alexis Chickens of the Soviet Committee of Sports, "is older than the world 'sports' itself. In Romania they called it 'oina' or 'pesa', and Anglo-Saxon tribes overruning the Eastern continent became intrigued and carried the game back to the British Isles."

Why the game never caught on in the land of borscht and samovars is not explained. You might say that Alexis chickens out on the question.

Russia clearly had a long lead in the development of the game. They had night beizbol in Siberia, played by the light of the Midnight Sun, long before Gaylord Perry began firing his spit-skulls at the warclubs of the Kirghizians, or Wilbur Wood learned the cranium knuckleball.

There were problems, of course. It was hard to beat out a bunt wearing snowshoes. The umpires were Cossacks who would slash off the head of a batter protesting a called third strike. And then there were all those wolves in the grandstand.

It would be nice to see the Soviets develop in baseball, but what would be the attitude of a Russian team facing the Cincinnati Reds?

Don't tell a Polish joke, these anglers may hit you

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Three fishermen said that they were rescued at sea by a Polish fishing boat after several nearby ships of a Russian fishing fleet failed to answer their distress call.

Mrs. Shirley Collins, 39, James Ferdette, 40, and Kenneth Price, 56, all of Corvallis, Ore., said they drifted helplessly in their small boat for 30 hours Sunday and Monday before they were picked up.

"They're beautiful people," Mrs. Collins said of their rescuers

The three spent eight hours aboard the Polish vessel before a Coast Guard craft brought them back to shore. The engine on Ferdette's 17-foot boat quit as the three were returning from fishing Sunday.

Price said several ships of the Russian fishing fleet were nearby but did not answer their distress call. About 5 a.m. Monday a trawler "with a flag we had never seen" pulled alongside and a man inquired, "Motor trouble?"

The three were quickly taken aboard the Polish vessel and given the captain's cabin.

"They fed us so much food and were so nice to us I'll never forget," Price said.

"I've never tasted better food. There was real butter, fresh milk, homemade bread, sausages and frankfurters like I've never tasted and the vodka was out of this world."

Ferdette added, "They enjoyed it as much as we did. They were having such a good time they didn't want us to go."

A FAMILY WEEKLY "Star Chat" — September 16

James Garner

FAMILY WEEKLY: Do you have a temper?

JAMES GARNER: I lost it years ago and never found it again. No, honestly — I do have a violent temper. But I have a high boiling point. Usually I boil over when I encounter dishonesty or when somebody kicks somebody else who can't fight back.

For this week's cover story, Family Weekly's Hollywood editor Peer J. Oppenheimer has transcribed a rare, on-location interview with one of the movies' most elusive stars, James Garner. A very private person off-camera, the actor, who's usually very reluctant to talk about himself, explains, "I can't understand why anyone would want an opinion from me."

Xrays viewed as risking birth defects

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three types of X-ray examinations of pregnant women pose high risks of causing birth defects by damaging the embryo and seven other X-ray procedures are questionable, a government scientist has reported.

But Dr. Roberts Rugh, a researcher with the Bureau of Radiological Health, said there are 56 other types of X-ray examinations that now appear relatively safe although they too could expose a developing child to some radiation.

"I don't want to frighten people and imply that any diagnostic radiology is going to cause an anomalous child," Rugh said in a news conference.

Rugh, in a paper written with Dr. William Leach, told a meeting of the international Radiation Protection Association that the earlier in pregnancy a woman is exposed to radiation, the greater the chance the unborn child will be affected.

"The most crucial time for the human is between conception and 42 days," Rugh said.

"The physician must therefore consider and balance the benefit to the mother against the risk to the fetus," the report said. Rugh said that the mother's health should have priority and he said he personally would recommend a therapeutic abortion if the fetus was exposed to one of the three high-radiation X-ray procedures.

He said the three dangerous procedures were abdominal Xray filming of the aorta, the main artery; similar X-ray photography of an abdominal artery; and X-ray filming of the urinary bladder. Each procedure, Rugh said, could expose an embroyo to 20 rads.

Rugh said physicians in Denmark routinely recommend abortions if a pregnant woman is exposed to a 10-rad dose of radiation. He said there are no such standards in this country but there should be.

Rugh and Leach also said Xrays could harm an embryo when a woman doesn't realize she is pregnant. They suggested that diagnostic use of X-rays be limited when possible to the 10-day period of each month when a woman is unlikely to conceive.

Rugh said 7 per cent of children born each year have congenital abnormalities, but he said radiation during early development of the fetus probably accounts for a very low percentage, possibly only 1 to 2 per cent.

Student job preparation plan readied

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A special state task force has been set up to help public schools develop programs to prepare students for jobs of the future.

State Health and Welfare Secretary Earl Brian, in announcing the task force, Tuesday said that about 250,000 young people each year leave high school or drop out of college "with no plans, no marketable skill and no practical preparation for work."

"Instead of attempting to solve unemployment problems by manpower training programs costing millions of dollars, it's obviously wiser and more economical to prevent the problem arising in the first place," he said.

Brian said the Occupational Preparation Task Force, headed by state Finance Director Verne Orr, will gather labor market information and future job opportunities to provide schools with data needed for improved student counseling and career guidance.

He said detailed studies, the first of which will be held in the Los Angeles area, "will project new jobs and replacement needs for the state's entire work force, area-by-area, consisting of about 200 industries and 450 occupations covering all major employment opportunities."

Brian said this information would be provided to local schools and colleges to give students "an accurate picture of potential career opportunities."

The lighter side

From Dead Sea scrolls to Watergate

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Ancient scrolls, some of which appear to contain variations of Biblical narratives, continue to turn up in the Dead Sea area.

At the moment, I understand scholars are trying to piece together a crumbling parchment that bears some semblance to the familiar account of the origin of the Ten Commandments.

In the Old Testament version, Moses descends from Mt. Sinai with two stone tablets of laws written by "the finger of God."

Subsequently he breaks the tablets in anger over finding his people worshipping the golden calf.

Not enough of the Dead Sea parchment has been restored for scholars to state with finality that it deals with the same event.

From what has been translated thus far, the differences seem to overshadow the similarities. Nevertheless, it is interesting to compare the two accounts.

In the scroll version, a man whose name may be rendered in English as Mozes, or Mozis, is chosen as leader of a group of people.

He spends some time on a mountaintop in communication with an adviser, who may or may not have been God.

When he returns, the people are eager to learn what Mozus, or Mozis, said to God and what God told Mozus, or Mozis.

But Mozus, or Mozis, refuses to reveal the nature of the conference, citing executive privilege.

He explains that the chosen leader of a group of people must seek advice and counsel from a great variety of sources, including Divine Guidance.

These consultations must necessarily be held in strict confidence, he continues. Otherwise, his advisers would not feel free to speak frankly and without fear of their points of view being misconstrued.

His followers accept this argument. But subsequently it becomes known that Mozus, or Mozis, has secretly recorded the mountaintop conversations on two stone tablets.

The people contend that the stone transcripts constitute a breach of confidentiality and that the contents of the tablets should therefore be made public.

Mozus, or Mozis, rejects the demand, insisting that the tablets were inscribed for historical purposes. He says different people reading the tablets might interpret them in different ways.

And he reiterates that the chosen leader of a group of people has the inherent power and right to withhold such information.

If it comes to a showdown, he says he will break the tablets rather than reveal their contents. The scrolls do not make clear what happens after that.

CHP protesters ask halt to bond deductions

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The California Association of Highway Patrolmen is urging its 6,000 members to discontinue payroll deductions for U.S. savings bonds in protest of the recent federal rollback of state employe raises.

"We want to let the Cost of Living Council know we are unhappy and this is one of the few ways we have of protesting," said Sgt. Norton Robinson.

He said CHP employes have had "a very, very high participation" in payroll deductions for bonds.

Last week the council cut 1973-74 pay raises for 125,000 California state employes from an 11.9 per cent approved by the legislature to a maximum 7 per cent.

By L.T. ROGERS
Asst. City Editor

POMONA — The developer of a proposed 10-story, 100-unit condominium development near the Pomona Civic Center has been asked to acquire more property for the project.

Thomas W. Scott of Pasadena plans to build two 10-story towers with a central elevator system on two acres generally bounded by Park and Parcels avenues, Seventh Street and an alley behind the Barrister Building.

Scott appeared before the Pomona Planning Commission Wednesday night seeking a zone change to Civic Redevelopment; a use permit to develop a highrise residential structure under provisions of the redevelopment zone; and a variance to reduce various development standards, including all setbacks, off-street parking, tennis court fence height, distance between buildings, open space requirements and patio sizes.

The city planning staff, however, stated the proposed development as presented was unacceptable. Jim Lightfoot, planning aide, suggested that either the site be enlarged or the numberof units be reduced to 80.

Two major problems include the setbacks and the amount of open space, he added. "The applicant is seeking variances to permit an eight-foot setback on Park, three feet on sideyards and ne setbacks on Parcels and Seventh streets. The city ordinance requires 15-foot setbacks," said Lightfoot.

The ordinance also requires 400 square feet of open space for each residential unit. This is a total of 40,000 for the 100 units, he explained. Only 27,000 square feet of open space is being proposed.

"We do not feel we have an adequate project for consideration," he added.

In his presentation, Scott said his staff had remeasured the proposed site and discovered there are 37,000 square feet of open space for the units.

Scott also presented an alternate proposal which expanded the project onto three additional parcels at the southeast corner of Seventh Street and Park avenue. He doesn't own this property at present.

The addition of this property, he explained, would make the project compatible with most city ordinance requirements, except for some setbacks in some areas.

Scott reported he had met Tuesday night with the Pomona Redevelopment Commission, and members had approved the concept.

In discussing the project, Scott reported each two-bedroom condominium unit would have 1,100 square feet of floor space. The prices may range from $30,000 to $42,000, with the average price being about $36,000.

The project would include a two-level parking structure with 175 parking spaces.

Scott plans to construct the first wing of 50 units during the first year, then build the second increment when sales warrant, possibly a year later.

The total project is expected to represent a $4 million investment, including building and property.

In commission discussion, Planner J. Romo said the Redevelopment Commission was of the opinion the corner parcels should be acquired for the project.

The developer, he added, wants to get started by Jan. 1 or the cost will go up 7 per cent. "I would like us to move along with this and have the developer take steps necessary. This would help to upgrade that area."

Planner E. J. Gaulding, while noting the project would have a "tremendous potential" for Pomona, said he couldn't support it without the addition of more property. "If the developer acquires the corner parsel, that would be the minimum acceptable to me."

The commission took two separate actions on the application. The first was to recommend the developer acquire the corner parcels and the approval of a high-rise overlay for that area presented in the orginal application.

Members continued the hearing to Sept. 26 when the revised application will again be considered.

HIGH RISE CONDOMINIUM

This architect's drawing depicts a 10-story, 100-unit condominium development being proposed on a site between Park and Parcels avenues and Seventh Street and an alley behind the Barrister Building. The Pomona Planning Commission postponed approval of the project Wednesday night pending the acquisition of additional property. The developer hopes to begin construction this year.

Recreation Dept. offers program for preschoolers

POMONA — The parks and recreation department again is offering a preschool program for children between the ages of 3 years, 7 months, and 5.

The program will start Wednesday and will continue for 10 weeks at the Palomares Community Center, 475 E. Arrow Highway. Enrollment is limited to the first 30 children.

Classes, which will meet Wednesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to noon, will include arts and crafts, story times, games, outdoor play, snacks and field trips. Mrs. Shirley Jennings will be the instructor.

Motorcyclist breaks foot in crash

The cyclist, Robert L. Jenkins, 37, 1031 Friar Lane, also suffered injuries to his right shoulder and leg. He was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where his condition today was termed satisfactory.

The motorist, Marcus M. Whitechurch, 72, 1120 S. Reservoir St., told police his car had quit in the street and he was attempting to restart the engine when the accident occurred.

A La Puente man was arrested late Tuesday night after his car slammed into 80 feet of six-foot chain-link fencing at Teledyne Casting Co., 4200 W. Valley Blvd.

Reginald M. Arterberry, 24, 18433 Hurley Ave., was booked on a drunken driving charge. He told police he must have fallen asleep while driving westbound on Valley shortly before midnight.

Group planning cultural center will meet tonight

POMONA — The Citizens Committee of '76 will hold its second public meeting tonight for a first reading of the group's proposed by-laws. The public is invited to attend.

The meeting, which will start at 7:30 p.m., will be held at the Great Western Savings and Loan Association building, 300 Pomona Mall West.

Formed July 24 after an initial meeting of interested citizens, the committee has the purpose of organizing support and planning the construction of a social and cultural center for Pomona as a commemoration of the bicentennial of the nation's independence.

Fred Graff and Mrs. Harry Williamson are temporary co-chairmen, with Nancy Selby serving as secretary and Opal DeBeeson as treasurer.

Proposed by-laws were written by a committee made up of Graff, C. Mack Gilliland of the Valley Community Theater, and Parks and Recreation Commissioner Richard Owens.

The reading will have the intent of enabling the group to register as a California nonprofit corporation.

Other agenda items include the appointment of a nominating committee to select a board of directors and a report from Graff on a Channel 5 television interview with him broadcast this morning.

The committee presently is in the process of circulating petitions and various groups and organizations in the city affiliated with the committee are formulting resolutions of support.

The results of the by-laws presentation and the election of the group's first board of directors also is expected at the October meeting.

Graff urged all groups and organizations and private individuals who have not had a chance to get involved to attend tonight's meeting.

"The support we have received so far from petition circulators and the general discussion has been extremely rewarding," Graff stated. "It renews the faith that Pomona is ready, willing and more than able to renew itself with the construction of the arts center we envisage."

Further information about the committee, where its petitions are located, or about tonight's meeting can be obtained by calling Mrs. Williamson at 623-7467, or Graff at 593-2328.

Mexican festivity will close part of Grand Ave. Sunday

POMONA — Grand Avenue, from Park Avenue to Main Street, will be closed to traffic Sunday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. for a fiesta celebrating Mexican Independence Day.

Policing will be done by members of the Sharkey Park Committee which received City Council approval for the street closure, for use of city equipment such as tables, chairs and a public address system, and for city expenditures of $88 for portable toilets.

The request was made by Ben Carpio of the committee. The council asked that the event by coordinated with the police department.

On a motion by Councilman R. T. French, the council also asked that the Parks and Recreation Commission study the lack of restroom facilities at Sharkey Park.

POMONA — Brian Van Camp, California's "reform-minded" commissioner of corporations, said here Wednesday that he may run for secretary of state in 1974.

A final decision, he said, would be made "after the first of the year." He would be a Republican candidate for the nomination in the June primary.

Van Camp, who came to Pomona to address a meeting of the Kiwanis Club Wednesday noon at the Elks Lodge, said he was giving "close consideration" to running for state office, and that he had friends "starting steering committees in all corners of the state.

"I feel I have a grasp of the problems of those in corporations," said Van Camp, 33, a former deputy attorney general assigned to the office of the secretary of state as legal cousel to the late Frank Jordan.

"I feel there is a great need to simplify the filing procedure and speed-up and time required."

Van Camp said filing procedures were efficiently administered by Jordan, but have been allowed to lag by incumbent Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr.

He did credit Brown with "bringing necessary vigor to enforcement of the campaign practices code and state election laws."

However, such enforcement should be impartial and nonpartisan, Van Camp added.

Since Brown already is an announced candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor in California and will not be seeking re-election as secretary of state, Van Camp agreed he has no name competition at present for the office.

Van Camp was appointed to his current position by Gov. Ronald Reagan in August of 1971. He has focused department activities on improved regulation of investments, especially real estate investment trusts, mutual funds, credit unions and finance companies.

In addition, in recent months, the department has clamped down on abuses in real estate syndications, commodity option sales and "pyramid" sales schemes.

In City of Industry, classes will be taught Tuesdays at the La Puente Adult School from 7 to 10 p.m. starting this week.

Barbara L. Jones, president of the Pomona Valley Hearing Society, said anyone suffering from a hearing loss is invited to attend.

New principal at Lorbeer J.H. is Saugus man

POMONA — Stephen A. Goldstone, 34, of Saugus, has been hired by the Pomona school board to succeed Robert W. McQueen as principal of Lorbeer Junior High School in Diamond Bar.

Since 1970, Goldstone has served as an assistant principal at two junior high schools in the William S. Hart Union School District.

McQueen, who had been with Pomona schools 17 years, resigned two weeks ago to accept a position as principal of the Los Alisos Intermediate School in the Saddleback Valley Unified School District at El Toro.

McQueen came to Pomona in 1956. He taught at Emerson Junior High School and Pomona High School before beinb named assistant principal at Emerson in 1965. He was named Lorbeer principal in 1968.

Goldstone, married and father of three children, began his career as a teacher in Santa Monica in 1964. He served as a counselor and teacher in Los Angeles from 1965 to 1970, and in 1970 was named assistant principal in Saugus.

Goldstone received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from Cal State Northridge. He has done additional graduate work at USC.

He will go on the payroll here Sept. 17, at an annual $21,546 salary.

Eleven persons were interviewed for the Lorbeer principal position.

The resignation of Lloyd J. Lewke, vice principal at North San Antonio Elementary School, was accepted Tuesday by the school board.

Lewke has accepted a position as principal at an Upland elementary school.

He has been with Pomona school district six years.

Opinion

Fairs pay off

The Los Angeles County Fair which opens in Pomona Friday for its 46th year is an annual event well known throughout the state and the entire nation.

But it does not stand alone. As the largest county fair in America, it is the flagship of a statewide industry comprised of some 76 other fairs and expositions . . . an industry that generates more than $159 million in transactions annually and ranks 59th in the state.

That this fair industry is a resource not only to the areas in which they are located but to the state is indicated by the fact that between $15 million and $19 million is returned to the state in the form of sales, parimutuel and personal state income taxes. That is approximately twice the $8 million expended on support of the fairs.

These facts have been revealed by the Western Fairs Association, which in cooperation with the California Department of Food and Agriculture and the Joint Legislative Committee on Fairs Allocation and Classification assisted in a special study conducted by Security Pacific National Bank.

Far from being simply a valuable economic force, however, the fairs have an important social and cultural impact on the communities and the state. Approximately 13 million people and 4,000 organizations used these fair facilities last year. That is almost two-thirds of the state's population. Pomona's fair alone attracts more than one million persons during its 17-day run.

Fairs are fun. It's good to know they also serve so well in so many ways.

Look at presidency

If Watergate has accomplished nothing else of positive benefit, it has inspired a fresh look at the American presidency,and how it grows.

One of the latest books to put the White House under the microscope is "The Presidency in Flux," (Columbia University Press) by George Reedy, the late President Lyndon B. Johnson's press secretary.

In one section of the book, Reedy examines a phenomenon most other observers have ignored — the proliferation of presidential libraries in recent years which, according to Reedy, "has taken on megalomanic overtones."

Libraries have been established to house the works and papers of Presidents Harry Truman, Herbert Hoover, Dwight Eisenhower, Franklin Roosevelt, Lyndon Johnson and others.

The most pretentious edifice to date is that honoring Reedy's old boss, LBJ, on the campus of the University of Texas in Austin. A move to create a library to house the documents (and tapes?) of President Nixon has been stalled by the Watergate scandal.

In an article taken from his book and published in the current Intellectual Digest, Reedy suggests that rather helping historians, such repositories may actually confound their problems.

"I doubt seriously," he says, "that the libraries reflect a genuine concern for future generations and the problems they face. They smack more of the Egyptian pharoahs who sought immortality through the erection of stone pyramids."

Reedy explains the trend of contemporary presidents to establish presidential libraries as an attempt by the chief executives to have posterity think well of them. When a man achieves the White House, he says, "there is nothing more that the people can grant him."

Thereafter, he says, it is only a matter of time until constituencies fade in his sight. The larger question becomes the reaction of history to his administration rather than the reaction of voters.

"I suggest there is something unhealthy," says Reedy, "about a form of government in which a man who is faced with day-to-day problems of government devotes so much energy to his image in the future."

He adds, in words that deserve to be struck in bronze and affixed above the door of the Oval Office:

"The reaction of history — especially history that has yet to be written—is a poor guide to public policy."

Proposition 20

During the Proposition No. 20 campaign last fall the voters were warned over and over again that the so-called coastal conservation initiative was a mishmash of errors and highly questionable authorizations of power.

They were just as frequently assured by the proponents that if any such errors did exist they could be taken care of in the courts. They have been.

The State Supreme Court's recent adverse interpretation of Prop. 20 confirmed the warnings of last fall to such an extent that the chairman of the State Coast Commission, created by the act, considers it "a give-away to the developers," and the forerunner of further decisions weakening the impact of the initiative. He probably is correct in the latter, at least.

The court's ruling is too complex to discuss briefly, but it concerns exemptions from the new law based on "vested rights" acquired before passage of Prop. 20. Melvin B. Lane, commission chairman, charged that the court had misread the expectation of the voters favoring the initiative, that the average voter "had no idea that a giant loophole was being provided. . . "

If that is true it is because the voters believed the promoters of Prop. 20 and did not, as urged by the opponents, read the initiative itself. To read it was to oppose it.

Speaker wants to see FBI files

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Carl Albert has asked the FBI's new boss, Clarence Kelley, to advise him on the "very serious matter" of FBI congressional files.

For years, we have been reporting on the FBI's habit of keeping files on prominent Americans, including members of Congress. As evidence, we have quoted excerpts from the secret FBI files.

When Kelley's predecessor, Pat Gray, took over the FBI he blandly assured newsmen: "None of you guys are going to believe this — and I don't know how to make you belive it — but there are no dossiers or secret files."

We immediately offered to tell Gray, since he was new around the FBI, where some of the secret files were stashed. We even printed several of the file numbers to help him locate the hidden dossiers.

Caught snooping

But it wasn't until the FBI was caught snooping into the private life of a Democratic congressional candidate six months later that Gray admitted the FBI had been collecting information on both congressmen and candidates since 1950.

Several congressmen, eager to find out what the FBI has been compiling about them, have asked to see their FBI files. But the bureau has contended that the law prohibits the destruction or dissemination of existing files.

Now the mighty House Speaker has joined in the inquiry. As yet, Kelley hasn't responded to Albert's request. But he has been turning down other congressional requests.

For example, Rep. Edward Koch, D-N.Y., a leader in the effort to close the books on the FBI's political files, got nowhere with Kelley

'Equally entitled'

"I am confident," responded the FBI chief in a private letter, "that you have file references in your office on me and my predecessors (to locate correspondence). I see nothing sinister in your maintenance of file references on me and trust you would agree this bureau is equally entitled to maintain such file references concerning you."

From our own access to the FBI's secret files, however, we can report that the FBI keeps far more than routine references. The congressional dossiers, in addition to newspaper clippings and biographical data, also contain eavesdrop information, surveillance reports and gossip from informants.

Speaker Albert's FBI file, for example, contains a report about his relationship with lobbyist Fred Black based upon conversation picked up by an FBI listening device.

The firm but friendly Kelley, however, shows no inclination to open up the congressional files. Although the FBI hasn't hesitated in the past to show files to favored,congressmen and newsmen, Kelley wrote to Koch:

'Seek new law'

"If there is a need to purge all references to you from FBI files or that you must inspect our files, certainly you are entiled to seek appropriate legislation to accomplish your objectives."

Unless Albert's intervention carries more weight with Kelley, in other words, it will take an Act of Congress to eliminate the FBI's political files.

DIPLOMATIC EXPRESS: Most of our wandering legislators are now back from their summer junkets, but the souvenirs they bought are following behind. Usually, these are shipped home by diplomatic pouch as if they were state secrets.

Thus the taxpayers not only pay the travel expenses for flying members of Congress all over the world but also the freight charges for bringing back their accumulated loot.

In South Vietnam, for instance, some visiting congressmen went on a shopping spree. They dumped their vases, jade elephants and bric-a-brac upon the U.S. embassy which shipped them by diplomatic air pouch to Capitol Hill.

But the U.S. embassy in Thailand balked when Rep. Lawrence Hogan, R-Md., tried to send a rattan patio set home by diplomatic pouch. The embassy fired off a cable to the State Department requesting guidance.

Air freight cost on packages Congressman Hogan requested embassy escort officer to pouch to Washington will amount to $620," explained the cable. "Embassy escort officer advised Congressman Hogan shipment via air pouch would be very expensive and recommended packages be forwarded via surface pouch.

"Congressman Hogan stated another Embassy had forwarded his packages by air pouch and thus did not agree shipment should be via surface pouch . . . Advise recommended mean of transport."

The State Department finally notified Hogan he would have to pay commercial freight charges to ship his patio furniture to Washington.

Hogan told us he never asked the embassy to send his package by diplomatic air pouch but merely mentioned that the Saigon embassy had done so.

THE LIGHTER SIDE

Pentagon keeps down studio troops

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) —According to a survey in the current issue of the magazine Human Behavior, the Defense Department provided technical assistance for 168 Hollywood war films produced between 1948 and 1970.

The magazine implied there was something unseemly about the Pentagon, letting picture studios make use of military personnel and equipment.

But when we consider the alternative, we can see that the cooperation of the U.S. armed forces in these pictures clearly was in the national interest.

The alternative would have been for the studios to maintain their own armed forces. Which would have made recent international negotiations enormously more complicated.

It was tough enough getting the Soviet Union to agree to a strategic arms limitation treaty. Imagine what the SALT talks would have been like if Henry Kissinger, the chief U.S. negotiator, had been required to deal simultaneously with the USSR and MGM.

Kissinger appears to get along well with heads of state, but he is quite unaccustomed to bargaining with heads of studios. Most of his experience has been with starlets.

It is easy to see what would have happened when Kissinger proposed a cutback in the production of nuclear submarines.

The Soviets would have balked, claiming it needed a larger Navy to match the sea power of Paramount.

And you can bet Paramount would have refused to sign any pact reducing its fleet unless there was an equivalent retrenchment in the air force.

Make no mistake about it, a studio arms race would have made it far more difficult to keep the lid on the munitions production.

For how could the Pentagon justify selling Phantom Jets to Israel unless it also made warplanes available to 20th Century Fox?

It is doubtful that any President, however dedicated to disarmament, could have withstood the pressures of the military-industrial-movie complex.

The wisdom of Defense Department cooperation in war films is particularly apparent at this time when the United States is trying to persuade NATO nations in Europe would be meaningless if the studios had large standing armies.

Burglary task force

I sincerely hope that the city will receive whatever money it needs to pay for the police special burglary task force. Recently my parents and sister were victims of a breakin at an apartment complex in Pomona. My father has had three heart attacks and this could have been fatal for him. My mother had never had any heart illness. She had a heart attack six days later and is still in the hospital.

My young sister will never forget the terror. The detective on the case told me they have sometimes twenty such cases per day in Pomona. Yet not many of these are put in the newspaper. Perhaps, because so many are not news anymore, or because the apartment complexes do quite a bit of advertising and the newspaper accounts would frighten away tenants and they like to keep things quiet.

Whatever the reason, people renting apartments should be warned to have the locks changed the first day in the apartment. Bolt locks should also be added, and some protection for their windows. If they have windows that slide back and forth, a piece of wood or a bar of some kind put in the groove so that the window will not slide, and the same thing in the sliding glass door tracks.

Young people in their first apartment, newlyweds, and older people who have not rented an apartment in years, are eager to make new friends quickly, and should be warned to take precautions. Unfortunately, Pomona is not the safe, happy town it used to be. Hopefully, with cooperation and money for the police, it can be again. — Marilyn Troli, Pomona.

Gossip for today

We Americans are literally second to no other race in the world in our ability to demonstrate the finer points in the art of the pot calling the kettle black. Recently, in articles and editorials which appeared in newspapers throughout the country, we piously bemoaned the booing of athletes competing in the World University Games in Moscow. But only a few days later, right here in the United States, who were the folks, I ask you, who were reported to have booed the 12-year-old Little League ball players from Taiwan?

INSIDE REPORT

No evidence of Watergate probe

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — The mid-August spurt of presidential statements on Watergate has made unmistakably clear that the new investigation President Nixon said he ordered March 21 simply did not exist. The closest to any such order was an offhand presidential request relayed March 28 by then presidential aide John D. Ehrlichman asking the Atty. Gen. Richard Kleindienst to pass along information incriminating White House or campaign aides if it ever turned up.

This by no means implicates the President in the Watergate cover-up. But the non-investigation points up two disturbing elements: first, even when the walls were crumbling, the President made little effort to probe deeply into the scandal. Second, and more disturbing, his public claims of ordering an investigation when one really did not take place reflect the imprecision and inaccuracy of many presidential comments on Watergate. Weary though the President and many Americans are with Watergate, critics will continue to contrast such comments with reality.

In his April 17 statement, the President first declared he had "begun intensive new inquiries" once new charges were brought to his attention March 21 — presumably when then White House counsel John W. Dean III told the President there was a cancer on the presidency. In his April 30 televised address, the President declared that on March 21 he 'personally ordered all those conducting the investigations to get all the facts and to report them directly to me."

Challenge from Weicker

Nobody challenged thees statements until the Senate Watergate hearings when Sen. Lowell Weicker of Connecticut asked Justice Department officials whether they had received any such request. The answer from Kleindienst, Assistant Atty. Gen. Henry Peterson and former FBI Director L. Patrick Gray was unanimous: no.

But in his Aug. 15 supplementary statement, Mr. Nixon reiterated that he "immediately began new inquiries" after March 21. Pressed for details at his Aug. 22 news conference, Mr. Nixon asserted he "had a contact made with the Attorney General (Kleindienst) himself and . . . told him — this was on the 27th of March — to report to me directly anything he found in this particular area."

Did this refute Kleindienst's sworn testimony that the President did not contact him? No. According to authoritative White House sources, Mr. Nixon's contact was indirect: a March 28 telephone call by Ehrlichman. Moreover, thanks to Ehrlichman's egregious habit of surreptitiously recording his own telephone conversations, the offhand quality of that request is indisputable.

Ehrlichman spent the first several minutes urging Kleindienst to attack Sen. Weicker; Kleindienst refused. Then, in by-the-way fashion, Ehrlichman said the President had told him to report he had no information that anybody "in the White House had any prior knowledge of this burglary. He said that he's counting on you to provide him with any information to the contrary if it ever turns up and you just contact him direct." The same, Ehrlichman continued, applies to campaign committee staffers. There was no reference whatever to disturbing new information supplied the President March 21.

With good reason, Kleindienst did not interpret Ehrlichman's call as connoting presidential urgency, much less calling for an intensive new investigation.

Ehrlichman's inquiry

Two days after this conversation, President Nixon has said, he ordered Ehrlichman "to conduct an independent inquiry" without informing the Justice Department. Ehrlichman has testified his interviews of a half-dozen people constituted no "investigation."

According to the President, Ehrlichman gave him the inquiry's results April 14 and he was instructed to pass them to Kleindienst. In a brief telephone conversation that night, according to Kleindienst's sworn testimony Ehrlichman told him he had been "investigating" Watergate but gave no details.

Shocked, Kleindienst replied he should turn over any information to the Justice Department to avoid obstruction of justice charges. Ehrlichman answered, according to Kleindienst, that "it really doesn't make any difference anymore" because ex-campaign aide Jeb Magruder was talking to federal prosecutors anyway. That was the end of the conversation. That same night saw the now famous post-midnight briefing of Kleindienst by prosecutors.

The April 14 Ehrlichman-Kleindienst conversation was also surreptitiously recorded, but the tape was not submitted to the Senate committee and is believed in the White House files. It might provide further evidence of the strange non-communication between the President and the government's investigators as the scandal broke last spring.

Presidential aides and some Republican politicians claims the public is past caring about such details. But so long as Mr. Nixon persists in talking about investigations that were never made and reports never delivered, questions will be asked and suspicions nurtured.

"Honestly! Sometimes you make me wonder if that 'siege mentality' at the White House is catching!"

LA VERNE — Traveling by camper in Europe is apparently a rarity. This is the observation of a La Verne family which has just returned from a yearlong trip from the Nordic countries to the tip of the African continent.

The Daryl Brandt family, which includes four children, has been gone for the past year covering 22,650 miles in 30 countries, traveling in their own camper. It was the only one of its kind which they saw on the entire trip, a 1967 GMC camper, a common sight on any U.S. highway.

Everywhere they went it drew the curious. At camp grounds, rest stops and in parking lots they found themselves surrounded by interested people and gave tours, showing off its advantages for traveling.

An editor for a Scandinavian magazine about travel trailers saw it and asked to see everything about it.

The Brandts found it to be a good way to get acquainted with people, especially their fellow campers when they made stop-overs. They found that other campers did use trailers and some motor homes and many Volkswagon buses, yet most Europeans out on "holiday" used tents, some of them elaborate affairs with several rooms. On one occasion they saw a small vehicle something like a camper, English made.

This was a year long trip planned for by the Brandt family. Keith, the eldest child, had just completed the eighth grade. Lori Ann would be in the sixth grade and could, with her parents guidance, handle independent study for a year. David and Ruthie, in primary grades, could miss a year without too much difficulty.

Brandt, a teacher in special education at Gladstone School, was granted a sabbatical year for travel and study of systems for special education, especially in England. His wife, Nancy, freed herself from her many community involvements.

The family was readied for the long trip by the experiences of a summer traveling to Alaska three years ago. Both Daryl and Nancy had been in Europe while they were Brethren Service Volunteers and had hoped for more time to travel then. Part of their assignment had been in Morocco.

The Brandts decided that their best means of transportation would be their own camper. Living in it would solve a great many problems. They could cook foods to which the family was accustomed as well as save money. It would free them from motel and hotel expenses and the need to meet reservation dates. They could stay almost anywhere, including the Eastern block of countries.

Leaving La Verne on June 19, 1972, they drove the camper to New York City and it was loaded on a ship headed for Antwerp, Belgium. Ten days later they picked it up after they had flown across, landing in Luxembourg. During a 9-day wait they had traveled in the near area in Germany, The Netherlands and France, by boat, train and bus. In Amsterdam they made a special point of visiting the home where Anne Frank had lived.

Mrs. Brandt said that before leaving the U.S. she had felt that it would be fun to travel that way, staying in motels and hotels and eating in all kinds of restaurants and inns. But she found hers and the family's reactions to be quite the contrary. It was no fun.

They were very glad to move into their camper when they got to Antwerp. A few things such as blankets had been stolen en route from New York, but they replaced them and started out.

From that time on they slept every night in the camper. In each country they tried to find an especially indigenous restaurant, but they prepared most meals, shopping for groceries and produce along the way with no difficulty.

The camper never let them down. They had only one flat tire throughout the year and no major mechanical problems.

Both Brandts commented about the feeling of security it gave them to have a home base, a constant center for the family.

They found the roads in western Europe to be very good and traffic much heavier than when they were there 13 years ago. Their most hazardous driving was on a one-way road which skirted the fjords in Norway and the narrow roads along the seacoast of Portugal.

When in doubt as to whether their camper could take a certain route they would wheel in behind a truck or bus knowing that those drivers knew where they were going and could get through. A few times they did get lost but found that people in general were very courteous and helpful. One time at least 10 men gathered around them trying to counsel them as to the best way to go since the road on which they were traveling was being worked on and the Brandts had gotten themselves about half-way to their destination.

The family acknowledged that travel through the Iron Curtain countries caused more tension. They kept a tight rein on the children to "behave."

The Brandts said that they visited a few acquaintances along the way, such as Bob Minnich in Bergen, Sweden. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Minnich of Claremont, and is studying for his doctorate there. They also saw Dale Ott in Switzerland, an old friend whose mother and sister live in Pomona, and by pure chance Steve and Ann West in Istanbul. She is the former Ann Keim, formerly of Pomona. In Morocco they met Dr. Tom Pencheon, professor at UCLA, who was making a study of the Berbers. He had come to know the Wests and in the chance conversation with the Brandts told them of the Wests' presence in Istanbul.

Everywhere they went, the Brandts found that traveling as a family gave them many more chances for getting acquainted with people. Their small daughter, Ruthie, an outgoing youngster, usually went out in search of someone to play with at the campgrounds.

Playing with a Frisbie usually drew interested children and adults who were invited to join in. They found that even a language barrier can be overcome with a game of dominoes. Monopoly was a favorite game of the Brandts and they found sets in shops which had streets and real estate named for use in other cities and played these games with new acquaintances.

The Brands' travels allowed them to spend time to see all kinds of special things such as the Russian ballet and circuses, the Vienna Choir Boys singing Mass in their own church, being present in St. Peters Cathedral in Rome for the elevation of 30 Cardinals, attending a performances of "Aida" and"La Boheme" and being awakened by the 4 a.m. call to prayer by the Moslem priest in Istanbul high in his tower near where they stayed overnight.

They feel that they saw, felt and heard all the things they had hoped to experience.

Would they go globe riding again? Yes, they say, but not back to Europe. They have satisfied that wish.

CAMPEROVING NATION TO NATION

Monopoly was a favorite game of the Daryl Brandt family of La Verne that has recently returned from a year-long trip of Europe by camper. Playing a game here are daughter, Ruth, 7, Mrs. Brandt, Brandt and son, David, 9. Brandt is a special education teacher at the Gladstone School.

Friday showdown scheduled for San Dimas school buy

By LENORE WALLACE
P-B Staff Writer

SAN DIMAS — The city's interest in buying the old San Dimas Elementary School property for a park may be settled once and for all Friday.

Attending a meeting at San Dimas City Hall at 9:30 a.m. will be Don Anderson of the State Allocation Board, Sen. H. L. Richardson, R-19th Dist., Assemblyman Bill Lancaster, R-49th Dist., local school district officials, and Mayor Thomas Nuss and James Lough, vice mayor of San Dimas.

City Manager Bob Poff said the meeting will not be open to the public since the city will be discussing possible negotiations for the former school property that has been vacant for six years.

The city was anxious to purchase the site up until a fire destroyed the auditorium of the school Aug. 28.

Vice Mayor Lough feels that the city's purchase of the school site is "a whole new ball game" because of the fire. Lough has suggested that the city look for other possible park sites in the neighborhood.

Lough and Bryce Bailey, recreation director for the city, surveyed the neighborhood around the park this week seeking suitable park sites. Lough has suggested that the city could use several lots instead of one large park area. These could be improved with basketball courts, picnic areas and a tot lot.

Ray Witt, commander of the San Dimas American Legion, said he would be interested in attending the meeting if invited. The original plan was for the Legion to share the purchase cost of the building with the city and it would use the auditorium for a meeting hall.

Witt said the fire at the auditorium has brought "mixed" reactions from members about what their next step should be. Witt said the executive board of the Legion voted to "forget the project" but the commander, who wasn't at the board meeting, feels differently.

"I feel we could use the building if the walls are safe for use."

Witt said it would be expensive for the Legion to rebuild the roof and restore the building but he said it would also be expensive to build a new building.

He has estimated that it would cost $35,000 to restore the building plus the $25,000 purchase cost which would be the Legion's share if the city purchases the property for $53,000.

A new appraisal of the property will be necessary since the fire.

Witt said the auditorium is the only possibility for a meeting hall for the organization in the city. He said it has been suggested that the top floor of a downtown market be used but he said he has estimated it would cost about $35,000 to improve the building for use.

The commander said the Legion hasn't had a meeting hall since the former building was sold two years ago when it became impossible to insure it. The former building is located in an area behind the Puddingstone Shopping Center.

He said he is certain American Legion members from surrounding towns would share functions with San Dimas if a meeting hall could be found.

If the city and the American Legion decide against the purchase of the school property Friday, it will leave the school district in a bind because of the present zoning which doesn't permit commercial uses.

The city has said it will not change the zoning to commercial use as requested by the school district.

At last Monday night's City Council meeting, Wes Edmondson, president of the San Dimas Civic Association, asked the council what could be done to tear down the fire razed auditorium which is a hazard for neighborhood children.

City Manager Robert Poff said the city could possibly enforce its nuisance ordinance. City Atty. Norman Oliver said he would have a legal opinion on the matter in the near future.

LA VERNE — This city may get its first pizza and beer parlor downtown next month.

Objections to the sale of beer at 2340 D St. were overruled by Carl A. Pierson, a hearing officer in the office of administrative hearings this week.

Protestors to the issuance of the license have 40 days in which to file appeals with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

In recommending the issuance of the license to Jon and Bobbie Knerr, operators of Warehouse Pizza, the hearing officer concluded that those who objected did so on moral grounds rather than on factual or legal bases. He ruled that moral grounds were not admissible as evidence.

There are four establishments holding beer licenses within the city right now, but none of them are downtown.

If no one files an appeal, the Knerrs will automatically get their license in October.

Painting of swimming steps urged

SAN DIMAS — City Councilman D.F. Hooper has requested that steps at Puddingstone Swim Park be painted to warn visitors of their existence.

Mrs. Paul Spencer of San Dimas was treated at San Dimas Community Hospital for injuries received when she tripped on the steps in the pavilion of the swim park at a party Saturday night. She later was released.

Hooper said Mrs. Spencer's fall, shortly after her arrival at the party which was sponsored by the San Dimas and La Verne chambers of commerce, marred the party for many.

He said something needed to be done about the steps which aren't marked. "I almost fell myself once," Hooper said. "It's a dangerous situation."

He suggested that the city staff contact the county to see what could be done about painting the steps. He said he would also like to see the steps at the entrances to city hall painted.

Otherwise, Hooper said the fiesta was a huge success and congratulated both chambers for their efforts. He said about 500 people attended the party.

Kaldenbachs home

Kaldenbach is now back on duty at the La Verne City Hall. He is the director of parks and recreation for the city.

Saudi Arabia dropping velvet glove approach

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

When King Faisal of Saudi Arabia visited Washington in 1971, he gently prodded the United States to bring pressure on Israel to withdraw from the Arab territories she seized in the 1967 war. Today, a steel tip has been added to the prod.

As the United States grapples with inflation and goes through two devaluations of the dollar, the ideological and economic goals of the Arab oil producing states merge and become one.

This is especially true of King Faisal.

Saudi Arabia played no active role in the 1967 Arab Israeli war. But as protector of two of Islam's holy places, Medina and Mecca, Faisal also feels a responsibility for Israeli-held old Jerusalem. His opposition to Israel therefore takes on the aspects of a holy war.

Saudi Arabia long has been regarded as one of the United States' few friends in the Middle East.

But uncertainties effecting the world's leading currencies, especially the dollar, have injected a new element into the picture. Saudi Arabia and other Arab oil producing states are beginning to believe their oil is better off in the ground, especially since oil revenues already are piling up faster than they can be used effectively in the development of the exporting countries.

In the face of American pressure to nearly double her present export of around eight million barrels of oil per day, Saudi Arabia is dropping her velvet glove approach and stating bluntly the relationship she sees between the export of oil to the United States and the role she believes the U.S. should play in the Middle East.

In an interview with the National Broadcasting Company, Faisal declared:

"We are deeply concerned that if the United States does not change its policy in the Middle East and continues to side with Zionism, then, I am afraid, such course of action will affect our relations with our American friends because it will place us in an untenable position in the Arab world and vis-a-vis the countries which Zionism seeks to destroy."

Last weekend, Libya nationalized the last six Western oil companies, five of them U.S. owned, operating on its territory. Oil sources in Tripoli said similar measures may be forthcoming by the Persian states, Saudi Arabia among them.

Closely tied with Saudi Arabia's review of her ties with the United States are her improving relations with Egypt.

Faisal, who is in active charge of his country's foreign relations, has used his oil wealth in the last year to win African states away from Israel.

He choose to conclude an $800 million contract for Saudi Arabia's air defenses with Britain rather than with the United States.

He has discussed with France the purchase of Mirage jet fighters instead of the Phantoms he first discussed buying from the United States.

Bridge

Sir Lancelot trips himself

By Oswald & James Jacoby

When Tristram de Lyonesse arrived at King Arthur's court he had already established a reputation as the best knight in Cornwall. What wasn't known was that he also was a top bridge player.

This gave him a chance to work a beautiful swindle against none other than Sir Lancelot the first time he got into the game.

Tristram proceeded to ruff his partner's good heart in order to lead a diamond.

If Tristram had not made this play. Lancelot would have laid down his ace of spades when he got in and then finessed against Tristram's queen after the jack dropped.

As it was Lancelot gazed long and hard against the country bumpkin who had already shown his prowess with sword and shield. Could he be equally good with cards?

Finally, Lancelot decided that Tristram would never waste a trump if he held an honor. He did play his ace of spades, but after Gareth's jack dropped Lancelot tried to drop the queen with dummy's king.

Agnew hometowners claim press unfair to vice president

By FRED McNEESE

TOWSON, Md. (UPI) —Ken Smith works the chair closest to the door of the Alleghany barber shop here cutting hair and criticizing news coverage of a hometown boy —Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

"Ninety nine per cent of the people that come in here and in this town feel that the press is crucifying the man," Smith said. "Even the people that never voted for Agnew think that the press has really been unfair to him with all the leaks about what he has supposed to have done and no proof at all."

Sam Cimino, sitting on a bench in front of the Baltimore County courthouse, agrees that the press has not treated Agnew fairly during a federal probe into alleged kickbacks to Maryland officials from consulting and engineering firms.

"I think the newspapers should have waited until some facts were presented before they came out with the assumption that he is going to be indicted," he said.

For most of those interviewed in this county, where Agnew first held elective office, the news reports have done nothing to lessen support for him.

In fact, the heat wave, the Orioles ability to win and the Colts inability to do so are more prominent topics of conversation where people gather.

Investigations into alleged corruption are becoming a way of life in this county. Charges of "carnal bribery" have been filed against the county prosecutor. The former speaker of the Maryland House of Delegates and former U.S. Sen. Daniel Brewster are prominent county figures convicted for past misdeeds.

The latest indictment came Aug. 24 against Dale Anderson, Agnew's successor as the county's chief executive. He is charged with 39 counts of bribery, extortion and conspiracy.

Ray Miller, waiting while his car went through the Whiz Fast Car Wash, said, "These are not the first charges of corruption and I know they won't be the last."

"I think Agnew is just as bad as the rest of them but not any worse," said Tawney, a Democrat. "This graft has been going on for years so what is the use of trying to stop it now is what I want to know."

Navajos charge disrespect for their land by campers

By ERNEST and FLORENCE DICK

"Fishing, scenery, starlit skies, wide open spaces . . , and you can still hear a coyote at night."

Those words by Martin Link, department head of museum and research, Navajo Tribal Museum at Window Rock, Ariz., were an accurate description of the Navajo reservation we visited in the fall and, for a longer time, in the spring.

Window Rock, capital of the Navajo Reservation, is reached by taking Highway 666 north from Highway 66 in Gallup, N.M., approximately nine miles, then turning west on Highway 68.

"Tseghahodzani" ("The Rock With a Hole in It") was declared the center of administration for the Navajo Tribe by John Collier, commissioner of Indian affairs, in the 1930's. The "window," almost 50 feet in diameter and visible from a long distance, was formed through the ages by the action of wind, water and sand on the reddish sandstone cliffs. Below its base is the site of a historic dwelling, used between 700 and 1100 A.D. Figures, still visible, were painted and carved on the rock face. A spring once flowed at the base of the rock, and medicene men used its waters for rain-making ceremonies. The area is protected by th Navajo Tribe. Window Rock Tribal Park is open to visitors, with picknicking and photography permitted.

It comes as a surprise to many people to learn that this is the private land of the Navajo people, and is not to be treated as a National Park. In the past few years, tourism has been encouraged, as there are so many spectacular sights here, and it was hoped that the economy of the local area would be helped by the sale of Indian crafts.

There are several designated campgrounds on the reservation, but many tourists have set up camp wherever they chose, and as one Navajo put it, "Camping on my land is like going to Chicago, and camping in a resident's back yard."

Those who have disrespect for the law are making it increasingly difficult for other visitors, and increasing numbers of Navajos are favoring off-limits regulations.

"The parks and recreation department has doubled its staff, but it has built only one newcampground in 10 years," Link says. "It is all we can do to maintain the campgrounds, and we've had to abandon some." Vandalism is rampant, according to Link, and visitors are mostly to blame. "The Indians have their own camping spots on their own land," he says.

"Today's campers are not the elderly, as they were, mainly, in the past, and we have to adjust to a new kind of tourist who simply has no respect for the land. He scatters trash, illegally picks up fossils and digs up pottery. One visitor even hooked a chain onto his trailer in a campground, and pulled the iron grill out of the fireplace. Thievery is bad. Navajos are not used to putting locks on their doors when going to summer camp in the mountains."

In 1972, a resolution was presented at the Navajo Tribal Council meeting to enact an antiquities preservation law to protect excavation sites and objects of antiquity or general scientific interest. The bill was overwhelmingly passed.

To date, touris m has not brought much money into this reservation. Whereas the Pueblos have their tourist attractions and guides, the Navajos have no roadblocks, and 17 rangers assist and control 25,000 square miles. Twelve of the rangers are on field duty; the others are in administration. This means each ranger has the responsibility of more than 2,000 square miles. The Navajo Tribal Council has passed but, at this writing, had not put into effect, a camping fee. The tribe feels it has paid for maintenance long enough.

With the new Indian movement, there is more reluctance toward being "stared at." "Tourists sometimes leave their manners at home," Lind says. "One tourist even wanted to charge a Navajo for having his picture taken, and another visitor said he was going to write his congressman, after picking up a Navajo hitchhiker, and learning that the man couldn't speak English."

"I may sound like a pessimist, but I am not," Link says. "If I have a message to give to visitors, it is this: "Come and see the land. Become involved. Respect it for what it is. Don't try to change it. Nature is so extreme around here, and ts is such a good place. When you see a culture that has grown up in this environment, there is something t learn. If Christ felt that in order t renew His spirit He had to spend 40 days in the wilderness, maybe He's trying to tell us something."

The Navajo Tribal Museum is located at the Navajo Tribal Fairgrounds. Address is Post Office Box 797, Window Rock, Ariz., 86515. Open seven days a week, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m (except Christmas, New Year's, Easter and Thanksgiving), the museum is dedicated to the preservation and presentation of the cultural heritage of the Navajo people and the natural sciences of the Navajo country. Administered by the parks and recreation department of the Navajo tribe, its operating expenses are derived solely from tribal funds.

Collections housed in the museum are among the finest and most complete found in any museum of comparable size. Thousands of articles of Navajo and other Southwest Indian tribes are on display, as well as artifacts of prehistoric cultures and specimens of geological and biological interest.

From Wednesday through Sunday, the 27th annual Navajo Nation Fair will be held at the fairgrounds in Window Rock. Largest Indian fair in the world, the event features exhibits of produce and livestock, 4 H and domestic arts, silversmithing and weaving; sports and games; and a nightly program of dancng, singing and pageantry. Navajo girls compete, prior to the fair, in local contests, and queens are chosen on the basis of beauty, talent and poise. Each of the five agencies of the reservation chooses a winner to compete for the "Miss Navajo" title, announced the last evening of the fair. The winner is crowned with a diadem of silver and turquoise, and she reigns for a year, traveling throughout the United States and other countries as official representative of the Navajo Tribe.

Rodeos and horse racing are held, and native foods are served. More than 50,000 visitors attended the 1972 event. Reunions of relatives, separated throughout the year by distance and time, are common at the event.

Governing the Navajo Tribe is a Tribal Council of 74 elected members, presided over by an elected chairman and vice-chairman. Present chairman is Peter MacDonald.

Elections are held every four years. Each councilman represents approximately 1,800 Navajos. Delegates meet four times a year in the octagonal Council House, which represents a ceremonial hogan. Wall murals in the Council House depict the history of the Tribe. Beside the entrance of the chambers is a bell, presented by the Santa Fe Railroad in appreciation of the service of thousands of Navajos who helped to build and maintain the Santa Fe line. It is used to call Council sessions.

The Navajo have made considerable industrial progress in recent years, operating sawmills, establishing outlets for their craftwork and producng oil, gas and other products.

Many major industries have opened branch facilities on the reservation.

In 1968, General Dynamics Pomona opened its Navajo Facility at Fort Defiance, five miles from Window Rock. Some 85 trained Navajos are presently employed in electronic assembly and test work. John Hunt, production superintendent, says of the employees, "My people are very adaptable."

The air-conditioned concrete and steel building houses offices, a machine shop, a test equipment maintenance and calibration area and more than 21,000 square feet of production floor space. New employes receive instruction in soldering, electronic welding, wiring and assembly techniques in a separate training room.

In charge of quality control is Michael Enfield, a former Pomona resident, who lives in Window Rock with his wife, Cindy, and three sons. The family has been active in civic, social and church affairs in the three years they have lived on the Indian reservation.

Cindy grew up on a ranch in Utah, and the family is "sold" on life in the great outdoors. Mike started the 4-H Club in Window Rock, and is now particpating in the formation of a fire department. Cindy is an officer in the Window Rock Area Homemakers Club that boasts more than 50 members among Indian and Anglo women. Club members have promoted and helped to maintain an excellent public library.

Information on all recreation and tourism in Navajo land can be obtained by writing Navajo Parks and Recreation Department, P.O. Box 418, Window Rock, Ariz., 86515. Rest areas and picnic tables are located along the major highways on the reservation.

LOS ANGELES — One of the coolest Augusts on record caused a few crop development problems, according to Ralph W. Lichty, Los Angeles County agricultural commissioner.

Lichty said citrus trees look fine but the fruit set on navels and valencias is one of the lightest in years. The lemon crop looks better than the orange crop, and the fruit is sizing well at this time, he added.

In the Los Angeles basin a few acres were planted to strawberries, but the bulk of the berries will be planted in October. Harvest of grain now is complete and some growers are discing their stubble, said Lichty.

Youth lifts tractor to free buddy

Kennebec County investigator Leo Bazinet said Arthur Hinkley, 18, heard the screams of Lloyd Bachelder, also 18, who was pinned in the seat of the vehicle when it tipped over while Bachelder was attempting to lift a junked car.

Hinkley, who was working on the Bachelder farm, somehow lifted the tractor enough for Bachelder to wriggle out. He was taken to a Waterville hospital where he was reported in good condition Wednesday with a fractured hip and internal injuries.

"I don't know how I did it," Hinkley told Bazinet, "I can't remember anything."

Plane tips agents on illegal aliens

SAN DIEGO (UPI) —Two border patrol agents, tipped off about possible alien activity by a spotter plane, arrested 66 illegal aliens recently at a house in the city's southeast sector.

The agents followed a car with eight aliens from an area near the international border to the house.

The aliens were awaiting transportation to Los Angeles and other points north.

Japan's steel industry: no space, will travel

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan's mighty steel industry is running out of places to build new mills in the cramped Japanese islands.

As a result, Japanese steelmen soon will be looking for developing countries that need steel mills and are willing to build them in partnership with Japan.

Those are the conclusions of the steel committee of the Japanese government's Council for Industrial Reorganization, an elite body of business executives who advise Japan's political leaders on long-term industrial prospects.

"The steel industry should actively contemplate overseas sites in parallel with domestic locations," the council told the government a few weeks ago.

Japan's steel industry has been a handmaiden of her post World War II economic miracle. Japan's bombed-out mills made less than two million metric tons of crude steel in 1945, the year of her surrender.

In the 1972 calendar year, crude steel production reached 69 million metric tons, trailing only the Soviet Union and the United States. It may approach 120 million metric tons this year. And all this production is crammed into an area of 144,986 square miles, slightly small than California.

"We have the problem of getting sites for plants and trying to build non-polluting plants," said Yogoru Komatsu, director general of the Industrial Policy Bureau of Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI).

Komatsu said that arrangements for Japanese steel ventures overseas must fit the needs of developing countries.

"The basic principle is to help the economies of less developed countries with desirable results for Japan," he explained. "If we fail to extend cooperation to them, our own future is not hopeful. No civilization can stand alone."

Komatsu said Japan is not overly concerned about the threat of nationalization, because her steel ventures will go only where they are welcomed.

At present Japan has only two direct steel investments overseas. One is Nippon Steel Corp. investment in the Udiminas plant in Brazil. The other is a projected plant at Auburn, New York. Ground has just been broken for this wholly owned Japanese venture. Ataka and Co., a trading firm, and Kyoei Saka Ltd., a machinery maker, are partners in the deal. There are also many Japanese loans to foreign steel firms and technical cooperation agreements.

The government's Council for Industrial reorganization says that Japan eventually will cease to be a steel exporting country except for a few high-technology products.

It says virtually all of Japan's domestic steel production will be needed to meet internal demands.

Japan presently supplies 30 to 40 per cent of the world's steel exports The United States and China are the largest customers. However, South Korea, Saudi Arabia and some other developing countries have a critical dependence on Japan's steel.

Criminal action kills 14 police during August

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Fourteen law enforcement officers were killed nationwide due to criminal action during August, according to the FBI. During August, 1972, eight officers were slain.

According to information collected through the FBI's uniform crime reporting program, a total of 93 local, county and state law enforcement officers were killed due to criminal action during the first eight months of 1973 compared to 72 officers slain last year.

Eighty-seven of the 93 officers were killed through the use of firearms, 64 of these slayings were committed with handguns, the FBI said.

THE FOX BY AUDI — A newcomer to the Audi line is the Fox. The front-wheel drive car is available in both two and four door styles with choice of four speed or automatic transmission.

Audi introduces new machine--the Fox

The Fox, the newest car offering from Audi, shows how starting with a clean sheet of paper and imaginative engineering can produce a clever, nimble car, say the manufacturers.

Though it has a family resemblance to the well-known Audi 100 LS, the Fox is a completely different machine in size and engineering features.

Audi engineers have, through the use of modern computerized design methods, developed a compact, sporty sedan, with plenty of room for four adults. The Fox is 171 inches long, is available in a two-and four-door model and weighs just 1,984 pounds.

The water-cooled, four-cylinder engine powers the front wheels, an Audi feature since 1932. Equipped with an overhead camshaft, the engine is tilted 20 degrees to the right to achieve a lower hood line. The engine is mounted ahead of the transmission to improve traction and help provide more interior space.

"Audi engineers started with a clean sheet of paper and developed a totally new example of what a compact should be. I predict you will see more cars like the Fox from other manufacturers in the future. It's a pacesetter," said John A. Cook, vice president in charge of Porsche-Audi Operations for Volkswagen of America.

Through computer analysis of stress forces in the unitized body shell, Audi engineers were able to determine which areas of the car's body required increased structural integrity. These areas are reinforced and callapsible zones are integrated into the rugged passenger capsule both front and rear to provide added protection.

Other safety features on the new Audi Fox include a diagonally controlled dual braking system and a self-stabilizing steering system. The steering system automatically corrects skids during hard braking. If one front wheel is on ice or water, or if a tire blows out, the Fox can be brought to a sure, straight stop.

To minimize maintenance costs the Fox is designed to travel 10,000 miles between oil changes and maintenance checks. The layout of the engine compartment permits easy access to spark plugs, oil dip stick, distributor and battery. All electrical relays and fuses are centralized in an engine compartment module for easy replacement.

The car's flow-through ventilation system changes the air inside the car three times each minute, even with the windows closed. Air conditioning is available as a factory installed option, as is a full sliding sunroof. An electric rear window demister is standard.

ALL IN THE FAMILY — The Allen Family, rising young pop-rock group, will perform in the John Wayne Theater at Knott's Berry Farm at 1 and 3 p.m. Monday through Sept. 22. Two years ago the four Allen brothers — Tony, 20; Gary, 19; Ronnie, 17, and Larry, 15 — were a barbershop quartet. Then they added sister Mitzi, 14, and turned to soft rock and popular music. Their first record is "Baby, Baby, Don't Bring Me Down" with "Heart's Desire" on the flip side.

Severinsen Bowl concert called off

HOLLYWOOD — The concert of trumpeter Doc Severinsen with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, orignally scheduled for the Hollywood Bowl Wednesday, has been canceled because of the pressures of his television and recording work.

Those holding tickets for the concert can call (213) 87-MUSIC for information on exchanges or refunds.

On Sept. 21 the Philharmonic will perform with the rock group, Procol Harum, and the Roger Wagner Chorale.

The Bowl season will close Sept. 22 with a benefit concert for the Philharmonic's pension fund. John Green will conduct a program of music by Richard Rodgers, Oscar Hammerstein and Lorenz Hart. Singers taking part will be Karen Armstrong, Andress Jordan, Ken Remo and Richard Fredericks.

Green, a veteran of 23 seasons of guest conducting at the Bowl, is a composer, conductor, arranger and pianist in both the light and serious fields. He has won five Academy Awards for his film work, and regularly takes the podium to lead many of the nation's major symphonies.

Miss Armstrong's career began its ascent after the soprano won two important competitions: the San Francisco Opera Auditions in 1965, and in 1966 the Metropolitan Opera Auditions. Since then she has sung with both companies, and those of Santa Fe, Milwaukee and Fort Worth and the New York City Opera.

Miss Jordan has been a featured soloist with the Los Angeles Master Chorale for several seasons.

Fredricks is a leading baritone of the New York City Opera and the San Francisco Opera, as well as of other companies. A versatile performer, he sings repertoire from Handel to Rodgers and Hammerstein, and besides his opera appearances, sings as soloist with many of the country's major orchestras.

Remo's career has led him from the Broadway musical theater to Los Angeles television and recordings. Winner of the 1964 San Francisco Opera Auditions, Remo has since performed with opera companies there and in Los Angeles, San Diego, Honolulu, Montreal, Chicago, Vancouver and Portland.

Hostels, built on friendship, are havens for travelers

PARIS —(NEA) — Young wanderlust is having a record year. Some 20 million young Europeans are "on the road." In France alone, one out of every two students has crossed the frontier, answering what the French know as "the call of the wild," seeking new pastures, new scenes, new customs.

It is fact that youngsters are more eager to travel far, to explore, to see the world. Thirty years ago such travel was beyond their reach. The commonest modes of locomotion then were bicycling and walking. But educators tell us that the relaxing of family ties and parental authority, as well as better economic conditions, has led to the upsurge in travel.

Favorite spot

A favorite spot is the youth hostel — of which there are some 3,000 in Europe, 250 in France alone.

The grandfather of French youth hostels was Marc Sangnier, a prominent industrialist who, in 1930, donated a large plot of land 40 miles from Paris to build a center where young travelers could gather.

As Sangnier saw it, a youth hostel should be more than just a place to sleep and eat. He dreamed of bringing together adolescents of all nationalities and races, of all philosophies and political opinions, providing them all with a rich basis for understanding their fellow men.

Student's card

What does one need to get into a French youth hostel? First of all a bona-fide student's card issued by his home college is required. In Paris, the maximum stay at the "Auberge de la Jeunesse" hostel is three nights. Here for less than five dollars a day, a student is supplied with a bed, breakfast and two three-course meals. Wine, beer or cider as well as soft drinks are obtainable, and there is a cigarette and ice-cream machine.

The Paris hostel, with its 320 beds, is open from 8 a.m. to midnight. There is an information service and organized visits to various points of interest around the city. A house father and mother are there to help solve every imaginable kind of problem, as well as to supervise a staff of 20 employees. Guests are not even expected to make their own beds.

No trouble

According to M. Durant, the house fahter: "I have never had any serious trouble with my guests. No drug problems, no excessive drinking. Only three guests had to be expelled last year out of a total of 9,000. By and large they might be considered more apathetic than turbulent."

According to Durant, the German and Dutch students are the untidiest. Americans, espeically the girls, are usually the first to ask about laundry facilities. The ratio in the Paris hotel is 90 per cent foreigners to 10 per cent French. This year, of course, there are fewer Americans because of the dollar situation.

According to Pierre Mulet, general-delegate at the french youth hostel headquarters, many youths are inclined to consider a hostel as simply a cheap accommodation where they behave more like "clients" than members of an international club. "They are something of "freeloaders,' believing that everything should be handed to them, forgetting that the real spirit of a hostel should follow the precept of the Spanish inn — that is, to give something of oneself if one wants to receive anything."

Plans afoot

There are more plans afoot to establish another hostel in Paris and to increase the number of residential hostels in vacation centers —at the mountains, sea or river — where students can stay as long as they can afford to. The new hostels would offer all kinds of sports facilities, even equipment for riding, deep-sea fishing and canoeing, free of charge.

"All these plans may be considered somewhat utopian," agreed Mulet, "but we want to put across the idea that a hostel is neither a cheap hotel nor a welfare center. We do believe we have a human and social mission." Over the door of the Paris headquarters an inscription read: "Love is stronger than hate."

McDonnell was born in Chicago on June 20, 1871.

McDonnell said that in 51 years of driving he has never been involved in an accident or even had a fender dented. He added that the only time he was stopped by police—for doing 40 in a 25-mile zone—"the cop took one look at my license and turned me loose."

In Washington, where Motor Vehicle officials have discretionary authority to require retesting when license renewal time arrives, McDonnell said he has only been asked twice to take the test.

"The last time," he said, "they sent a paper to my doctor. Then they checked my eyes."

McDonnell admits, however, that he finds today's traffic too fast for him, particularly in the populated places.

"I haven't driven in down town Seattle in 20 years," he said, "but I still go at times to North Gate (a shopping center near Seattle's northern city limits)."

"I think it will outlive me," he said of his present car, a 1967 Volkswagen.

Cats need shots, too

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (UPI) — Pet cats as well as dogs should be vaccinated against rabies, say Dr. C.J. Peetz, president of the Animal Medical Care Foundation of Marin County. Many persons do not realize that cats can contract rabies, Peetz says.

Collective bargaining okayed for teachers

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill giving all California public school teachers collective bargaining rights except the right to strike has reached its final legislative hurdle.

On a 53-22 vote Monday, the Assembly approved the measure by Sen. George Moscone, D-San Francisco, and returned it to the Senate for concurrence on amendments.

During floor debate one coauthor, Assemblyman Willam T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, called for the measure's defeat. He said there were many unresolved issues.

Under the bill (SB400), public school teachers in all grades as well as faculty members at the University of California and state colleges would be extended collective bargaining rights similar to those of labor union members in private industry.

Assemblyman Howard L. Berman, D-Los Angeles, pointed out public employes are not authorized to strike under current laws. He told the Assembly he believed the measure created machinery that would make teacher walkouts "much less" likely than presently exist.

The measure repeals existing laws covering teacher bargaining and establishes new negotiating procedures, including a provision for secret ballot union representation elections. It also establishes an "agency shop" in which teachers who choose not to join a union would pay a fee equivalent to dues to the union.

Assemblyman Mike D. Antonovich, D-Los Angeles, offered amendments to repeal the "agency shop" provision but they were tabled on a 46-25 vote.

During debate, Berman noted the legislation provided for fact-finding and arbitration but said the recommendations of an arbiter would not be binding on a school board of trustees unless the board agreed.

But opponents, such as Assemblyman Newton Russell, R-Tununga, warned the measure would strip the board of its power of government.

"There are absolutely no limits on the scope of bargaining," Russell insisted. "What we are really talking about is power—who is going to control the schools ... There are no management rights clauses."

The bill also would create a three-member state commission appointed by the governor to supervise operation of the legislation and calls for collective bargaining sessions to be held in public.

Insurance sales rising

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Increases in population and family formations will bring life insurance in force in the United States to $2 trillion by 1978, according to Marvin N. Demchick, president of Life of Pennsylvania Financial Corp.

Demchick also cited greater awareness of the need for adequate insurance protection and expansion of group coverage as factors contributing to the growth of life insurance in force. He said new products such a variable life insurance and portable pensions as factors.

Schools kept open despite teacher strike

CUPERTINO (UPI) —Substitutes and non-striking teachers Thursday kept open the 42 schools in the Cupertino Elementary School District, largest in the state, when teachers went on strike.

The Cupertino Education Association said 700 of its 900 members refused to report for work.

At issue was district proposal to pay teachers a two per cent pay increase and $250 "purchasing power improvement bonus." The CEA sought a flat percentage increase.

10 years after big march: have goals been reached by Blacks?

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The city closed down the bars and liquor stores and many downtown merchants never opened that day. Tens of thousands of government workers took leave. There were 5,000 policemen, National Guardsmen and Army Reservists in the streets.

Negroes, 200,000 of them, were marching on Washington.

When it was over, writer Marya Mannes commented: "It was a wonderful and immensely important thing that happened here. And the only pity of it was that the people who fled it, the people who deplored it, the people who resented it, missed one of the great democratic experiences of this century: a people claiming, with immense control and dignity, the American rights long denied them."

How it was

But remember how it was in the summer of 1963:

The United States was clutched by racial ferment. Freedom Rides, sit-ins, marches on courthouses and state capitals were popping all over the country. There were violent exchanges between blacks and whites, marchers and police, pickets and hecklers.

Americans, having just begun to adjust to the reality of nuclear weapons and missiles in the 1940s and 1950s, now were confronted with trouble at home, and it was frightening.

In Washington, the President was no less under pressure, prodded more than two years after assuming office into asking Congress for civil rights legislation. The prospects were for long months of windy public debate followed by private horse-trading and enactment of a weak bill.

Jobs, freedom

The "March for Jobs and Freedom" was the dream of Asa Phillip Randolph, then only five years from retirement as president of the Sleeping Car Porters union. Randolph, the only Negro sitting on the AFL-CIO Executive Council, resurrected the idea he had first proposed in 1941, when his threat of a black march on Washington pushed Franklin D. Roosevelt into creation of a federal agency to fight racial discrimination in war industry hiring.

This time the march was for the benefit of Congress, and that made hackles rise on Capitol Hill. Segregationists and civil rights supporters alike warned that Congress would respond in 1963 as it had to the Bonus Army in 1932 —by killing the legislation that the marchers were seeking. Bloodshed, they said, would set back the cause of racial equality by half a century.

The organizers of the march made a concession to this talk —the Capitol was to stand in splendid isolation; ter on the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial.

Hell at High Noon

Washington in August can be like Hell at high noon. The temperature on Aug. 28, 1963, promises rain elsewhere. In Washington, it signifies only sweat.

As late as 10 a.m., the city seemed deserted except for deployed policemen and troopers. Then, they started arriving on the Monument grounds. There were 1,514 chartered buses and 31 special and regular trains. There were thousands of private automobiles; there was a man who roller-skated —from Chicago, he said.

At mid-afternoon, when the "March" had flowed the eight tenths of a mile from the Monument to the Memorial, Metropolitan Police Chief Robert Murray and Park Police Chief Nelson Murdock estimated the crowd at 175,000 to 200,000. It probably was larger; the Washington Post said "more than 200,000" in its Aug. 29 edition and that estimate is the accepted reference now.

It took two and a half hours for the throng to fill the Memorial grounds, the streets in front of it and the banks of the Reflecting Pool, where hundreds cooled their feet.

At least 70 per cent of the marchers were black and older, on the average, than any Washington demonstrators until the adult white middle class started marching against the Vietnam War late in the 1960s.

It was a revival; impassioned but without anger, enthusiastic but never rowdy. There were four arrests, all of outriders heckling or threatening the marchers.

Then the speeches. It was there that Martin Luther King Jr., intoned "I have a dream" —the phrase that became a symbol of his unquenchable faith in nonviolent civil rights activism.

Randolph, Roy Wilkins of NAACP, Whitney Young of the Urban League, Walter Reuther of the Auto Workers union and John Lewis of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee spoke too, but King's soaring sermon and call to action ("We will not be satisfied until justice rolls down like water and righteousness like a mighty stream") was what the marchers, and millions of television watchers, remembered.

Advanced cause

Ten of the leaders went to see President Kennedy and he told them that their march had "advanced the cause of 20 million Negroes" in America.

Did it?

After 10 years, what has come of the goals that 200,000 people marched for on that hot August day?

They had 10 demands for government action. Before a year had passed, their call for civil rights legislation to guarantee access to public accomodations, to bolster voting rights, to create a fair employment practices commission, and to cut off federal subsidies for programs in which discrimination was practiced, had passed Congress and been signed by a new President, Lyndon Johnson.

Congress also responded with programs—but less money than sponsors felt was needed —for job training and the Supreme Court eventually enlarged the protection of the 14th Amendment, as the marchers had asked.

But they called for a minimum wage of $2 an hour (still not a part of federal law); for federal action to bar discrimination in sale or rental of all government-subsidized housing (still a matter of controversy); and for desegregation of all school districts in 1963 (a goal still unreached.)

And they asked for jobs at decent wages for all who had no work. That was central to the march, part of its name.

In August, 1963, the unemployment rate among Negroes and other nonwhites was 10.1 per cent. In July, 1973, it was 9.3 per cent.

FDA conducting study

Preservatives may be cause of cancer

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Government researchers are looking for a possible contributing cause of cancer in bacon and other cured meats but have reached no definite conclusions, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) said Tuesday.

The study, which began several months ago and is now at the midway point, centers on the use of sodium nitrite as a preservative in hot dogs, hams, fish, bacon and a long list of other meat products.

The chemical has been used for decades to give cured meat its red color and to prevent the growth of bacteria which can produce deadly botulism poisoning.

Recent studies, both within and outside the government, have suggested that sodium nitrite may be responsible for the formation of nitrosamines— chemical agents which have been proven to cause cancer in some test animals.

One possible solution under study is a theory that large quanties of vitamin C — ascorbic acid—can somehow prevent sodium nitrite from triggering nitrosamine formations.

The nitrosamine question has been under study by a panel of experts formed by the Agriculture Department and the FDA. The health problem was last in the news on July 19 when the two agencies revealed they had found nitrosamines in some U.S. meat products where sodium nitrite was mixed with spices before being placed in some prepared meat products such as sandwich meats and sausage

The government ordered the nation's meat packing industry at that time to stop premixing curing agents and spices, unless a chemical buffer was employed to prevent the substances of reacting to each other.

Agriculture Department officials have discounted the possibility that a person could develope cancer just from eating cured meats. But researchers outside the government have called for curbs on sodium nitrite use, claiming that it could have a cumulative impact in conjunction with other possible causes of cancer in the environment.

Oil firm delivers records in probe

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —A federal grand jury investigating the operations of major oil companies received several crates of records from Shell Oil Co. and more are on the way, a Shell spokesman said Monday.

The federal panel subpoenaed the records of Shell, Standard, of Calif. Gulf, Texaco, Atlantic-Richfield and Union Oil last July 10, in its investigation to determine whether officials from the companies met to discuss prices

Dodgers digging their own graves

By BILL LANGLEY
P-B Sports Editor

HOUSTON — It's impossible to know what else can happen to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

What else is there? There is no easy answer but the Dodgers will find something weird to happen.

When an .036 batter drives in three runs to break your back in a vital game, anything can be expected.

The Dodgers, stunned by Jack Billingham and the Cincinnati Reds Wednesday night, will try to pick up the pieces here tonight in the opener of a four-game series at the Astrodome.

Considering their 1-4 record in the Dome this season this is isn't the most ideal location for the Dodgers to rebound.

Tommy John (12-7) will face lefthander Dave Roberts (14-9) in tonight's opener while the Reds enjoy a night off to celebrate Wednesday's 7-3 victory, before hosting Henry Aaron and the Braves Friday for a three-game set.

Obviously, the Dodgers are in deep trouble.

The Dodgers need plenty of help from their friends in the National League West if they're going to overtake the defending champions.

But the Dodgers can't worry about getting any help right now. The first priority is to discover how to win again.

"We were four games ahead two weeks ago," Dodger skipper Walt Alston said, "Now we're five games back. Let's hope the same thing happens to them."

At Cincinnati Wednesday, the Dodgers saw Billingham, who once had an 0-for-68 string this year, knock in his first three runs of the campaign with a bases-loaded double over Willie Davis' head.

It's obvious Davis can't run with his bad leg but it's also understandable why he wouldn't be playing Billingham very deep.

Billingham, who has an awesome 096 lifetime average, received a standing ovation from the 50,795 (39,083 paid) Riverfront Stadium fans. His unexpected two-bagger was the key hit in a five-run explosion in the second inning when Claude Osteen was knocked out in a jiffy.

Earlier in the inning, Osteen fielded Darrel Chaney's grounder but had nobody to throw to at first as the infield assignments got messed up. Chaney's "hit" loaded the bases to set the stage for Billingham.

Dodger pitching, which is supposed to be the strong suit, walked in two runs, an unpardonable sin in the pennant stretch.

Not everything was bad for the Dodgers.

Rookie right-hander Greg Shanahan allowed only one hit in his 3 2-3 innings of work. He prevented what could have been an even bigger inning for the Reds in the second by striking out Johnny Bench and Ed Armbrister with the bases full after forcing in a run by walking Tony Perez.

Osteen's troubles began on a pair of walks to Armbrister and George Foster. Dennis Menke's single scored the first run to get the Reds going.

Thanks to the early lead, ex-Dodger Billingham was able to sail to his 18th victory.

Davey Lopes hit a two-run homer in the third and back-to-back singles by Tom Paciorek and Lopes led to a third tally in the eighth.

But the Reds added a pair of runs in the sixth and seventh off Charlie Hough for unnecessary insurance.

DODGER NOTES . . . IT will be Andy Messersmith, Al Downey, and Don Sutton in that order against the Astros Friday, Saturday, and Sunday with Osten opening the last homestead Monday night against the Giants. The Dodgers have announced that if Hank Aaron ties or breaks Babe Ruth's career home run record next Wednesday or Thursday at Dodger Stadium fans in attendance can send their ticket stubs to the Dodgers in care of P. O. Box 714-what else-to receive a photo of Aaron's accomplishment.

Alston enjoyed a day at his home in nearby Darrtown. The skipper said the highlight was home grown corn-on-the-cob.

The Dodgers had n unuasual reunion with former captain PeeWee Reese. The Dodger bus scraped Reese's car entering the Stadium parking lot.

Al Michaels, the radio voice of the Reds, sounds like a carbon copy of Vin Scully. Michaels denied reports from San Francisco that he has accepted a similar job with the Giants in 1974.

LEAPING LOPES

Poly preps for Utah trip

By CRAIG TRAVIS
P-B Staff Writer

POMONA —The excitement of pulling off the college football upset of the week and possibly the year hasn't worn off yet but the Cal Poly coaches and players are well aware that 'One game does not a season make.'

The Broncos shocked Pacific Coast Athletic Association powerhouse Fresno State University 17-9 last Saturday night to launch the 1973 grid program.

But that game has come and gone so Poly head coach Roy Anderson and his staff are hard at work preparing the team for Saturday's 1:30 p.m. kickoff with Southern Utah at Cedar City.

The Brocos will board a bus Friday morning, in the Kellogg Field parking lot, and head for Las Vegas, where the team will lunch.

From there, it's on to St. George, Utah and Dixie College where the Broncos will eat supper and have a light practice. The team will then reboard the bus and trek to Cedar City to spend the night.

"We enter the game a 7-point underdog psychologically," said defensive coordinator Marv Weetman. "The kids will be playing after a nine-hour bus ride, besides playing under the unfamiliar conditions of a higher altitude."

Ceder City has a population of 7,543 and an altitude of 8,000 feet.

"Coming off the biggest win in the school's history, we're a target for any team we play so we can't let ourselves get fat heads," continued Weetman. "We're thin in a lot of key positions so if a couple of people get hurt it's going to be tough replacing them."

Southern Utah will also be inspired for other reasons. They'll be out to avenge 9-6 and 22-6 defeats to the Broncos in 1971 and '72 plus the fact they're coming off a narrow 10-3 loss to powerful Chico State last Saturday, which played in the Camellia Bowl two years ago.

In preparing for a '73 Thunderbird team, bigger and stronger than the squad that visited CP last year, the Broncos will be trying to correct some of the mistakes that occurred in last Saturday's season opener.

"I think we should have recorded a shutout over Fresno," said Weetman. "But we are young and inexperienced. We have several freshmen playing in crucial positions and those were the positions where the mistakes occurred.

"Their only touchdown came when defensive back Rod Hiatt, a freshman, misread the play and got burned on a long bomb," he continued. That shouldn't have happened but our younger players are going to make mistakes. We know it. So all we can do is work hard on reading the keys of the opposing offenses and improve."

The Broncs are also looking for another kickoff and punter to replace quarterback Jim Zorn. The southpaw signal-caller did a great job in his role as foot specialist in his first game of the season. His kickoff were consistently reaching the end zone and his punts, although not great in distance . . . 29.9 yard average . . . his seven boots were returned for a total of one yard.

The coaching corps is not unhappy with Zorn's kicking, they just don't want to risk any injuries to him. Zorn, on the opening kickoff, made the tackle that forced the funble which resulted in three points for the Broncos.

In fact, Zorn did everything but sell peanuts and popcorn in his Poly debut. He was successful on nine of 21 passes for 136 yards and two TD's. The Broncos have four non-league battles before their Oct. 13 rivalry with California Collegiate Athletic Association (CCAA) powerhouse Cal Poly San Luis Obispo.

Although it seems impossible the CCAA is tougher than ever.

Fullerton, which has some of the best football material around, will be competing in its final CCAA season. Next year the Titans will join the rugged Pacific Coast Athletic Association after meeting the requirements of securing funds to offer 55-full ride scholarships.

UC Riverside—The Highlanders' budget is increasing therefore so is their football program. They receive approximately twice the amount of funds as Poly receives.

Cal Poly, SLO — is the class of the league because of its location and the financial backing it receives. Ranked as one of the small college powerhouses, the Mustangs have attained their strong program because of its financial ability to recruit grid prospects and its geographical location.

Being isolated from large communities and a large number of universities, small colleges, and junior colleges, the campus presents an ideal location for students to get away from the Southland, but no so far where they can't drive home for a long weekend.

As for the Broncos, it's no secret that financially they can't compete with their CCAA comrades. However, the team does have the support of the school administration.

"The advantage of the other schools have over us is the finances to recruit," said Anderson. "But we're going to get anybody from any place we can from now on. The pressure is on to get a winning team. We'll recruit anybody we can. It will take time, and we knew it would, but our program will get there."

Singer nears 20 wins

ANAHEIM (UPI)—Bill Singer, who won 20 games with Los Angeles in 1929, is closing in on that mark as a member of the other team in Southern California.

Singer, part of a seven-player trade between the Dodgers and the California Angels last winter, got No. 18 Wednesday night by withstanding a strong Chicago comeback in a 5-5 victory over the White Sox. The White Sox touched Singer for 11 hits but Angel manager Bobby Winkles was determined to let his pitcher stay in the game.

"I went with Singer for a long time tonight and I meant to," Winkles said. "I wanted to give him every chance to get those 20 wins."

After his big season with the Dodgers in 1969, Singer was 8-5 in 1970 including a no-hitter, but fell to 10-17 in 1971 and 6-16 in his last year with the Dodgers. His record in the American League this year is now 18-12.

"I should be able to win 20 because I've won 18 in 36 starts and I've got four starts left," Singer said.

The Angel celebration was marred by the news that seuond baseman Sandy Alomar suffered a broken leg and will be out for the rest of the season. Alomar was injured in a collision at second base in the third inning.

Bob Oliver provided the Angels with the winning run by driving in Winston Llenas with a single in the eighth inning. It was Oliver's third single of the game, and came after the White Sox had come roaring back with four runs in the eighth to tie the game 5-5.

The Angels jumped on loser Terry Forster, 6-7, for three runs in the first and added a pair in the third. Forster, usually a reliever, went the distance despite allowing 16 hits.

Bill Sharp's three-run homer in the eighth was the big hit in Chicago's comeback. Designated hitter Frank Robinson had three hits while Alomar collected a double, a single and two RBI's before leaving in the third inning.

The Angels send Andy Hassler, 0-3, against the Kansas City Royals and Al Fitzmorris, 6-2, in the first of a four-game series tonight.

POMONA — Stakes winning three-year-olds Bensadream and Brush Cutter and two other quick sophomores poised for a shot at an initial victory in an added-money event are among nine horses ready for the $10,000-added Foothill Stakes Friday as the Los Angeles County Fair Meeting at Pomona opens.

The 14-day season includes 11 races daily, Monday through Saturday, with first post time at 1 p.m. Exacta wagering will be offered on the fourth, eighth and eleventh races. In addition to the eight thoroughbred races (fourth through eleventh) there will be one for the appalosas (first race) and two for the quarter horses (second and third).

The foothill, a six-furlong contest which serves as a stepping stone to the Pomona Derby, is the first of 13 thoroughbred stakes to be offered at the half-mile oval where speed and the ability to handle the sharp turns are of special importance.

Trainer M. E. (Buster) Millerick, who saddled Kissin' George for a track record performance at six furlongs five years ago, will boost 1972's leading rider, Don Pierce, aboard Bensadream.

Bensadream, the quick son of Nasharco, captured the Baldwain Stakes at Santa Anita last spring and ran six furlongs in 1.09 at Hollywood Park in his last California outing. He was unsuccessful as the heavy choice in an allowance race at La Mesa Park in his most recent start.

High Protein, set to break from the outside post position under Lambert, contested the Del Mar Derby but his best races at the seaside course were in seven and one-half furlong turf sprints. The son of Cop Conference captured a pair of those events in front-running style.

Francisco Mena, who won the 1972 Foothill aboard Tragic Isle, has the call on Nabu, another son of Nasharco. The front-running colt tallied in 1.09-3-5 at Del Mar in his last start and was runner-up in a pair of allowance sprints.

Midwestern invader Brush Cutter, to be ridden by Nels Peterson, has banked nearly $40,000 this year and has won four of his last five starts the Kentucky-bred colt won the Centennial Derby at a mile and one-sixteenth and more recently tallied in 1.09-2-5 for six furlongs.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. and E. W. Johnston, whose colors have been carried to victory in numerous stakes races at Pomona, are represented in the Foothill roster by the entry of Fleet's Deal and the filly Sleek and Fleet. Frank Olivares is named on both horses.

Cal 500 ready for March

By KEVIN CLOE
P-B Staff Writer

ONTARIO — California's biggest sports attraction, the California 500, will be at Ontario Motor Speedway a little earlier next year.

That may not be news, but the reasoning behind it may be.

The group, which took over the operations at the Speedway after the original owners were forced to close down due to financial problems, has changed the racing date for the prestigious Cal 500 championship car race from the first week of September to early March.

The date for the fifth annual 500 has been set for next March 10, and the new owners feel it'll be a better date to run the race.

"The March date is the best way to go," said OMS general manager Jim Cook. "There is no less competition for the spectator dollar and for press coverage. In September, we had the Dodgers in the midst of a pennant race and the Rams and colleges just starting their football promotions. In March, there's no baseball or football."

"The only problem we could see was the rain," he commented. "But it even-rained in last year's race—so that problem existed then. We've done some research with the weather bureau, and they think it's the right date—weather-wise."

The first three California 500s at OMS drew over 150,000 spectators, 180,-223 in 1970, 168,420 in '71 and 161,240 in 1972.

But in the fourth annual event, held earlier this month, the official atendance was never announced. The stimation was somewhere between 90,000 and 100,000 spectators.

So what was the reason for the reduction in the estimated attendance?

"We didn't have very much time to get ready for it," Cook indicated. "But we didn't cut any corners. We tried to put the track back in shape as best we could."

What was the reason for concealing the attendance and the financial figures of the race?

"Our policy is not to reveal either attendance or financial figures," Cook noted. "That's the way it's run at Indianapolis, and the people running the track here are from there. We think it's the best way. That way you can't possibly get some false figures floating around, just a lot of guessing."

The decision to stay with the track or abandon it must be made by Jan. 1, when they must decide whether or not to exercise a five-year option that includes an annual $500,000 rent guarantee plus the first $450,000 in profits which goes to the bond holders.

Cook has indicated that the group has been working on the speedway as though it were goint to stick around for those five years and maybe more, but first it wants to take a look at what happens to the Spark Plug Motorcycle Classic (Sept. 27-30) and the Supernationals (Nov. 17-18).

There was also talk going around bout a Can-Am race for OMS in early December, but so far it has only been talk.

"There are a lot of things we're looking at for the speedway," Cook added. "We're doing the best we can to make the speedway go.

"A group that would want to operate the track for just one race would have cut down on a lot of things just to have the race," he inserted."We could have cut down, but we didn't. We're thinking on a long-range basis. We want to build around racing schedule."

With the Motorcycle Classic set for the end of this month, the new group is already starting to get out some public announcements and other publicity.

"We are trying to get the word out about the Classic," said Cook, "and at the same time start our publicity on the Cal 500 for next year."

There is no doubt that the Ontario Motor Speedway Operating Co. (OMSOC) is very optimistic about the speedway's future.

"The group feels that this race has potential of drawing crowds like Indy," Cook added. "We think Ontario can draw crowds of 300,000 some day. It'll just take sometime to build it up."

Cook also indicated that the new operators were pleased with the paid attendance, even though it was down from last year's total.

The reason behind that was because the group cut down on the total purse from $500,000 to $150,000 and also on advertising from $500,000 to $100,000. Even though the purse was trimmed, it was still a larger payoff than any other United States Auto Club (USAC) race except for the Indy 500.

The optimism is so strong that the contract the speedway has with USAC calls for a five-year March date for a championship car race.

National League roundup

Pennant race is all in East

By United Press International

The Eastern Division race keeps getting tighter. St. Louis' loss to Montreal dropped the Cards a half-game behind Pittsburgh while the Expos are only a game out.

Steve Rogers pitched out of two bases-loaded and none out jams to pace Montreal over St. Louis. He was helped by the fine fielding of shortstop Tim Foli and first baseman Mike Jorgensen. "You'll never see a shortstop and a first baseman on the same team on the same night perform at that level," Manager Gene Mauch said.

The Expos now are shooting for their first pennant "I keep looking for the Pirates to get hot but they haven't so far," Bob Bailey said. "Maybe there's no reason to think they will unless Steve Blass has found himself." Bailey's ninth inning homer decided the game.

The Pirates were able to beat Chicago as Bruce Kison, called up from the minors recently, limited the Cubs to six hits in seven innings before Dave Giusti came on to get the save. Bob Robertson's three-run homer in the fourth inning gave the Pirates the punch they needed.

Homers by Wayne Garrett and John Milner helped New York down Philadelphia. Jon Matlack got the win with relief help from Tug McGraw. Wayne Twitchell was tagged with the defeat. The victory moved the Mets to within 2 ½ games of first place in the West.

Hank Aaron got two singles for Atlanta but he didn't homer although he did hit a shot that was foul by inches in the third inning. The Braves beat San Francisco as Darrell Evans, who homered twice, and Marty Perez, who homered once, each drove in three runs.

Aaron's pursuit of Babe Ruth is just one of three home run records within reach of the Atlanta Braves this month.

In addition to Aaron, who needs four more homers to tie Ruth's career mark of 714, Dave Johnson is two shy of tying Rogers Hornsby for most homers in a season by a second baseman, and Aaron, Johnson and Darrell Evans are zeroing in on yet another record.

No team has ever had three players hit 40 or more home runs the same season. But Johnson is already at that mark, Aaron is only three away and Evans hit Nos 37 and 38 Wednesday night while leading the Braves to a 10-4 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Evans had faltered from the major league home run lead to third on his own team, not having hit a homer in Atlanta Stadium in six weeks, and he admits that it was beginning to bother him.

The Braves, who have 190 home runs, have three of the top five home run hitters in the majors.

American League roundup

By United Press International

Yaz won the Triple Crown six years ago while leading the Boston Red Sox to the American League pennant with an incredible stretch run performance. While no threat for Triple Crown honors this season, Yaz did rip his 14th and 15th homers and drive in five runs Wednesday night to lead Boston to a 7-1 victory over the New York Yankees

Despite the victory, Boston dropped another half game behind first place Baltimore in the American League East. The Orioles took two from Milwaukee 4-1 and 5-3 to increase their lead to six games and reduce their magic number to 12 with 18 games remaining.

"He's doing it all," said Red Sox Manager Eddie Kasko, referring to Yastrzemski's latest performance which has seen him hitting at a .391 pace since Aug. 2, to raise his batting average to .298 and increase his RBI total to 80.

"He's the first to help out, too," added Kasko, taking note of Yaz' switch to third base to fill the gap left by injured Rico Petrocelli. "He volunteered to play first base when we needed a first baseman and he was eager to play third when we needed help there. That's a big thing for a superstar like Yaz to do."

Yastrzemski's only comment: "I'm not doing anything differently than I did before Aug. 2. I'm just playing the race.'

Yastrzemski's slugging backed the five-hit pitching of unbeaten Roger Moret, who posted his 11th victory. The only run he allowed was Ron Swoboda's homer in the seventh.

In the only other AL games, Kansas City blanked Oakland 5-0, Texas beat Minnesota 5-2 and California edged Chicago 6-5.

Rich Coggins, battling teammate Al Bumbry for AL Rookie of the Year honors, had three hits, two RBIs and scored twice to give the Orioles their first game triumph and help Jim Palmer notch his 20th victory for the fourth consecutive season. Coggins tripled in the eighth inning of the nightcap and scored on Boog Powell's single to snap a 3-3 tie and provide reliever Grant Jackson with his eighth win without a loss.

Hal McRae homered twice and drove in four runs to lead Kansas City past Oakland and move the Royals within five games of the first place A's in the West. Paul Splittorff, with eighth inning relief from Doug Bird, gained his 16th victory.

Tom Grieve's two-run homer and the clutch relief pitching of rookie Rick Henninger gave Texas its win over Minnesota. Henninger allowed one run and six hits over 5 2-3 innings to pick up his first major league win. Harmon Killebrew slugged his 545th career homer for Minnesota's first run.

Pop Warner clubs open 1973 season

The 1973 Pop Warner football regular season begins Sunday. Last week the teams had their final tuneup in the annual Kick-Off Bowl activity consisting of 20 minute exhibitions.

The Pomona Bruins defested the Montclair Pirates 8-0. This week the Bruins open regular season play against the defending Champion Ontario Packers at 12:30 p.m. Last year the Packers won 20-6.

Chino teams played two ties and suffered one loss. The Chino Colts of the Midget division battled hard in a 7-0 loss to the Claremont Warriors.

The Chino Dusters (Pee Wee) fought a scoreless standoff with the Diamond Bar Gauchos while the Jr. Pee Wee Mavericks and Claremont Raiders battled to a 13-13 tie.

This Sunday. the Chino Colts travel to Santa Ana to play the Dons. The Dusters and Mavericks are at home at Chino High. The Dusters meet the Banning Bandidos at 12:30 p.m. and the Mavericks take on the San Dimas-La Verne Lancers at 3:30 p.m.

MSAC has what it takes

By MIKE RAWLINSON
P-B Staff Writer

WALNUT — This year's Mt. San Antonio College football team features something "old", something "borrowed" and something "new." All three appear to add up to a very successful season — on paper anyway.

Just how good the 1973 Mounties are will be determined in the weeks ahead. It begins Saturday night at Citrus Stadium when MSAC tangles with old-rival Citrus College in a 7:30 p.m. contest.

SOMETHING OLD — Back from an outstanding year in 1972 is second team All-South Coast Conference quarterback Steve Myer, who led the nation's community college QBs in passing by completing 181 of 331 attempts for 2,244 yards and 14 touchdowns. Myer has appeared strong and healthy in two pre-season scrimmages following a summer automobile accident in which his throwing arm was severely injured. Myer has added pounds to his lean, 6-foot-2 frame and should weight-in at about 190 Saturday night.

Defensively, the Mounties will field a veteran unit, composed of seven lettermen, most of whom were starters a year ago. Up front it's all veteran — Rick Gohl, Chuck Shrewsberry, Mike Stanridge, and Mike Hammers. At linebacker veteran Damon Petta and Richard Gomez will be joined by some talented newcomers. The secondary shapes up the same way with all-SCC selectee Tom Mackenzie, starter Russ Dion and veteran Bill Keilty

MacKenzie shared the team lead in interceptions (4) and kicked 9 of 13 field goals and 20 of 24 extra points as the team place kicker. He was second in scoring with 47 points.

SOMETHING BORROWED — Coming off two fine seasons as a sprinter on the MSAC track team is speedy Sam Jenkins, who is a likely starter in the defensive secondary. Sudden Sam will also see action as a receiver. He is a 9.7 sprinter with a determined competitive attitude. Having used up his track eligibility, Jenkins elected to complete his fifth semester at MSAC as a gridder. He last played football as a senior at Garey High three years ago.

SOMETHING NEW — Freshmen and transfers bring a talented collection of athletes to MSAC this year. Most notable are a pair of All-CIF linebackers. Don Curtis of South Hills High has earned himself a starting berth, and Pete Constantino of Alhambra, a cross-district transfer, is moving in that direction. Offensively, Keith Keating, 6-foot-4, 240-pound guard, who prepped at Bishop Amat two seasons back and spent his sophomore year at Washington State, will probably work into the starting lineup soon. Keating is expected to add strength to an inexperienced offensive line, John Huston, a diminutive (5-8, 170) running back from Sweetwater, Tex. is expected to push veteran Teddy Farmer at tailback in the newly installed I-formation offense.

So that's what head coach Mal Eaton and his assistants will throw against Citrus in the season opener

The Owls will have a new-look this year, with coach John Strycula's son Bill directing a passing attack in a rebuilt backfield. Citrus depended on the run a year ago with JC All-American running back Ken Williams, a 1,000-yard rusher two-years in a row.

Of much interest to the Mounties Saturday night will be a game across the valley between Chaffey and defending South Coast Conference champion Cerritos at Panther Stadium. The Mounties face the latter in the first conference game Oct. 20. Cerritos is favored to take the title again this year.

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (UPI)—South African Gary Player, fresh from his first tour win of the season and shooting for $1 million in career winnings, was the man to beat as the $150,000 Heritage Open golf tournament began today.

U.S. Open champion Johnny Miller, the defending Heritage titlist, and a pair of one-time Wake Forest University golfers, Arnold Palmer and Lanny Wadkins, also had to be rated as favorites among the invitational field of 102.

Player picked up $20,000 for his Southern Open win last week, boosting his career earnings to $973,000 on the American tour, and the Heritage's top prize could move him into the company of Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Billy Casper and Lee Trevino as a winner of more than $1 million in tour money.

More than momentum and financial incentive, though, the key to success for Player appeared to be the course, the par 71, 6,655-yard Harbour Town links.

Player, who leaves Monday for his South African home, had never before played in the five-year old Heritage, always held before in November after he had departed for the season.

"It's such a pleasure to play on small greens, and, really, this is the greatest golf course in the world," said Player.

Fast Field aim at win at Elsinore

ELSINORE — The fastest field ever assembled will be gunning for thousands of dollars and all of the prestige that goes with winning the annual Lake Elsinore 250 mile endurance boat race.

Boats have been entered from as far away as Hawaii and many of the world's foremost drivers will be on hand for the two day event.

Saturday's action will center around the STP Time Trials. Those entered in Sunday's main event are eligible for the trials in which the STP Corporation donates the prize money. Competition will be for one lap around the surveyed two and a half mile course. The entrants will be divided into classes and may enter the trials as many times as they wish. The trials start at 10 A.M. and end promptly at 3 P.M.

Sunday morning at 10 A.M. the starter will fire the gun that will start the world's fastest boats and drivers on the 6th annual Lake Elsinore 250 mile endurance race. Participants will race until the first boat completes 100 laps around the course.

The race will be headquartered at the Holiday Trailer Park on the northeast shore of the popular southland recreation area. Lake Elsinore is located halfway between Los Angeles and San Diego and 25 miles inland from San Juan Capistrano.

Wooley indicted

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI)— Former Ball High football coach Joe Woolley, whose resignation was demanded after he admitted tampering with a Oklahoma football player's grade transcript, was indicted Wednesday in connection with the grade rigging scandal.

A Galveston County grand jury indicted Woolley on the misdemeanor offense of "altering an academic record." Lynn Nix, a former vice principal and an assistant coach under Woolley at the time of the grade tampering, also was indicted on the charge.

Woolley admitted last April he changed the transcripts of former Ball High player Kerry Jackson. The Sooners, ranked No. 2 at the end of last season, revealed the doctored transcripts and forfeited eight victories in which Jackson, then a freshman quarterback, played.

Oklahoma also was placed on two years probation by the Big Eight conference because of the rules infraction.

Woolley first was demoted by school superintendent Eli Douglas, but the school board later voted to reinstate him by a 4-3 vote.

The action prompted Woolley's assistant coaches to resign and the ensuing controversy resulted in Douglas' demanding Woolley's resignation last July.

"I know what I did was wrong and I have learned a very valuable lesson but once again I did it with the kid in mind, trying to help him stay at Oklahoma," he said last April. "I changed the record to match what was on their record to protect the kid."

Woolley refused to comment on the grand jury charges Wednesday.

The indictments were returned under a provision of the Texas State Education code which makes it a high grade misdemeanor to tamper with a student's transcript. The maximum penalty upon conviction of the charge is a $1,000 fine or one year in jail, or both.

College football roundup

Bowl matchup early

By United Press International

Colorado-LSU. On the surface, it looks like a college football matchup just made for New Years Day.

The schedule-makers couldn't wait that long this year, however, and so the Buffs and the Bayou Bengals will kick off their '73 seasons Saturday in an unaccustomed bowl-like matchup at Baton Rouge.

Normally, the big-time schools with winning football traditions choose to pad the early non-conference part of their schedules with patsies and perennial also-rans. So either somebody goofed on this one or else coaches Eddie Crowder of Colorado and Charlie McClendon of LSU want to find out quickly just how good their clubs really are.

The oddsmakers have installed Colorado a three-point favorite—a risky bet considering the past fates of visiting teams at Tiger Stadium

In other intersectional games around the country, defending national champ Southern California is an off-the-board choice against Arkansas, Penn State is rated seven over Stanford, Georgia Tech seven over South Carolina, Alabama is listed 24 over California, Arizona State 10 over Oregon, Georgia 17 over Pittsburgh, Oklahoma 17 over Baylor and Florida 21 better than Kansas State.

The biggest reason Colorado goes into Baton Rouge a favorite is the return of the entire backfield from last year including quarterback Ken Johnson and the swift running back Charlie Davis. Crowder seems to be putting up a smoke-screen though after announcing early this week that Davis is not likely to start—despite having scored 26 touchdowns in two years at Colorado.

It was Johnson who engineered a 31-21 upset victory for Colorado over the Bengals at Baton Rouge two years ago. The Buffs also feature 6-foot-6 J.V. Cain, Johnson's favorite receiver and an early-line favorite for All-America honors as well as a big pro bonus come January.

LSU, as usual, is supposed to be top-heavy with defensive standouts and that's a good thing if it is to stop Colorado's multi-faceted attack. Linebacker Warren Capone, a bonafide All-America prospect, is the key man in the LSU defensive unit.

Southern Cal, favored to repeat as national champion, is not expected to have too much trouble with Arkansas. Last year, the Trojans trounced a highly-rated Arkansas team led by super passer Joe Ferguson, 31-10. This time around, Southern Cal returns much of its 1972 cast (including All Americas Anthony Davis and Richard Wood) which went 11-0, while the Razorbacks '73 squad is comprised of 65 per cent freshmen and sophomores.

The Penn State-Stanford nationally-televised game should be a little more interesting. Once again Joe Paterno's Nittany Lions are loaded with talent including All-America hopefuls Dan Natale at tight end and tailback John Cappelletti.

Stanford, however, must be taken seriously if for no other reason than Mike Boryla, the top returning passing quarterback in the nation. The Cardinals also will be enjoying the home field advantage.

Charlie O. says Tams will play

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Charlie Finley, owner of the American Basketball Association's Memphis Tams, promised to bring the club out of oblivion today.

In a telephone call to the Memphis Commercial Appeal Wednesday night, Finley said he told trainer Don Sparks to open training camp today and to reopen the club's office at the Mid-South Coliseum.

Finley also said he would hire a coach for the team today and had already made one man an offer. "I am still waiting for a yes or no from this man," he said. "Until I receive an answer, it would not be fair to bandy his name about.

"If he does not take the job, then I will hire someone else I have in mind tomorrow."

The millionaire insurance executive from Chicago, who also owns the Oakland A's baseball franchise, bought the Memphis club last summer and saved the team from being disbanded. After the Tams compiled the league's worst record last season and Finley said he lost $500,000, he announced that the club was being sold to a group of Providence, R. I., businessmen.

When the league trustees failed to approve the Providence deal, the future of the franchise appeared uncertain. Coach Bob Bass had quit to become head of ABA officials, the team office here was closed, no tickets for the coming season had been sold and almost) none of the players had contracts.

Finley promised Wednesday night that all of the problems will be corrected, with the new coach tackling the job of negotiating players' contracts.

"I'm still going to try to do everything possible to bring a winning club to Memphis," he said. "I realize we didn't have a great team last year, but we hope to do better this season.

L.A. netter upsets Fillol

SEATTLE (UPI)—Bob Kreiss of Los Angeles opened his pro tennis career Wednesday night with an incredible 6-1, 2-6, 7-5 upset win over Chilean Davis Cup star Jaime Fillol in the first round of the Seattle International Tennis Tournament.

The former UCLA star appeared to have the match wrapped up when he was serving with a 5-1 advantage in the final set. However, Kreiss was called for foot-faulting on his second serve for match point and his concentration left him.

Fillol fought back to win the seventh game, then held service twice and broke Kreiss twice to tie the third set at 5-5.

HE WON'T PLAY UNLESS . . . — Bob Love, of the Chicago Bulls, says he won't play until the Bull renegotiate his contract. Love did not report to training camp. At left is his agent Irwin Weiner.

Mackey quits NFLPA prexy post

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Mackey, former all-pro tight end who recently retired after 10 years in the National Football League, Wednesday resigned his position as president of the NFL Players Association to accept an executive position with WMA Sports Inc., a subsidiary of the famed William Morris Agency, Inc.

Mackey, who starred for the Baltimore Colts for nine seasons and played last year with the San Diego Chargers, could have served as president of the Players Association until January but decided to step down now to avoid a conflict of interests. He will be succeeded as president by Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers until January when a new election is held.

In joining WMA Sports, Inc., Mackey will assume a similar role he held as Players Association president. His job will be to handle negotiations and management of athletes in their dealings with the entertainment world.

"The sports division is a new concept for an agency like William Morris. We started out by signing Mark Spitz after his great Olympic victories, and John Mackey gives us another dimension," said Berle Adams, president of WMA Sports. "He was elected unanimously for two terms as president of the NFL Players Association. He was personally involved with complex negotiations with many people in the upper levels of sports management. With WMA he will directly handle player negotiations and management of athletes.

"Clients of WMA Sports will be represented in a total spectrum including television, films, Broadway, endorsements, testimonials, profitable commercial associations, variety entertainment, speaking engagements and literary endeavors, all areas in which the William Morris Agency has excelled for 75 years."

The objective of the WMA Sports Division, according to Adams, is to get a representation of sports personalities, teams, associations and related organizations under one roof from which a variety of commercial and entertainment opportunities can be developed.

"My joining WMA Sports is in keeping with my objective of helping the athlete's career on and beyond the playing field," said Mackey, who gained a reputation as a hard-bargainer during his term as NFL Players Association president. "I only wanted to play 10 years and I am fortunate enough to be able to walk away from the game healthy."

Mackey, a graduate of Syracuse University where he starred as a running back and offensive end, was an all-pro tight end three times for the Colts and played in five pro bowls.

Gal gridders OK

WISHKAH, Wash. (UPI) — "If the guys are too busy drinking or whatever, we'll let the girls do a man's work."

So says coach John Clark at Little Wishkah Valley High School where three girls are turning out for the football team in an attempt to stop an 18-game losing streak.

Only 11 boys out of Wishkah Valley's 102 students showed up this fall to form a squad for the local football league of eightman...er, that is, eight-person — teams. Last year's losing scores like 48-0, 52-6 and 54-6 had the team and the school demoralized.

"None of the other guys at school would turn out so we figured the team needed us," says Carol, at 5-5½ and 170 pounds a candidate for a line position.

Clark says 16-year-old Carol and Delores, who at 14 is 5-9 and decidedly heavier than her sister, are still in the running for one starting guard spot. Both girls easily exceed the average team weight of around 150 pounds and at least the younger can move with power.

"She (Delores) hit me so hard she hurt my arm," complains custodian Ronald Warwick, a 210-pounder who sometimes holds a practice dummy for blocking workouts.

"It kind of hurt our pride at first," admits team member John Haskey, "but it took a lot of guts for them to turn out. And we've got to have them."

So far there has been no opposition from the agricultural and logging community of about 1,000 people that sends its children to Wishkah Valley schools.

"We're really excited about the whole thing," says Russell Darrin of his daughters' decision to play football. Their mother, Muriel, agrees that it's "neat" and wishes she'd done the same thing.

Dennis Darrin, assistant football coach and brother of Carol and Delores, isn't worried his sisters will get hurt. In fact he says he feels "sorry for some of the guys."

During practice the boys wear white jerseys, the girls black.

"That's so we can tell if anyone is picking on them or if the boys aren't hitting them hard enough," explains the coach. Then he adds that "the black jerseys don't have holes."

The girls say they aren't worried about someone getting grabby in a pile-up.

game Saturday, the coach admits he's got an unusual situation on his hands.

Fund-raising ocean fishing derby set

LONG BEACH — The second annual fund-raising fishing derby to help improve southern California's marine fishin, has been set for Sept. 22, 1973, by the sponsoring Sportfishing Association of California (SAC), according to SAC President Bill Nott.

Nott said September 22, which is also National Hunting and Fishing Day as proclaimed by President Nixon, was chosen as the Derby date so what ocean anglers could participate in NHF activites by helping to contribute to a better marine environment.

The SAC Derby is held in cooperation with the 27 SAC member sportfishing landings from Morro Bay to Imperial Beach, below San Diego. SAC landing operators and skippers donate their boats that day to the Association, regular passenger fares prevail, and profits are turned over to SAC for its continuing efforts in improving ocean sport fishing.

"We're pushing for such programs as that recently announced by the California Department of Fish and Game." Nott explained. "We've been working closely with the Marine Resources Branch of the Fish and Game Department since our group was formed September of last year, and we're beginning to see the fruits of that labor now."

Nott said that after SAC began formulating a plan to outline ways to benefit the deep sea angler, the Department of Fish and Game responded with a new Marine Improvement Program announced recently.

"Part of that program is the introduction of 20,000 fingerling striped bass into southland waters next year," Nott emphasized. "We're going to get 20,000 eight-to nine-inch-long striper fingerlings planted in 1974, and equal numbers in 1975 and 1976. These are the types of programs we're implementing with SAC funds."

Nott said this represents the first introductions of marine fish off southern California in any quantity, adding, "the average fisherman figures to receive direct benefit from programs such as this."

Fishing tackle prizes are also awarded to anglers catching the largest fish of several approved species at official SAC landings on Derby Day, but Nott emphasized that the main thrust of the day is conservation and improved environment.

To participate in this year's SAC Derby, anglers need only to make a reservation to fish that day at any of the 27 member landings.

"This is a cooperative effort between our sportfishing landings and the customers they serve," Nott said. "Anglers fishing on this day can take pride in the fact that they are whelping themselves, and future generations of fishermen."

Hunters warned of fire closures

ONTARIO — Hunting in San Bernardino county's West End area will be both restricted and poor.

Lt. Tom Wickham of the San Bernardino County West End Sheriff's substation announced that a county ordinance has resulted in a West End fire closure that closes all of the Mt. Baldy range south to the valley.

Lt. Wickham said the closest area to the West End open for hunting is Lyttle Creek in the Stockton Flats area. Deer prospects for that area are reported poor.

"Sheriff's and Forrestry officials have patrols on duty to make sure there is no entry to the closed areas," Lt. Wickham said.

"Hunters should check the fire closures and firearms restriction areas before starting to hunt," he said. Firearms restriction maps are available at the West End substation, 6th and Mountain, in Ontario or any sheriff's substation.

"We would like to caution hunters to use extreme care," Lt. Wickham continued. "All members of the party should be dressed so that they can be easily identified. Last year two hunters were shot."

One rattlesnake bite was reported by hunters last year. This year the rattlesnake problem is moderate as compared to bad last year.

Hunt safety clinic slated

SANTA ANA — The Western Outdoors Hunter Safety Clinic, a one-day course of instruction to qualify first-time hunters for their California hunting license for 1973 will be held Saturday.

Open to youngsters between the ages of 10 and 17, and adults who also wish to qualify for their first hunting license, the clinic will be held at the Southcoast Gun Club located ½ mile west of the San Diego freeway on Jeffrey Drive, off of University Dr. in Santa Ana.

The event, will get underway precisely at 8 a.m. and will run through 6:30 p.m. with a lunch break around noon.

Registration is limited to 500 participants. Minimum age for youngsters is 10 years old. All youngsters up to 17 years of age must be accompanied by an adult. Adults may also participate if they do not have a hunting license and have yet to qualify in a hunter safety course.

To register, applicants need only send their name, address, telephone number, zip code, and their age, along with their signature to: Family Hunter Safety Clinic, c-o Western Outdoor News, P.O. Elmendorf agrees with the boss--the Rams are 'Super'

The Los Angeles Rams, says the third-year pro from Texas A&M, are Super Bowl timber.

"We definitely have a shot at it all," said Elmendorf, who intercepted three passes in the Rams' exhibition finale last weekend. "We've improved every week and we've improved quite a bit But that figured because this is a completely new club; a new coaching staff and new players. It just takes time."

At 24, Elmendorf is the only returning starter in a defensive secondary that allowed 20 touchdown passes in a disappointing 6-7-1 season. The Rams ranked next-to-last in this category in the NFC in 1972.

In fact, the young pro from Texas is only one of 10 men—four on defense—who started in the Rams' season opener against New Orleans last season who will be in the starting lineup at Kansas City Sunday, Los Angeles' first regular season game of 1973.

Against the Chiefs, it will be Elmendorf at strong safety, rookie Cullen Bryant at free safety and veteran Charlie Stukes anl rookie Eddie McMillian at the corners.

"I think we could win the Super Bowl this year," Elmendorf said, "but there are a lot of other teams that could do the same thing. I can name 12 to 15 teams that could do it.

"I've only been in the league three years and that's not very long but the teams seem to get more even every season."

The Rams went through their exhibition schedule with a 2-3-1 record but capped the preseason off with 30-17 and 38-10 victories over San Diego and San Francisco, respectively. In the game with the 49ers last Friday night, Elmendorf picked off two John Brodie passes and one by Steve Spurrier.

"It takes a lot of things besides talent to win the Super Bowl," Elmendorf said. "You have to have a lot of luck on your side.

"I'm not taking anything away from Miami last year because they were just a great football team but there was a certain element of luck involved to accomplish what they did."

The Dolphins, of course, went undefeated, beating Washington for the big money

"I was surprised that happened," he said "and I'll be even more surprised to see it happen this year. There's no way any team is going unbeaten this season."

For Elmendorf, it will be his third season as a regular, too. He stepped right into the starting lineup out of college, playing free safety for the Rams as a rookie and then moving to strong safety last year.

"It takes several years to learn how to play a particular position," he said, "and I'm still learning. But the things I used to have to think about are coming more naturally now."

Shoemaker reaches milestone

DEL MAR, Calif. (UPI)—Bill Shoemaker has reached another milestone in his fabled career that began 24 years ago.

Thoroughbred racing's all-time winningest jockey scored victory No. 100 in a $100,000 stakes race Wednesday as Del Mar wound up its 43-day meeting.

Shoemaker, 42, was aboard the 6-5 favorite, Such A Rush, in the $116,190 Del Mar Futurity, the richest event ever here, and he didn't disappoint his backers.

Such A Rush won easily, finishing 3¾ lengths in front of longshot Fast Pappa. The Gay Greek was third in the field of 11 2-year-olds at 7½ furlongs on the turf.

"He ran perfect," said Shoemaker after his 601st stakes triumph. "Today certainly was the day for him to do it, too I knew if I didn't get him settled down and off the lead, he would never make two turns.

"We were in perfect position around the first turn and he really calmed down for me. He wasn't lugging in like he did in his last two races."

A crowd of 17,408 turned out to see Such A Rush win in 1:29 4-5 and pay $4.60 to win. They also saw Shoemaker win two other races—the third on Brave And Daring at $3.80 and the ninth on Ice Cap at $6.60 —to increase his career victory total to 6,564.

Del Mar's 1973 season was a record breaker for the fourth consecutive year. Attendance (629,335) was up 13 per cent over 1972 while the handle ($67,809,021) increased 14 per cent.

Soap box figure asks adjustment of charges

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI)—A prominent businessman who encouraged his 14-year-old nephew to cheat to win the 1973 All-American Soap Box Derby asked a juvenile court judge Wednesday for a "nonjudicial adjustment" of charges against him.

Robert Lange Sr., president of the Lange Ski Boot Co., made the request to Judge Horace Holmes after appearing in court on charges of contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Holmes agreed to take the request under advisement and ordered Lange to return to court Oct. 2 after memoranda have been filed by his uttorney and by the prosecution.

Lange was charged with violating the Colorado Children's Code late last month after officials discovered a hidden electromagnetic system in a soapbox derby car owned by his nephew, James Gronen, 14.

The discovery led to the disqualification of Gronen as winner of the national event at Akron, Ohio, and forfeiture of a $7,500 scholarship. Lange's son, Robert Lange Jr, won the same derby crown in 1972.

Lange admitted he encouraged his nephew to use the electromagnetic device, which was activated when the youth pushed his helmet against the cockpit headrest.

Pro Football roundup

Veteran stars finished

Carroll Dale, a key member of Vince Lombardi's great Green Bay Packer teams of the 1960s, and Johnny Roland, a former Rookie of the Year, apparently have ended their playing careers.

Dale, 35, a wide receiver on Lombardi's three-time NFL and two-time Super Bowl champions, was waived by the Packers Wednesday. He reportedly has been offered a job in the Green Bay organization.

"It is hard to put into words what Carroll has meant to this organization," said Green Bay Coach Dan Devine. "He has been a constant source of strength and inspiration to all of us. As a football player, he has always given 100 per cent."

Roland, beaten out of his starting position at running back by rookie Terry Metcalf, announced his retirement after even years with the St. Louis Cardinals. Roland, 30 was voted Rookie of the Year in 1966.

"I had seven great years of active play," Roland said. "On the whole, I have to say it was a satisfying career, but it had to come to an end some time."

Elsewhere in the NFL as teams prepared for their season openers this weekend, Chicago Coach Abe Gibron denied reports that star middle linebacker Dick Butkus is nursing an injured knee and will not play Sunday against Dallas.

"All I can say is that Butkus will be in the starting lineup Sunday," Gibron said. Butkus missed much of the pre-season and several practice sessions because of the injury. A local news story Wednesday quoted "sources close to Butkus" as saying "there is no fluid left in his knee and he can feel the bones rubbing together. The pain has been killing him all summer"

"Nonsense," was Gibron's reply.

"The decision was based on the six exhibition games and Bert's ability to get the ball across the goal line," Schnellenberger said. "It was a very difficult decision."

Cal League shows good fan interest

SAN MATEO, Calif. (UPI)— Minor league baseball may be hurting in some areas of the country but it's nice and healthy in the Class A California League.

According to figures released today by League President Eddie Mulligan, the recently completed 1973 season was the circuit's most successful at the gate since 1954.

Attendance for the year totalled 453,316, an increase of almost 94,000 or 26 per cent from 1972. It was the best showing at the gate since 503,438 fans turned out in 1954.

San Jose led the Cal League with an attendance figure of 125,047, highest for an individual club since 1952 when Fresno's champion Cardinals drew 129,524. It was a record for San Jose, topping the previous mark of 113,358 set in 1949.

The other city with an attendance record was Salinas, whose 51,477 was nearly 10,000 more than its previous high in 1955. The Packers outdrew Stockton, the city they replaced in the Cal League this year, by 29,352.

Additionally, the champion Lodi Lions doubled their 1972 attendance and Reno's Silver Sox showed an increase of 32 per cent over 1972. Modesto's attendance was up slightly, although the Reds finished last in 1973 compared to winning the championship in 1972.

WHA files anti-trust suit against NHL

NEW YORK (UPI) — The World Hockey Association Wednesday filed a $6 million anti-trust suit in a Brooklyn Federal Court against the New York Islanders of the rival National Hockey League, charging the club with violation of the Sherman anti-trust act through operation of the reserve clause.

The suit also named the National Hockey League and its member as co-conspirators.

The complaint alleges that the defendants, by use of the reserve clause, have gained complete control of the pool of players capable and available to play pro hockey, have denied access to that pool of players by any potential competitors and have taken other steps to monopolize trade and commerce in pro hockey.

The suit states that "unless the relief requested by the plaintiffs is granted, the defendant and their co-conspirators will maintain their monopoly over pro hockey and will destroy those who seek to compete, including the plaintiffs, by depriving them of competent and available hockey players."

In the suit the WHA maintains that through a series of arrangements with amateur hockey clubs in the U.S. and Canada talented hockey players are channeled into the NHL under its reserve clause.

Fascinating womanhood

Course is scheduled

An eight-week session of the Facinating Womanhood course will be offerd Tuesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. beginning Sept. 25 and Wednesdays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. beginning Sept. 26 at the Lincoln Avenue Community Church, corner of Indian Hill Boulevard and Lincoln Avenue.

"Facinating Womanhood" is a book written by Helen Andelin and also a course of study which teaches a philosphy based upon fundamental principles of truth in a form a woman can understand

A woman can learn how to win and maintain her husband's love while placing his happiness as a primary goal. She learns how to understand men, their problems and varying moods, and how to react to them in a way to bring peace into the household rather than discord.

The course is designed for all women of all ages and situations. The program is for "happy" women as well as those whose marriages are beset with critical problems.

WACs appear at Fair

There will be something of interest to both men and women in the Army's Ninth Division display at the Los Angeles County Fair.

One of the Army's first women military police officers, Sgt. Lillian "Cookie" Barber, will staff the display to answer questions on the Army Police Corps or the Army in general.

A graduate of Baldwin Park High School, Sgt. Barber will be an assistant recruiter in the Army's Montclair Recruiting Station during the Fair dates of Friday through Sept. 30 She is representing Ft. Lewis, Washington, where she is stationed.

Sgt. Barber was part of the WAC on the job training program last year in which a small group of women were trained for the military police program. The program is part of the Army's new approach to include women in all positions, with the exception of hard combat. According to Sgt. Barber, the military police is the closest position to hard combat.

A WAC for over two years, Sgt. Barber's new duties as an MP include patrolling, standing gate guard duty at installations and transferring prisoners. For her job she was trained in judo, hand-to-hand combat, law such as search and seizure practices and in assembling weapons. Women MPs must also qualify with a weapon.

Besides assuming the position as one of the Army's first WAC MPs, Sgt. Barber also served as the first female desk sergeant at Ft. Lewis

Sgt. Mary Brown, the WAC counselor for the East San Gabriel and Pomona valleys, will also be part of the Army staff in the Fair display. She will be wearing the current summer uniform of the Women's Army. The new uniforms are being tested across the country.

Five hundred Army women now wearing the three new styles will recommend one of the uniforms to the Army Uniform Board for adoption throughout the Army. The test is aimed at developing an attractive wash and wear summer uniform that is both durable and comfortable.

The three styles to be worn by Sgt. Brown include a three-piece ensemble consisting of a jumper, shirt and jacket. The jumper has a roll collar and modified princess lines with a zip-up closure stopping at the neck seam. The shirt may be worn in short or long sleeve versions, in white or pale green solid colors, and has a front zipper closure with the neckband forming an ascot. The optional jacket is a long-sleeve cardigan with button front and modified princess lines.

The second design is a short sleeve dress with an optional long-sleeve cardigan jacket. The dress has a roll collar, modified princess lines, back zipper closure and shoulder loops. The jacket has a button front and shoulder loops.

A two-piece outfit consisting of a short-sleeve notch collar jacket and an a-line skirt is the third version of the uniform An optional short-sleeve over-blouse may be worn in place of the jacket.

All three uniforms were designed by Koret, a California fashion manufacturer.

FAIR REPRESENTATIVES — Two members of the Women's Army Corps will be part of the staff of the Army's Ninth Division display at the L.A. County Fair, Sept. 14-30. The women are Sgt. Lillian "Cookie" Barber, left, one of the Army's first woman MPs, and Sgt. Mary Brown who will wear new uniform styles for summer under consideration for adoption by the Army.

WACs appear at Fair

FAIR REPRESENTATIVES — Two members of the Women's Army Corps will be part of the staff of the Army's Ninth Division display at the L.A. County Fair, Sept. 14-30. The women are Sgt. Lillian "Cookie" Barber, left, one of the Army's first woman MPs, and Sgt. Mary Brown who will wear new uniform styles for summer under consideration for adoption by the Army.

There will be something of interest to both men and women in the Army's Ninth Division display at the Los Angeles County Fair.

One of the Army's first women military police officers, Sgt. Lillian "Cookie" Barber, will staff the display to answer questions on the Army Police Corps or the Army in general.

A graduate of Baldwin Park High School, Sgt. Barber will be an assistant recruiter in the Army's Montclair Recruiting Station during the Fair dates of Friday through Sept. 30 She is representing Ft. Lewis, Washington, where she is stationed.

Sgt. Barber was part of the WAC on the job training program last year in which a small group of women were trained for the military police program. The program is part of the Army's new approach to include women in all positions, with the exception of hard combat. According to Sgt. Barber, the military police is the closest position to hard combat.

A WAC for over two years, Sgt. Barber's new duties as an MP include patrolling, standing gate guard duty at installations and transferring prisoners. For her job she was trained in judo, hand-to-hand combat, law such as search and seizure practices and in assembling weapons. Women MPs must also qualify with a weapon.

Besides assuming the position as one of the Army's first WAC MPs, Sgt. Barber also served as the first female desk sergeant at Ft. Lewis

Sgt. Mary Brown, the WAC counselor for the East San Gabriel and Pomona valleys, will also be part of the Army staff in the Fair display. She will be wearing the current summer uniform of the Women's Army. The new uniforms are being tested across the country.

Five hundred Army women now wearing the three new styles will recommend one of the uniforms to the Army Uniform Board for adoption throughout the Army. The test is aimed at developing an attractive wash and wear summer uniform that is both durable and comfortable.

The three styles to be worn by Sgt. Brown include a three-piece ensemble consisting of a jumper, shirt and jacket. The jumper has a roll collar and modified princess lines with a zip-up closure stopping at the neck seam. The shirt may be worn in short or long sleeve versions, in white or pale green solid colors, and has a front zipper closure with the neckband forming an ascot. The optional jacket is a long-sleeve cardigan with button front and modified princess lines.

The second design is a short sleeve dress with an optional long-sleeve cardigan jacket. The dress has a roll collar, modified princess lines, back zipper closure and shoulder loops. The jacket has a button front and shoulder loops.

A two-piece outfit consisting of a short-sleeve notch collar jacket and an a-line skirt is the third version of the uniform An optional short-sleeve over-blouse may be worn in place of the jacket.

All three uniforms were designed by Koret, a California fashion manufacturer.

MRS. CLAIRE STRANGE

Manager of bank is woman

At United California Bank's Holt Avenue office it's a not a man, but a woman who holds the top job.

Mrs. Claire Strange, a 14-year veteran with UCB, assumed the office's position as bank manager earlier this year. She held management positions in several branches before assuming the Pomona manager position.

UCB's Holt Avenue office is almost an all-woman operation. Of the 18 staff members, only two are men. They are James Kirsch, customer service manager, and Norman Brown, operations managers.

"A lot of customers think I'm the manager," according to Kirsch whose desk is next to Mrs. Strange's. "They come up to me because they're used to a man being manager."

Along with the 12 women managers, UCB branches have also had four female vice presidents.

Morse, Travis vows said in Temple City

A morning ceremony in the organized Latter-day Saints Church in Temple City united in marriage Miss Bonita Travis and Ladner Morse.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lansing Travis of Claremont was escorted to the altar by her father. She wore an empire gown fashioned with a high lace collar, long lace sleeves and a bodice of lace. Her cathedral-length train was trimmed in matching lace. Her veil was held by a headpiece of fresh flowers, and the bride carried a nosegay of multi-colored flowers.

Miss Janet Engle served as maid of honor and Mrs. Roberta Lahr was the bride's matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Jill Acuna and Sheryl Morse.

Bob Yerrington served as best man for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bonnard E. Morse of Claremont. Ushers were Noel Travis, Randy Morse, Tim McLarty, Steve Lahr and Chris Barr.

A reception in the church fellowship hall followed the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Morse honeymooned in Wrightwood.

Inviting guests

DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: When my widowed mother visits us soon, I would like to give an afternoon champagne party in her honor. How do I word the invitations to indicate the party is to introduce her to my friends?

"On the invitations, do I refer to my mother as Mrs. George Jones, Mrs. Alice Jones or Alice Jones? How do I indicate that she is my mother? Do I refer to the party as a champagne reception, a champagne party or what?

"Would it be preferable to have printed invitations? Those I have seen at some in stationery shops seem somewhat tacky. — Mrs. E. F., Dayton, Ohio."

The simplest way is to use fill-in engraved invitations. At the top you write: To meet Mrs. George Jones. It is not usual to indicate any relationship on an invitation like this, but, of course, it is clear when you introduce guests to your mother Fill in the rest of the invitation.

You may call it a reception, if you wish, or even a champagne party. All good stationers have these fill-in engraved invitations. Be sure to use black ink to match the engraving.

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT: Will you please state in your column what a hostess has a right to expect from a dinner guest and what a dinner guest has a right to expect from a hostess?

"I am thinking of guests who say something like 'How come no antipasto to start with?' or 'Cheese and crackers?' 'I was looking forward to one of your pecan pies.' I have a relative who actually talks like this. I get upset, but I suppose you'll say he doesn't know any better and I should overlook it. — Mrs. E. R., Boston, Mass."

I'm sure he knows better. Some people enjoy upsetting others — especially family members. Somehow it makes them feel important. Just know when he comes that he is going to try to get a rise out of you If you don't overreact, he will probably mend his immature ways.

With a reasonable person who has a habit of teasing, it sometimes helps to say quietly "You know, it bothers me when you tease. I'd appreciate it very much if you wouldn't do it." Teasers should realize that what seems to be amusing and friendly is often disguised hostility.

(Amy Vanderbilt welcomes your letters and strives to answer all those of general interest in her column. Send your questions and comments to Miss Vanderbilt in care of Progress-Bulletin.)

Lots of rum

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Connecticut in the early 19th century imported more West Indian rum in proportion to its size than any state in the Union. Rum was also produced locally, mainly in Hartford. By 1810, the state boasted more than 500 distilleries producing 1,374,000 gallons of spirits annually. The Hartford firm of Ward and Bartholomew manufactured both rum stills and church bells.

Mt. Baldy Club sets family potluck night

A family potluck night for all villagers is planned Saturday by Mt. Baldy Community Club.

The new Village School principal, Madison Lowe, will be present to meet all village families at the Chapman Ranch at 5:30 p.m.

All families with names starting with A to M are requested to bring a casserole and a salad; families with names beginning with N to Z should bring a casserole and dessert. Beverages and rolls will be furnished by the hostesses, Mmes. Robert Walker, Edward Troup, Guy Alexander and Richard Richards.

Each family should bring table service.

There's freedom afoot in heathery suedes that warm up a bared toe and give the sole preferred treatment. The shape: the sandal with a high heel.

To keep frozen foods from drying out use good moisture-resistant containers. If it's clean and durable, it will help preserve food value, color, flavor and texture.

DELINQUENT TAX LIST 1973

Delinquent tax list in and for the County of Los Angeles, State of California

I, HAROLD J. OSTLY, Tax Collector of the County of Los Angeles, State of California, being first duly sworn on oath, say to the best of my knowledge and belief, that the total amount due for taxes, assessments and other charges levied in the year 1972 for the fiscal year 1972-73 were unpaid at 5 o'clock P.M., June 29, 1973 on the real property shown in the attached list.

This property, except that portion previously sold to the State and not redeemed, was by operation of law sold to the State of California on June 29, 1973.

The amount shown in dollars and cents opposite the description of the property is the amount for which it was sold to the State. Such real property may be redeemed by the payment of the amount of sold taxes together with such additional penalties and fees as prescribed by law, or may be redeemed under an installment plan of redemption at the Office of the Tax Collector at 225 North Hill Street, Los Angeles, California 90012.

The "name" which precedes each parcel number refers to the name of the assessee. Where no name appears, the name is the same as that of the last assessee above shown.

Dated this 31st day of August, 1973.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Taxpayers who have disposed of real property since March 1, 1972 may find their names listed for the reason that present owners have failed to pay taxes, and according to the law, the name appearing on the 1972-73 roll must be advertised.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF LOS ANGELES, ss.

I, HAROLD J. OSTLY, Tax Collector of the County of Los Angeles, State of California, being first duly sworn on oath, say to the best of my knowledge and belief, that the taxes not marked "PAID" have not been paid.

HAROLD J. OSTLY,
Tax Collector.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 31st day of August, 1973.

CLARENCE E. CABELL,
County Clerk of Los Angeles County.

By C.N. Olsen, Deputy.

The doctor comments

Orange juice a good source of potassium

sium is? My doctor tells me I am low in it and tells me to eat lots of bananas and drink orange juice. What other food is helpful? What does it do to your body?

Dear Reader — Potassium is one of the basic chemical elements. Everything we know is made up of chemical elements. Such as oxygen, hydrogen, carbon, sodium, potassium, chlorine, zinc, lead, gold, and so on. There are a little over 100 elements.

Our entire body is made of combinations of these chemical elements, so are our household furniture, buildings, automobiles, etc. It is this fact that amuses me when someone tells me that something is harmful because it is "a chemical," for example a given ingredient in a food. Everything we know is "a chemical." This is true whether it's part of a plant, part of an animal, distilled water, spring water, purified water, medicine, poison, "organic food," a food additive or anything else you might want to mention.

In the fluid part of the bodyy, the water in the bloodstream and outside of the cells contains a small amount of sodium which is an element and is the same sodium element that we have in ordinary table salt called sodium chloride. We have about the same amount of sodium salt in our body water as exists in sea water. Inside the cell membrane we have relatively little sodium, and, instead, we have potassium which can occur as a salt called potassium chloride. Both sodium and potassium belong to the same group of chemicals and have a number of similar characteristics.

When the body retains too much sodium we tend to retain excess fluid and this can cause edema, swelling and other problems. Many medicines are used to eliminate sodium through the kidney and, with it, eliminate the accumulation of water. Some of these medicines also eliminate potassium, and then we lose potasium from the cell.

In order to maintain good health, one needs a normal amount of potassium inside the cells. These chemiclas are necessary for normal function of the cells. The heart muscle won't contract normally, or act normally, if you have a deficiency in potassium. If you have too much potassium the electrical activity of the heart may even be stopped. There is a proper balance of almost everything in the body, and this includes sodium and potassium. Potassium, as a salt, is commonly used as a salt substitute for people who

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB —Would you please tell me what potaneed to avoid sodium.

A deficiency of either sodium or potassium can cause a lot of vague symptoms, including excessive fatigue. A large glass of orange juice three times a day will usually provide about the same amount of potassium as prescribed in most medical conditions. Orange juice is probably the best natural source of potassium and contains considerably more potassium per weight than do bananas and most other fruits. In general, however, the fruits are an excellent source of potassium. I usually favor instructing people to drink three large glasses of orange juice a day if they need additional potassium in their inake, unless, of course, there is some medical reason why they can't use orange juice.

Send your questions to Dr. Lamb, in care of The Progress-Bulletin, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. For a copy of Dr. Lamb's booklet on cholesterol, send 50 cents to the same address and ask for "Cholesterol" booklet.

Girl with apartment has problem

By Jean Adams

PERSISTENT: (Q.) I am lucky to have wealthy parents. They provide me with an apartment of my own. I am a girl, 18.

Reg and I went together for a little over a year. I thought we had a perfect relationship, but now I see that I am not really serious about him.

He still comes to my apartment almost every night, even though I have told him I don't want to see him any more. How can I get him to leave me alone? —He Doesn't Listen in Louisiana.

(A.) A girl with an apartment of her own is vulnerable to a thick-skinned boy friend. She should be very careful about too-close relationships.

Tell your freiend not to come to your apartment anymore. Tell him firmly and clearly so that he cannot misunderstand. If he continues, ask your parents to help you. Ask to return home for a while or to move to another apartment with an unlisted telephone.

When you move, do not tell your former boy friend when or where you are moving. This may be retreating, but it is better than getting into big trouble.

UNTOLD: (Q) I am only 12 years old. There is a girl that I like but she doesn't know it. I am pretty sure she dislikes me, but no matter how much I try, I can't forget her. What should I do? — Loser in Florida.

(A.) You are entirely too negative. When you decide you are defeated, you ARE.

Be positive. Be friendly with the girl. Show her you like her, and eventually tell her. It is entirely possible that she will like you as much as you like her.

Panel approves Cal employers' incentive bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill giving California employers a $5 million incentive to hire Vietnam veterans has reached the Senate floor after winning approval of the Finance Committee

The measure (AB276) by Assemblyman John Burton, D-San Francisco, requires the state to reimburse employers for half the wages paid to Vietnam veterans for up to 18 months. It cleared the committee recently on a 7-5 vote, the minimum required.

Eligible for the job program would be veterans who served after Aug. 5, 1964, and who are native Californians or were residents when they joined the military.

Pollution hits at ankle level

KINVER, ENGLAND (UPI) —Pollution struck a new low Thursday—at ankle level.

Villagers said a man and his wife were walking along a potato field when his socks and her stockings began to disintegrate. The potato field had been sprayed with an acid.

Controversy still rages

Top finishers of Soap Box Derby on display

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) —This is the time of year they display the new cars in showrooms all across the country, but what they're doing here is a little different—they're showing old cars.

The display features the top finishers from this year's All-American Soap Box Derby, and with 10 cars on the floor, it's easy to guess which one everybody wants to see.

It's the sleek, dark green, No. 12 racer Jimmy Gronen of Boulder, Colo., drove to victory in the Aug. 18 race, only to be disqualified a day later when officials found the car contained, in clear violation of the rules, a battery-powered electromagnet. The only power the rules allow is gravity, and the Derby unofficially calls itself the "World's Gravity Grand Prix."

Battery works

The battery still works, but the rest of the inside of the car is a mess from where officials cut through to uncover a maze of wires.

Monday, curious onlookers toyed with the wires while Soap Box Derby officials stood nearby and explained what they were doing to make sure the race wasn't tainted by cheating again.

"I think the rules need to be clarified," said Paul Livick, general manager of the Derby. "And I've got a file full of suggestions."

Livick was upset because so much attention has been focused on the first disqualification in the Derby's 40-year history and "no one has talked about the good points.

"I feel the press has been unduly critical," he said. "This is the first time something like this has happened, and it's only natural people are interested, but I think the program has too much merit to it.

"We're going ahead now with plans for the 1974 race," he added. "We feel there's too many worthwhile benefits to it for something like this to kill it."

Rule violated

The man who won the race its very first year, in 1934, Robert Turner of Anderson, Ind., said the other day that one of the Derby's most basic rules—that the kids have to build their own racers—has been violated since the start.

"You can't name me a year when they were 100 per cent boy-built," Turner claimed. "I argued for years that they should throw out this buy-built-rule. It should be called home-built. It's a great family project. Why make a liar out of everybody right off the start?"

Tom Jenkins, a pit crew worker this year, charged that professionally-built cars were common, and said there were 67 violations of rules this year.

Livick disputed the charges, but admitted a lot of violations were found in the routine pre-race inspection this year, and action was taken.

"There was a considerable number (of violations), and we had all kinds of complaints about the enforcement of the rules," Livick said. "Some of them even accused us of harassment."

Livick conceded it's almost impossible for officials here to determine if the racers are, in fact, built by the kids themselves and the frames are within the limit of $40 for materials.

"We have to rely on the local committees ... and on human nature," he said.

Pet chameleon must have bowl of water

DEAR DR. MILLER: In the time I have had Camelot, my chameleon, I have never known her to drink a drop of water from her bowl. Does this mean she doesn't need water? Am I just wasting my time providing her with water at all? — T. D.

Dear T. D.: Hopefully, at least a portion of Camelot's environment, includes a reasonable number of large, clean, green leaves. If so, they will provide he ideal water source as far as she is concerned. She will be much more likely to lap water from the leaves than from the bowl. And she should. She has to have water to survive. Dehydration is a common cause of death among pet chameleons.

Awn warning

Early autumn is a time of dry fields loaded with grass awns (foxtails). These potentially deadly, sharp-pointed barbs are the bane of sporting and other dogs. During open-mouth breathing a dog may inhale them into his windpipe where they may penetrate, causing neck abscesses. They can also migrate on into lungs causing other problems. The awns most often lodge in the cheeks and the back of the mouth where they later bore in causing abscesses in gums or elsewhere in the mouth. Recently we mentioned their dire effects in other parts of the body (nose, eyes, ears, sheathe, rectum, vagina, between the toes and, in some heavy-coated dogs, anywhere on the body where continued movement and friction allow the sharp points to penetrate the skin). Any time the dog runs or plays in an area where these awns are encountered, inspection is indicated. When checked immediately, the foxtail may be seen just entering the ear canal or some other parts of the body. Later inspection would only reveal those which are still at the surface or lodged in an easily visible area. The mouth certainly should be inspected. Many awns present in the checks below the gum line can be wiped out with a piece of rough toweling. An inspection of the entire dog can be accomplished in a minute or two. Treatment of the damage they do may take weeks and, occasionally, they pentrate some vital parts of the body to do deadly damage before even being discovered.

Nixon urges Congress act on antibusing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon, again endorsing the right of a child to attend the school nearest his home, urged Congress Monday to approve antibusing legislation

"I am opposed to compulsory busing for the purpose of achieving racial balance in our schools," said the President in his second state of the union message.

"I continue to believe in the neighborhood school —in the right of children to attend school near their homes with friends who live near them."

Under Nixon's leadership, the administration has opposed court-ordered busing as a means of achieving a racial balance in public schools, although it has stopped short of endorsing unsuccessful moves in Congress to approve a constitutional amendment banning it.

In his message to lawmakers Monday, Nixon said Congress should pass antibusing legislation to "aid rather than challenge the courts."

"I continue to believe that busing is an unsatisfactory remedy for the inequities and inequalities of educational opportunity," the President said.

"...We should place effective and reasonable curbs on busing in a way which would aid rather than challenge the courts," he said. "...I will continue to work with the Congress in an effort to enact legislation which will end involuntary busing for the purpose of racial balance and concentrate our effort on true opportunity in education."

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Johnny Bench, who has won all sorts of awards as a star catcher, was originally drafted by the Reds as a first baseman. Bench also played in the outfield as an amateur.
